seedless apples. There are 10,000 budded trees, from three to five feet high, and 65,000 trees one or two and a half feet high. They represent the assets of the Michigan Spencer Seedless Apple Co., which became involved in financial difficulties some time ago. The concern was organized by L. B. Hamilton about three years ago, following the experiments of the western horticulturist named Speneer. At that time companies were organized in various states. The Toledo concern purchased land in Perrysburg and West Toledo and opened large nurseries.

of information as to the business in a form he will remember:

Last year we organized the Joliet Nurseries, bought the belongings of the Shepherd Floral Co., and on the Reed farm, where Midland avenue intersects the Troy road, we have obtained a good start in our line. The stockholders are Colonel Bennett, treasurer of the company; George Barr, J. H. Ferriss, presidents; C. T. Shepherd, Sr., manager, and C. T. Shepherd, Jr., secretary.

The Shepherds are experienced growers and landscape gardeners; it has been their life-long business. We have two greenhouses for propagating purposes, and this spring we are in the market with just about anything and everything that will be needed for ornamental trees, shrubbery, vines and perennials.

As will be noticed by the names, the proprietors are largely interested in a beautiful Joliet, and will do their best to make the town handsome and tasty, and do the most possible to make Joliet buyers happy.

The catalogue is now in the hands of the printer, and within a few days it will be ready for distribution. In the meantime, if anything is desired in our line, use the telephone, both lines. All the business will be transacted at the nurseries, as Mr. Ferriss is so busy running for president of the United States, he cannot do much more than to merely look at things and smile when he is pleased. Both Mr. Barr and Colonel Bennett are busy with their other lines of business, for, remember, these are bankers and lawyers.

We shall make a specialty of perennials, because these require the least trouble, and make the longest and best show of bloom. Our land is just about the finest in the United States, we have plenty of it, and the plants will be in good order—thrifty and hearty.

Should you need advice in planting, or need a plan, or somebody to carry it out, call us up by telephone. We take jobs of fixing up by the day, job, or year, any old plan to make the wheels go round.

PLANTS FOR CARPET BEDDING.

This spring we wish to make on a small plot of ground the letters D. A. R., of bedding plants, and would value any information concerning what plants would be best suited for the purpose, and also as to the care of same after planting, so the plants will not grow too tall and thus make the letters confusing. We would like to obtain the shades, as near as possible, of red, white and blue, as are seen in the flag. The letters are to be from eighteen inches to twenty-four inches high, the D red, A white, and R blue. Of whatever plants are suitable, would it be seasonable, so to speak, to purchase now rooted cuttings or plants more advanced? We would plant the first part of June. Would you kindly tell us the best plan? A. E. R.

If blue lobelia will succeed well with you, it would be the finest blue plant for making lettering. The variety Emperor William is an especially good one. Plants raised from cuttings are preferable, as seedlings are usually sprawly in habit. Occasionally, in hot, moist weather, when there is little sunshine, these lobelias will rot to some extent. This is their only drawback. Little Blue Star ageratum, of a mauve color, grows only four inches high and, being a persistent bloomer, is well adapted for lettering.

One of the alternantheras, such as paronychioides magnifica, or A. versicolor, would be suitable for red lettering. These will require some clipping or topping to keep them in shape. If flowering plants are preferred, you can use dwarf Vernon begonias. These attain a height of six to eight inches and can be depended upon to flower all summer.

The leaves take on a somewhat bronze tint in full sunshine.

Double alyssum is considerably used as a white carpet bedder, but while it flowers well, it cannot be depended upon so well as one of the foliage plants. Of these latter, Santolina maritima, of a silvery white color, is probably the best of its color. It will require some pinching, like the alternanthera.

If you obtain rooted cuttings now of any of the foregoing plants and grow along in either small pots or flats, you will have nice stock for bedding-out time early in June. The alternanthera will require more heat than the other plants. Place it in a hotbed at the end of April and it will make better growth than in the greenhouse. C. W.

PREVENTION OF DAMPING OFF.

Will you please publish something concerning the damping off of young plant seedlings? I have tried mixing various quantities of sand with the soil and have also tried planting in clear, sharp sand alone. I have watered sparingly and stirred the soil often, but without good results. The temperature has been 60 to 70 degrees. Please tell something about the scientific principles involved in killing this fungus, and about the best methods of protecting young seedlings. C. H. K.

Damping off is a trouble common to the propagating bench and to the seed bed. It is frequently the result of the action of one or the other of two fungi, but as the results are the same it is difficult to distinguish the two without the aid of a microscope. When the trouble breaks out, all healthy plants should be immediately transferred to sterilized soil or to fresh soil from a compost which has been frozen since it was last used in greenhouse work. The sand in the cutting benches should either be sterilized or be fresh crushed rock. The benches where the trouble has occurred should be emptied and whitewashed with a wash containing a pound of copper sulphate for each ten gallons of white-wash, the copper sulphate solution being added to the whitewash after the crystals have all dissolved. Sprinkling hot sand over the surface of the seed bed is sometimes of value, but the only sure way is to use clean seed in sterilized soil. L. C. C.

CULTURE OF ISMENE.

I bought some bulbs of ismene. I potted them five or six weeks ago and they are not sprouting yet. Please tell me how to propagate them. T. P.

T. P. does not give the variety of ismene which he is growing. Some sorts do well planted out in the garden in summer, while others succeed better kept in pots in a warm greenhouse. The

NEW ROSE

MRS. JARDINE

Every Florist who Plants a Rose for Winter Forcing wants at least Six Qualities

A FREE, STRONG GROWTH, WITH GOOD FOLIAGE. A VARIETY THAT CAN BE EASILY GROWN. LARGE FLOWERS ON LONG STEMS. DELICIOUS FRAGRANCE. DISTINCT, PLEASING COLOR THAT WILL SELL AT SIGHT. A ROSE THAT WILL HOLD ITS COLOR IN THE DULL DAYS OF DECEMBER AND JANUARY.

MRS. JARDINE has all these characteristics, and, in addition, is of so perfect a form that it can be used either in the bud or half expanded flower. The color is a bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink, and, even in January, when Bridesmaids and Killarney lose their color, Mrs. Jardine is as bright as in October or March.

We extend a cordial invitation to everyone interested in this New Rose to visit our Nurseries and see it growing.

MRS. JARDINE has been awarded Two Silver Medals, numerous Certificates, and successfully stood the best test which any novelty can possibly have in passing unanimously, in December, the Award Committee of the New York Florists' Club after an exhaustive examination of the growing plants, with a score of 92 points.

Strong Plants on own roots, from 2½-inch pots, $6.00 per doz.; $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000; 5000 for $1125.00; 10,000 for $2125.00.

and are rested during the summer months, being started up again in September. Varieties which bloom in spring or summer can be grown cooler. These include the well-known calathina, also Macleana, littoralis and several other sorts. These must be rested during winter and started up in a warm house in early spring.

In the southern states several of the hymenocallis are hardy, blooming in spring. In the north they may also be flowered in the open if given a well drained piece of ground, sheltered from strong winds. The bulbs in winter should be stored in dry sand, in a room where they will be clear of freezing. For pot culture a compost of rough turf, cow manure and sharp sand is suitable, one which water will pass through readily. Propagation is by removing the offsets from the large bulbs. C. W.

BROWN FOLIAGE ON LILIES.

Can you tell me what causes the tips of the leaves of our Easter lilies to turn brown, and what to do to check it? Some of the best plants are so affected. S. F. C.

Apart from disease, which causes leaves to turn brown at the end as yours have done, there are two other principal causes, overfeeding and too heavy fumigation. We think that as your plants have apparently been healthy, one cause or the other may be responsible. Without knowing something further of the treatment which the plants have received, we should say either that too much smoke or too much food was accountable for the browning of the ends of the leaves. C. W.

SANDUSKY, O.—Matern & Wheeler already have an active business, with an unexpectedly good run on trees, shrubs, plants and bulbs.

DENVER.

The Market.

The market last week was in a deplorable condition, everyone having flowers to burn, as it were. The quantity of flowers coming in, especially roses and carnations, has never been equaled at this time of the year and prices were below those of any previous March, one of the growers selling carnations as low as $7.50 per thousand. Some retailers sold them for 25 cents per dozen, but reported they did not sell any more in number than if they had asked 50 and 75 cents per dozen. White roses and carnations moved fairly well for dyeing purposes for St. Patrick's day, with a little higher price than could be obtained for colored stock.

American Beauties are coming heavily and the long-stemmed stock is of excellent grade, while the short-stemmed has improved little. The demand for Brides has been fairly good on account of the funeral work. Maid and Chatenay are exceptionally fine for this time of the year and can be had in any quantity, prices of all varieties being at rock bottom.

Easter lilies are just coming in and as yet are not abundant, but the outlook is good for a large supply. Violets are good and selling at a low figure in some places, but the selects still maintain their price and quality, while singles are beginning to lessen in quantity and will soon be gone. All kinds of bulbous stock is plentiful and selling well, prices not being exorbitant.

Various Notes.

J. A. Valentine is in Chicago for the rose show.

The bowling league finished its schedule Monday evening. Winners of prizes will be announced later.

The Denver Floral Co. is the name of a new store which opened on Sixteenth street last week. E. S. K.

COHOES, N. Y.—Carpenter & Co. say that at the rate they are selling their metallic tie for use in staking bulbous stock, the cordage trust must feel the effect in decreased sales of twine. At any rate, it is a fact that prices are lower on twine, for the first time in two or three years.

CLEVELAND, O.—Attorney J. A. Mathews has filed an application in the probate court to be appointed administrator of the estate of J. M. Gasser. He estimates the value of the estate to be $250,000. Mathews says that Mr. Gasser in December, 1907, tried to make a will, but was of unsound mind and remained so until his death.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Amos F. Balfoort, though one of the youngest florists in the city, is thoroughly experienced, having been connected with the trade since early boyhood, and he has an increasing share of patronage. Besides his three greenhouses, he has a store, which is located at 121 Northern boulevard.

CARNATION CUTTINGS

We are in unusually good position to supply exceptionally well-rooted, healthy stock. We have such a large quantity of flowering plants that we propagate only from heel cuttings from flowering shoots. Our cuttings are rooted in light, sunny, airy houses, and we are sure will satisfy the most critical buyer.

A prominent carnation grower writes: "You seem to be the only firm in the business that knows how to pack stock and have it reach the buyer in good condition, and I have always found your cuttings cheaper than the same varieties from others at much lower figures."

While our prices may not always be the cheapest, we certainly can give, quality considered, as good value as, if not better than, is obtainable anywhere.

We offer also BEACON and RED CHIEF, from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. From soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000. Also VICTORY, MELODY, WHITE PERFECTION, from sand, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. From soil, $6.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000. VARIEGATED LAWSON, WHITE LAWSON and RED LAWSON, from sand, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000. From soil, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. We can also supply WINONA and AFTERGLOW, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Buyers will find transplanted stock offered from soil well worth the difference in price.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Trade has improved a little in the last week. There is a good supply of flowers on hand. Carnations of good quality bring 50 cents per dozen retail. One retailer advertised 8,000 of these flowers last Saturday at 20 cents per dozen retail. Sweet peas bring $1 per hundred retail. They are of fine quality. Violets are a drug on the market. They are selling as low as 50 cents per hundred retail. From present indications there will not be an overabundant supply of these flowers for Easter. Roses retail at $1.50 per hundred. Bulbous stock is plentiful. Funeral work has been heavy during the last week.

Various Notes.

S. S. Peckham is cutting a large crop of carnations. He reports a big demand for cuttings of White Perfection. His Winsor is looking fine.

E. Y. Pierce is picking some nice Boston Market carnations.

A. B. Hathaway is strong on bulb stock, as is also R. E. Nofftz.

Peter Murray is sending in nice Winsor carnations to E. H. Chamberlain. W. L.

ANTHERICUM.

Would you please tell me the best way to start anthericum seed? L. P. V.

Anthericum seed is of slow germination. The best method is to sow the seed immediately after it is ripe in either a coldframe or in flats in a cold greenhouse. Do not become nervous about the seed not germinating. It will take several months to show. Propagation by stolons is the best plan for increasing stock. C. W.

OWENSBORO, KY.—The Nanz Floral Co. held its formal opening, in its new store at the corner of Main and Allen streets, March 14. The new place has been remodeled and renovated, and is much better adapted to the business than the one formerly occupied. Handsome display windows have been put in on both the Main street and Allen street sides.

ST. PAUL.

State of Trade.

Favorable weather, abundant stock and numerous shoppers combined to make business good during the first two weeks of the Lenten season. There has been a heavy demand for funeral flowers, which has kept down the poorer grades to normal proportions. There is no scarcity in any line. The demand for green carnations created quite a demand for white, but shamrocks sold poorly and quite a few hundred plants will be carried over till next year.

Various Notes.

J. T. Withers, of Jersey City, has been giving a series of interesting and instructive talks on tree planting in our sister city. He also gave an illustrated talk at the last club meeting.

The club met at Holm & Olson's store, Tuesday evening, March 17. Mr. Swanson, of the state fair committee, read an interesting report. Jerry Jorgenson, superintendent of the Donaldson greenhouses, Minneapolis, exhibited some fancy Bride and Bridesmaid roses. James Souden read an interesting article on the retailer's Easter stock and Mr. Jorgenson an able paper on the wholesaler's stock, with particular reference to the supply and prices in the Twin Cities.

Theodore Wirth has gone east to attend a meeting of the directors of the S. A. F., carrying with him several applications for life membership in the society.

Leeb & Co. is the firm name of the latest florists' concern in the city. It is located on Minnesota street, near Fifth, and sells fruits and flowers. The members of the firm were formerly employed by E. F. Lemke.

Holm & Olson are now a stock company under the style of Holm & Olson, Incorporated. The authorized capital is $75,000, of which $50,000 is common and $25,000 guaranteed preferred stock. The incorporators are Elof P. Holm, Olof J. Olson and S. D. Dysinger, all of St. Paul. X. Y. Z.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The trade is working its way through Lent in pretty good shape. All have enough to do to keep them from getting the blues.

Stock is still plentiful, but everything cleaned up nicely last week excepting Beauties and violets. Prices, however, were low and no doubt the growers will feel they are getting very little for some of the fine stock they are sending into the market, but the commission men are thankful it is no worse.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club has another plant show listed for the next meeting, which will be held at the store room of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. are getting some fine roses from their own plant at Canonsburg.

The Pittsburgh Florists' Exchange reports plenty of good stock of all kinds and business showing some improvement over the first part of the month.

Mrs. E. A. Williams was compelled to remove everything from the basement of her store twice this month on account of floods.

THE BOSTON VIOLET

The people today are looking for new Violets just as much as they are for new roses or carnations. THE BOSTON VIOLET for the past two years has been placed before the most skeptical buyers in America, and they prefer it to any other.

THERE'S A REASON. The Boston Violet is the largest, the most fragrant; it has a very pleasing color and it is a great keeper. THE BOSTON VIOLET is a variety that is easily grown, it is the strongest grower and is in crop from September to May.

THE BOSTON VIOLET was awarded a First-Class Certificate of Merit by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and a Report of Superior Merit by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, of Boston.

Distribution will commence in April. Order now.

Prices, $2.00 per dozen; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

State of Business.

Funeral work again helped keep up the good trade among local florists last week. The arrival of spring also brought with it a good demand for spring flowers. Parties have been numerous and, with good weather, the trade has prospered generally.

Various Notes.

The week marked the passing of one downtown store, for the Wisner Floral Co. abandoned its store in the Ohio building, on Madison avenue. Mr. Wisner will devote his entire time to his green-houses on Cherry street.

Friends of Frank J. Schoen are offering their congratulations. It's a boy and arrived last week at the Schoen residence.

E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, was in town March 23.

Joseph Heintz, who has been visiting at the home of Harry Heintz, returned to his home at Jackson, Ill., last week.

The child of Howard Anderson, of the Schoen Floral Co., has been ill.

NEWPORT, R. I.

David McIntosh, gardener on the C. M. Bell estate, has taken charge of the estate of Mrs. C. M. Bell at Tuxedo Park, N. Y., and has moved there.

Robert Hunnick, gardener for W. B. Leeds and for eighteen years previously gardener for F. W. Vanderbilt, at Newport, has resigned his position with Mr. Leeds. Mr. and Mrs. Hunnick intend spending a part of the coming summer in England.

Wm. Anderson will leave the employ of Mrs. T. J. Emery April 1. D. M.

I AM much pleased with the REVIEW and like it the best of any paper for the trade. — J. M. HAZLEWOOD, Vancouver, B. C.

It is putting it mildly to say the REVIEW is the most helpful and most instructive paper I have ever read. When one copy is read I can hardly wait for another. — JOHN SPENCER, Decatur, Tex.

HARDY ASTER GRANDIFLORUS. This is not only the largest flowered but one of the latest flowering of the Michaelmas Daisies; its deep violet blue flowers are the last thing to bloom in our perennial grounds. $2.00 per dozen; $15.00 per 100.

CAMPANULA PERSICIFOLIA GIGANTEA MOERHEIMI. The most beautiful of the Peach-leaved Campanulas, producing 3 feet high stems of pure white, double, Camellia-like flowers 2 to 2½ inches in diameter; a fine cut flower. $1.25 per dozen; $8.00 per 100.

BURBANK'S SHASTA DAISY ALASKA. Undoubtedly the best not only of the Burbank varieties, but also superior to any of the foreign varieties, flowers 4 to 5 inches in diameter and of a pure glistening white. $1.50 per dozen; $10.00 per 100.

HELENIUM RIVERTON GEM. A new variety that originated on our trial grounds two years ago. Of strong growth, 2½ to 3 feet high. Covered from the middle of August to the end of October with brilliant flowers, which on opening are old gold suffused with bright terra cotta, changing as they mature to a wallflower-red. $1.50 per dozen; $10.00 per 100.

HELENIUM RIVERTON BEAUTY. Another new variety which originated with us, quite distinct in color, which is lemon-yellow with a large disc of purplish-black, the two colors forming a striking combination. Of strong growth, 3 to 4 feet high and blooming from early in August until October. 30 cts. each; $3.00 per dozen.

JAPANESE IRIS. An unsurpassed collection of twenty distinct varieties, $1.50 per dozen; $10.00 per 100. Set of 20 varieties for $2.00.

LUPINUS POLYPHYLLUS MOERHEIMI. No new perennial in our trial grounds pleased us as much as did this new Lupine during the past season. It forms symmetrical bushes three feet high, with spikes of flowers a foot long, a beautiful combination of light and dark pink. 60 cts. each; $6.00 per dozen.

HARDY PERENNIAL PHLOX. We are headquarters for these. We have over 200,000 one-year-old field grown plants now in stock in all the leading varieties. All the standard sorts, 75 cts. per dozen; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

RUDBECKIA RAYS OF GOLD. An improved, or rather, a refined form of the popular Golden Glow, having narrower petals and forming a full double flower. $1.50 per dozen; $10.00 per 100.

STOKESIA CYANEA ALBA. Identical in every way with the popular blue Stokesia except in color, which is white; very desirable. $1.50 per dozen; $10.00 per 100.

TRITOMA PFITZERI. We have a large stock this season of this most popular of the Tritomas. $1.00 per dozen; $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

NEW ORLEANS.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, held March 19, was largely attended, and as the main business was to hear the report of the committee of arrangement for the next fall flower show, the good attendance is an indication that a close interest is taken by the members in the subject and that success is sure to follow. A few changes were made in the prize list. One of the most important was a new class for exhibitors not members of the society, outside of the state of Louisiana, who will be admitted under a small fee as exhibitors of cut chrysanthemums, not less than twelve varieties, three flowers of a kind.

The sub-committee appointed to look for a location was authorized to draw from the treasury a sufficient amount to make a deposit when securing the place, and the date was fixed as November 12 to 15.

Longiflorum and lilies of the valley in fine condition were offered for inspection by R. Eichling, from U. J. Virgin's establishment.

A. Alost gave the announcement to the society that the condition of his grandson, Harry, Jr., was improving fairly well and that at the next meeting the date to pay him a visit will be fixed.

Various Notes.

J. St. Mard was happy receiving congratulations upon the arrival of his first boy at his home.

GRAND RAPIDS.

As has already been intimated in the REVIEW, the Stover Floral Co., of Grandville, has joined forces with Frank M. Strong, S. J. Perry, E. E. Taylor and Frank J. Cook, all vegetable growers, and will carry on business as the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co., with headquarters here. The company will be incorporated and will take possession of all five establishments April 1, going at once into active business. The following officers have been elected: President, F. M. Strong; vice-president, E. E. Taylor; secretary and treasurer, Frank J. Cook; general manager, S. J. Perry.

N. B. Stover, who has been doing business under the name of the Stover Floral Co. for the last twenty-one years, will have control of the florists' department, which will be enlarged and improved in every way and will conduct a general florists' business. Additional houses, containing 120,000 feet of glass, will be built at once and planted to cucumbers; 3,000 boxes of glass will be required for this new plant, which will make the total extent of glass 250,000 feet.

It is the intention of the company to continue the plant business which has been carried on by the Stover Floral Co. A cut flower department will be built as soon as possible. Only first-class houses will be erected, so as to enable the firm to grow only first-class stock.

I CONSIDER the REVIEW the best trade paper published, of its class. It is brimful of good things every week—bright, breezy, bountiful, better than the best. Long may it prosper.—LEWIS R. ALLEN, Murphysboro, Ill.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

Have lilies to burn, the best in the land, the best in the land, the best in the land;
Azaleas in finest colors, to beat the band, to beat the band, to beat the band.

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see,
Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.
Why! Ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show
Of all the best that florists need found in one place to grow.
The lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter day,
Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.
The Araucarias matchless are, so are the ferns all green,
With bulbs, and plumed Spiraea, the best you've ever seen.
And Aschmann gives a challenge, let every florist hear,
For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear.
If you wish to gather dollars like violets in the spring,
Then send your largest order, his plants the cash will bring.

No dull times at Aschmann's. Come and see our activity and the big rush in shipping Azalea Indica, etc. Why not? Remember our Azaleas are of first-class, No. 1 stock.

Azalea Indica. We make a specialty in importing every year an immense stock of this so well-favored Easter plant. Only special American, well-tested varieties are imported, grown under contract for us by an azalea specialist of Ghent, Belgium. If you need Azalea Plants, don't look in vain around the country for bargains, but come or write direct to us. We will be able to supply, with the best obtainable in the American market at moderate prices, plants covered with buds, in good, healthy condition, right for Easter, planted in October and November, in 6 to 7-in. pots.

Please take notice. In justice to our customers we do not sell azaleas in the fall, disposing of the best and leaving the residue for Easter, but we carry them along, thus having for our customers the finest azaleas for Easter. Next, we take great care to select only the ones with plenty of buds. Mme. Vander Cruyssen (have 2500 of them) is the best well-known pink variety, so that nothing further need be said about it. Plants are covered with buds and are round as an apple. Simon Mardner (a pink), Vervaekeana (a variegated rose), Bernard Andre Alba (a white), no smaller sizes than $1.00 and up; Niobe (a white), Deutsche Perle (a white), Empress of India (variegated), Prof. Wolters and about six more fine varieties, 60c to 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each. Apello, beautiful red, 60c and 75c.

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week or earlier if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come or mail your order direct to headquarters. Our reputation over the entire country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in growing Easter stock for the wholesale market for the fifteen years past ought to be sufficient guarantee as to the truth of what we say and advertise. Be wise. Never mind about the nonsense hard time talk. Look for a big Easter trade, which is sure to come. Book your order in time, while we have stock to spare and plenty of it. All our houses are full to their utmost capacity with the choicest plants, in bud and bloom, just right for Easter or earlier if wanted.

We print no catalogue. This is our lowest cash price for the busy season.
No references can be investigated. Cash with order, please.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta and Glaucia, a perfect marvel and wonder of nature. We are one of the heaviest importers and cultivators of this beautiful decorative plant, and plants are about the same in width as in height. Robusta Compacta, 7-in. pots, specimen plants, 6 years old, 5 tiers, 25 to 30 inches high, $2.00 to $3.00 each.

Excelsa Glaucia, specimens, 7-in. pots, 30 to 40 inches high, 4, 5, 6 tiers, 6 years old; the fine bluish-green color of this variety gives it the most striking appearance; sells at sight; $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 20 to 25 inches high, 4, 5, 6 tiers, 75c to $1.00 each; 5 1/2-in. pots, 8 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 7, 8, 10 to 14 inches high, 50c each.

Choice Nephrolepis, pot-grown. Boston Ferns, 8-in., as big as a bushel basket or wash tub, $1.25 to $1.50; 7-in., $1.00; 6-in., 50c; 5 to 5 1/2-in., 35c to 40c. Whitmani, 4-in. pots, 25c. Scottii, 7-in., $1.00 to $1.25; 6-in., 50c; 5 1/2-in., 40c. N. Amerpohlii, the new lace fern, 5 1/2 in. pots, 50c to 60c. Pierstoni, 5, 5 1/2 and 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c.

Begonia New Improved Erfordii, always in bloom, summer and winter; 4-in. pots, very strong, $2.00 per doz.; 5 1/4-in., in bloom and bud, 25c; $3.00 per doz.

Primula Obconica, 5 1/4-in. pots, in bloom, $2.00 to $2.50 per doz.

Ferns for dishes, 3-in. pots, 7c.

Have some white Azaleas Deutsche Perle and Vervaekeana now in bloom if wanted, at 60c, 75c and $1.00 each.

Hyacinths, raised from first-class bulbs of our own importation. These hyacinths cannot be compared with ordinary stuff raised from cheap bulbs floating the market. King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maître (lavender blue), Gertrude (pink), and La Grandisse (white), 4-in. pots, $12.00 per 100.

Touresol Tulips, red or yellow variegated. This is the best selling double tulip in the market. Will stay in bloom in good condition ten days. Three bulbs in one 4-in. pot, $1.50 dozen pots or $12.00 per 100 pots.

Double Von Sion Narcissus, the best yellow narcissus in the market, sells at sight, three double-nosed bulbs planted in one 5-in., 5 1/2-in. to 6-in. pots. Price, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 per dozen pots.

Ipomoea Noctiflora. Best pure white moon-vine in market, very fragrant and as big as a saucer. On this variety we have a world-wide reputation as growers and shippers for the last twenty years. Price, 2 1/2-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora, 5-in., 20c; 6-in., $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per doz. Right for Easter.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3-in., 15c.

Begonia Flambeau, sells at sight, 4-in. pots 20c; 5 1/2-in. pots, 25c.

Kentia Belmoreana and Forsteriana, 4-in. pots, 18 to 20 inches high, 35c; 5 1/2 to 6-in. pots European stock, 20 to 25 inches high, 75c; 5 to 5 1/2 in. pots, bushy plants, 50c, 60c.

Dracaena Bruanti, from Belgium, 6-in., 22 to 25 inches high, full of leaves from bottom to top, 40c each.

Ficus Elastica or Rubber Plant, home grown and Belgium stock, 5, 5 1/2, 6, 7-in. pots, 20, 25, 30, 35 and 40 inches high, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c each.

Cyclamen, 4-in. pots, in bud and bloom, 20c.

Latania Borbonica, 5-in. pots, 30c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, already forced, in buds, just right for Easter, 6 to 7-in. pots, 35c, 40c, 60c, 75c, $1.00 each.

Easter Lilies. Japan Multiflorum, of our own importation, raised from special 10-in. bulbs, 6-in. pots, right for Easter. This year I can say we have the finest lot, 15 to 40 inches in height, free of disease, we have had for years past. The large demand for lilies exceeds the supply every year; we, therefore, ask that you order early. Price, plants with five buds and upwards, 10 cents per bud; plants with under five buds, 12 cents per bud. We can satisfy all wants if ordered soon.

Owing to the small profit in the growing of Easter lilies, an order for a reasonable amount of other stock should accompany all orders for lilies.

Spiraea Gladstone, 6 to 7-in. pots, large stuff, 50c to 75c each.

Please mention if in or out of pots. All goods must travel at owner's risk.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Loss by Hail.

A severe hail storm passed over the southern part of this city March 18 about 6 p. m., causing great loss in glass and stock to all the florists and gardeners in that section. Henry Rieman lost about 900 large lights. Herman Schilling had 1,645 mixed sizes knocked out. F. A. Conway suffered to the extent of about half his glass and Fred Hukriede about the same. John Heidenrick's loss is $800 to $1,000, a new house erected during the past summer being totally de-lighted. This place looked as if it was right in the center of the storm. John Elsner suffered with the others and will be kept busy glazing for some time. A. Lange, at the south side cemeteries, estimates his loss at $300. The greenhouses owned by the city in Garfield park were also heavy losers. The Smith & Young Co. was on the extreme eastern edge of the storm and its loss is slight. As in all cases of this kind, the damage to stock is great and hard to estimate. Nearly all hotbed sash is a complete loss; the sash, lying so flat, were easily demolished. This was the most severe storm that has ever visited Indianapolis and may it long be the last. All the greenhouse size glass was cleaned up early next day and many had to wait till more could be obtained from the factories.

Various Notes.

George Wiegand arrived home March 16 after a six weeks' trip through the west. He reports a splendid time and everything lovely on the Pacific slope, but, like all Hoosiers, he says Indiana is good enough for him.

John Hartje has purchased ten acres of land four miles south of the city and expects to erect houses on it this season.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. will enlarge its Cumberland plant this year by the addition of another large house.

Frank Harritt has had great success with a sugar camp he opened in his maple grove at Willowmere. He made nearly 100 gallons of fine syrup.

The city has engaged Mr. Kessler, of Kansas City, as superintendent of parks. He will plan the future park and boulevard system for the city. A local man will have charge of the work under him.

The Tomlinson market looks like a spring show these days, large quantities of all kinds of seasonable flowers and plants being offered at moderate prices.

All the florists are preparing for a heavy spring trade and their bedding stock is in fine shape. S.

ROCK ISLAND.

The Tri-City Florists' Association turned out in numbers March 19, the occasion being the second annual banquet of the association, which was held at the Rock Island Turner hall. All the florists of the three cities were present, with one exception, and that was on account of sickness. The company was a merry one, and there were short talks on flower culture by each member. H. Klehm, of Arlington Heights, Ill., was the out-of-town guest, and he gave some of his experiences in the flower business. The members of the Rock Island Turners' singing section entertained the florists with some good musical numbers, and Theo. Ewoldt, of Davenport, also contributed several vocal solos. The toastmaster of the evening was William Knees, president of the Tri-City Florists' Association.

ASTER SINENSIS.

Aster Sinensis is one of the most, if not the most, pleasing of the recently introduced types of annual asters, says a writer in an English gardening magazine. "Its single flowers, which are white, blue, and other colors, are much more useful for decorative purposes in a cut state than the other types, the effect produced in the garden being very pleasing. Anyone who has not yet grown the single forms of this aster should not fail to do so. It is well to plant in rich soil, and give plenty of room. In 1905 on one plant I counted eighty-eight flowers and buds, besides a large number of lateral buds that were developing. The specimen was three feet wide, thirty-three inches high, and continued in bloom a very long time—in fact, until frost cut it down."

I LIKE the REVIEW very much. It seems to hit the nail on the head every time.—S. D. GRIFFITH, New Woodstock, N. Y.

State of Trade.

This has been a quiet week, with plenty of stock of all kinds, except orchids. Some exceptionally fine roses are coming in. The Richmond and Killarney look like show blooms. The Gudes are cutting hundreds of Beauties of fine color and long, heavy stems. J. J. Harty & Co. report a fine week's business.

The streets are lined with fakers selling violets at 10 cents a bunch, or three for a quarter; that means 150 violets for 25 cents.

St. Patrick's day was better than last year. The windows all displayed shamrock, some in small baskets, green pipes filled with them, and some planted in Irish potatoes. The Killarney roses were displayed as the real Irish rose and a great many were sold. Green carnations were seen everywhere. There was great demand for them.

Various Notes.

Mary E. Shaffer, mother of George C. Shaffer, died March 16, after a lingering illness. The family has the sincere sympathy of the florists.

J. M. Hammer & Sons have installed a new six horse-power gasoline engine for pumping water and mixing clay for their pottery.

The installation of officers and the banquet of the club will be held at Freund's parlors on Tenth street, April 7. President-elect Kramer wants every member of the club to be present and help to "whoop her up." He has a scheme to boost the membership and wants the boys to help him.

L. T. Darnell, manager of the J. M. Gasser Co., stopped on his way home from North Carolina, where he was called by the death of his father. While there he was notified of the death of his partner, Mr. Gasser. O. O.

HELENA, MONT.—The State Nursery Co. recently issued a catalogue of seeds, plants, hardy stock and cut flower work and reports business steadily increasing in each department.

BEATRICE, NEB.—The Dole Floral Co. is making preparations for the erection of two more greenhouses, each 36x100. One of these houses will be used for palms and violets and the other exclusively for chrysanthemums.

MENTOR, O.—Carl Hagenberger has bought two pumping engines of the Standard Pump & Engine Co., one for use in each of his plants. These machines pump directly into the pipe lines and operate with gasoline, so that it is no longer necessary to raise steam during warm weather simply to operate the pumps.

Greenhouse Heating.

FROM STEAM TO HOT WATER.

We have three greenhouses, of King construction, each 14x100 feet and eleven feet to the ridge, with side walls seven feet high. These houses are connected. They are piped for steam, with a 2½-inch main and with 1¼-inch returns to the main return, which is 2-inch. I want to change the system to hot water and want to know how many pipes it will take, using the same size of pipe as we now have. What capacity of hot water boiler will we need, here in North Carolina, to keep the houses at 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees above zero? S. T. F.

I do not think it wise to attempt to transform your system into a hot water plant with 1¼-inch pipes 100 feet long. I never advise the use of pipes smaller than 1½-inch for hot water. On this basis it will require thirty 1½-inch pipes for returns and a 3-inch overhead flow for each of the three divisions.

A boiler for this plant should have a rated capacity for at least 2,000 square feet of radiation. L. C. C.

THREE NARROW HOUSES.

I contemplate building three short-roof houses, each 11x200 feet, connected ridge and furrow; no partitions; 8-foot posts, with five feet of glass in the sides. How large a steam boiler would I need to heat these to 55 degrees at 10 degrees below zero, in this Massachusetts climate? How large should the flow pipes be and how many runs of 1¼-inch pipe would I need? How much pitch should the piping have for steam? How near can the boiler be set to the level of the floor of the greenhouses; or, in other words, how much drop must there be from the returns to the bottom of the boiler? S. S. P.

The three houses require seventeen runs of 1¼-inch pipe. In order to heat them, you should have a boiler rated to carry 2,000 square feet of radiation. A steam boiler with 250 square feet of heating surface will do the work. The boiler, if you wish to use a gravity system, should be located so the water line of the boiler will be at least two feet below the lowest point in the return pipes in the houses. If you use a flow

THE JOHN DAVIS COMPANY, Chicago, Ill.
GENTLEMEN:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two purchased of you last year. pipe under the ridge of each house, which would be a good plan, a 2½-inch pipe will be sufficient.

The Market.

Every one is happy, for although things are not rushing, still there is plenty of work. The same amount of help will be found at all the stores and there seems to be work enough to keep them out of mischief.

Reports from the commission houses show that all stock cleaned up well last week, with the exception of some kinds of bulbous flowers. Prices received are not so good as last year, but the unusually heavy carnation crop may be responsible for this.

Roses bring anywhere from 3 cents to 10 and 12 cents for some exceptionally fine Maids.

Carnations, to the retailers, are from $1.50 to $2.50 per hundred.

Club Meeting.

One of the most wide-awake meetings the Detroit Florists' Club has held for some time took place March 18. The attendance was larger than usual.

Albert Pochelon gave a detailed account of his recent trip east. He visited the wholesalers and markets at Boston and says about the same varieties of carnations are grown in Boston as in this locality, with the exception of Enchantress, in place of which Fair Maid is grown. One of the most noticeable features was the amount of time and money spent in the window displays in the retail stores. city. All of the better stores keep baskets of different kinds made up at all times.

In New York fakers confronted the visitor on all sides and some of the prices asked for good fresh flowers are really ridiculous. For instance, fine Rhinebeck violets at 10 cents a bunch. Good roses, such as we would have to pay 4 cents for wholesale in this city, could be bought on the street at 1 cent. It is unnecessary to say that the market is flooded with stock.

The retailers' windows in New York also showed that they receive much attention. In fact, the whole outward appearance of the stores had a character not commonly seen in our city.

As in the other eastern cities, business in Philadelphia was quiet. The store of Charles Henry Fox interested Mr. Poche- lon.

In the question box, some one asked: "What should lilies bring at wholesale at Easter?" There was no definite answer, for it all depends on the lilies, and the way of counting. The general opinion was that lilies will be none too plentiful in Detroit this Easter. There is much stock in town, but the majority is poor.

On a motion by Ed Beard it was decided that the president call the meeting to order at sharp eight o'clock hereafter, providing a quorum is present.

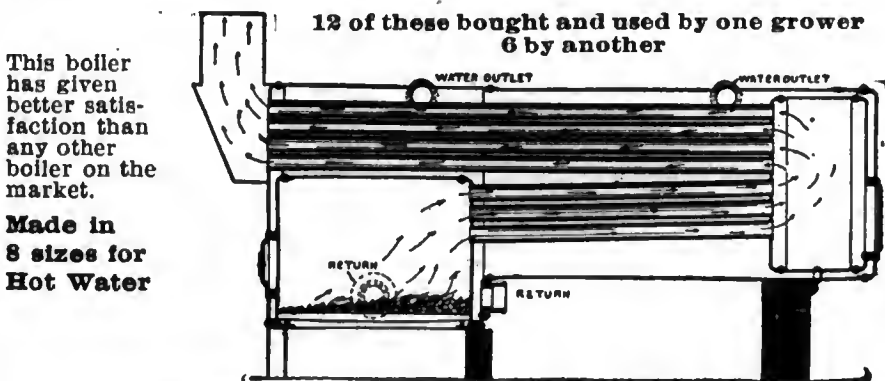

It was decided to hold a show the night of the next meeting, April 1. Anything of interest in the plant line should be shown by the growers, who it is to be hoped will take an active interest in the show. If you have any Easter stock to dispose of for Easter, this is your chance. Thos. Brown and Robert Rahaley were appointed to act as a show committee. A special feature is promised by the entertainment committee.

Owing to continued ill health G. A. Rackham has sold his greenhouse business and stock to M. Bloy, at present foreman for Weiland & Olinger, New Castle, Ind. Mr. Bloy has the reputation of being a first-class grower and will find the florists of Detroit ready to give him a hearty welcome. He takes charge April 1. Mr. Rackham highly recommends the REVIEW as an advertising medium. Four insertions under "Want Advertisements" announcing his place for sale brought him inquiries from all over

Best Soil for Roses.

The books on rose culture state generally that the proper soil to use is a well-drained loam, many authors adding that it should have a smooth or greasy feeling. This description, while somewhat vague, is yet helpful, for it cautions us to beware of heavy clays and coarse sands and brings before us the necessity of good drainage. But the term loam, even in its technical sense, is a very elastic one, and soils may be very different in some of their most important features and still be properly classed as loams. The provision that it should have a smooth or greasy feeling somewhat restricts the original description and brings it within the limits of the class of soils known as silt loams.

The smooth or greasy feeling that is found in a soil when pressed between the thumb and finger is a consequence of the presence of silt, the finest sized particles, excepting clay, that go to make up a soil. The amount present may vary to a considerable degree without altering the feeling, although materially affecting the character of the soil. This variation in the relative proportions of the different sized soil particles is the basis of soil classifications.

Upon it also depends the permeability to air and to water, responses to changes in temperature, retention of moisture, and other physical properties of a soil. It is an important factor in determining the general adaptation of a soil, and there can be but little doubt that modifications in texture greatly affect the adaptation of a soil to varieties. There are other conditions to be taken into account, however, and we must carry our investigations on from a number of standpoints in order to arrive at a solution of this problem.

Growers Asked to Furnish Data.

In carrying out the investigation of this interesting and important soil problem, it is planned to secure samples of soil from various growers with whom the cultivation of certain varieties is made a specialty, and to obtain from them the necessary information to enable us to understand the conditions under which their plants are grown. To this end a circular letter has been sent to a number of growers, requesting the samples and information desired. While our studies have not been carried on far enough to warrant our drawing any conclusions at the present time, yet the outlook is most encouraging, and we have every reason to believe that before long we will be able to state a

Guaranteed Analysis Florists' Fertilizers!

From now to replanting time you will need some of these. Our prices can't be beat if you insist on having the pure article. (There are lots of "cheap" offers to be had—but an impure fertilizer is not only valueless, but harmful, as growers all know, and not to be used, even if it costs nothing.) We guarantee the absolute purity of our fertilizers, as follows:

200 lbs. 1000 lbs. 2000 lbs.				25 lbs. 100 lbs. 200 lbs.
PURE BONE MEAL .....	$3.50	$14.00	$27.50	NITRATE OF SODA .....	$1.25	$4.25	$8.25

PULVERIZED CATTLE MANURE .....				1.50	5.50	7.50	14.00

The above fertilizers are so well known to all growers of flowers that further comment is unnecessary. Write for prices on larger quantities.

This we believe to be the coming fertilizer. Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Illinois, after using two cars for trial, ordered three hundred tons, and say: "It is fully three to four times as strong as rough manure, and being put up in bags, not a pound is wasted, which makes it cheaper in our opinion than rough manure which we got for freight and cost of loading." Not only should cut flower growers give this a trial, but florists who do bedding and other planting will find it a good seller to put on lawns. Clean—no odor. Write for prices on car lots.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The last week came near to being a repetition of the week before. Business had little life in it. The demand could scarcely be felt and was practically no better than the previous week. The one thing which tended to revive hope among the craft was that there was a decided shortening of stock. This was especially true of carnations. Roses were not affected in this respect a great deal; neither was bulbous stock. But, from the general indications, there is no question but that the worst is over and that with a shortening of stock there will be an increase in the demand, and we can at least look forward to a return of fair business conditions and that in the near future.

The fact that carnations are now going off crop will probably mean that there will be a shortage of this flower at Easter. It would also appear that roses will be in the same condition. But even at that we can look forward to a good supply of flowers at that time, and if we have the business to use up the supply we will have no occasion to complain.

The warm, almost summerlike weather, which was forcing the outdoor growth at a rapid rate, has been checked and seasonable weather is with us. For this we are duly thankful, for we would hate to see a repetition of last year, when everything was forced into life prematurely and then frozen to death. As it is, I believe that we will have a seasonable spring, with its full quota of the outdoor flowers which make this season the most beautiful of the year. The outdoor flowers are quite a boon to the florists' trade, as well.

Hail storms of more or less severity were reported from various localities March 18. G. R. Gause, of Richmond, Ind., reported the loss of some 200 square feet. Doubtless numerous other growers suffered and the total damage is likely to foot up to a considerable amount.

Ed. Forter, of A. Sunderbruch's Sons, has been on the sick list, having been laid up with the grippe.

ROSES

HYBRIDIZATION OF ROSES.

[A paper written by Alex Dickson, of Alex Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland, and read before the American Rose Society in Chicago, March 27, 1908.]

It was with considerable hesitation that I consented, at the request of your society, to write a paper upon hybridization and cross-pollination in relation to the rose. I may say at once, it is a request that I have refused many times from similar organizations here and elsewhere, because I have always felt, and indeed still feel, it is a subject upon which it is extremely difficult to write a satisfactory paper. The subject is one which cannot possibly be dealt with satisfactorily in a paper such as the present, and the chief difficulty one has is selecting the lines upon which to write, or the point of view from which to discuss it. I will do my best to make the paper as interesting and instructive as I can within the limited scope at my disposal. I have given the subject my most careful consideration, and I am convinced that the best method of dealing with the subject in this paper is to give you, in a condensed form, some of the results which have accrued from the labors of my brother and myself, extending over a period of almost thirty years.

From a Practical Point of View.

I would ask those who hear this paper read, and those who may read it for themselves, to remember that it is written by a professional rose grower, and, therefore, by one to whom the practical results, from a commercial standpoint, were of the most vital importance, and of necessity this point of view had always to be borne in mind by my brother and myself in our line of experimental inquiry; and it is from this point of view that I deal with it.

Hybridization is a subject of intense interest, and the practical application of the science opens up an infinite and even inexhaustible field of inquiry, but those of us who are professionally engaged upon this branch of horticulture must abandon, to some extent at least, the scientific aspect, in favor of the practical. With the stern realities of life facing me, I have many times, contrary to my desire, been compelled to abandon scientific lines of inquiry, as against the production of new varieties of commercial value—a situation I regretted, but could not help.

After thirty years' steady and continuous work I am inclined to the opinion that the further one pursues the subject of hybridization, the greater the field for exploration. I have often thought, while pursuing my work and watching the results, that the effect was much like that produced when climbing up a steep mountain—the farther one rises the more the plains below are opened up. I will try to explain more fully as I go on exactly what I mean, and the foregoing observations are made with a view to render less keen the disappointment which I feel will inevitably follow the reading of this paper.

Much Due to Chance.

I am conscious that my observations will be read before, and by, men of practical experience in horticulture, and particularly in the culture or advancement of the rose, and by men keenly intent upon the development and improvement of the rose; and I am sorry, for this reason, that I can give little practical assistance to any who are desirous of entering the field of hybridization on their own account. I may, however, render their disappointment less acute. The main reason why I can render little practical help is that, when all is said and done, hybridization is a science of pure experiment, or rather chance, as I can easily show. To do this it is only necessary for me to assume that every one—at least every one interested in horticulture—knows that, so far as seed-bearing plants are concerned, they will reproduce their species in some shape or form, perhaps with some variation, or perhaps exactly similar. And it follows that by the fertilization of different varieties of the same species, new varieties, or, at least, varieties with some distinctive feature, may be produced. It is a different matter, however, to reduce the chaos, which results from indiscriminate cross-fertilization, to something like definite order—a result far beyond my ambition or the scope of this paper, if indeed it is at all possible. All I can do in this direction, and indeed it is very little, is to give some results of our labors in hybridization.

Early Discouragements.

We began work in 1879, and naturally our first operations were upon what were considered the finest show varieties of that day. Naturally, we chose parents of the choicest colors, having beauty of form and, as far as possible, vigor of habit. The hope, of course, was that the fertilization would reproduce varieties of a different kind, with at least some of the qualities for which the parents had been selected. The results for many years were disastrous.

Keen and bitter disappointment followed our experiments. We, however, persevered, always upon fixed lines, carefully recording our crosses and results, making a close and careful observation of the most important features of the offspring of the cross; and I regret to say that in the majority of instances there was nothing but dismal failure to record. I think I can safely say that the most certain result of our crosses in the early stages of our experiments was to convince us of the absolute uncertainty of what our results would be.

This prevails even now, though in a lesser degree. Possibly this is one reason why rose hybridization is so intensely interesting. There is always and ever the element of uncertainty in it, so dear to human nature. One never knows what the fertilization of any two varieties will produce, or more correctly, how many different varieties. One seed pod containing four seeds may produce—and has produced, to my knowledge—four seedlings absolutely distinct in every conceivable respect. Many and many a time I have seen produced from the seeds sown from one hip half a dozen seedlings, absolutely distinct in color and form, some as single as the ordinary dog rose, and some so full in substance that it was impossible to get them to open even under glass.

A Change of Method.

In the early eighties, when we began to see the results of our labors, we abandoned the original basis of our experiments, namely, the fertilization of the better varieties of hybrid remountant or perpetual, and began a series of cross-pollination between the hybrid perpetual and teas and Austrian briars, and then using the results of this first cross in a systematic course of inbreeding. The main object which we had in view was to produce varieties of roses at once vigorous in their habit and continuous in their bloom, at the same time retaining the absolute essentials of all good roses; namely, beauty of color, perfection of form and delicacy of perfume. It was, of course, a great ambition, and how we have succeeded we must leave the world to judge. Broadly, I would say that such success as has attended our labors is due far more to the careful selection than to any defined plan of fertilization.

As a broad basis of our experiments, we took as parents such varieties as appeared to us to embody the chief elements of our ideal, and worked steadily from these. We had, of course, to experiment upon a very extensive scale, and my point will be readily appreciated when I say that we were only able to retain for use, either for further fertilization or for commerce, about five per cent of the seedlings raised.

To appreciate the labor this entails upon the hybridizer, one must follow the rose from the hip until it reaches maturity. In hybridization, carried out upon a systematic plan such as ours, it means that the plants with which we are working have to be specially selected, planted and grown, and the blooms fertilized. There is then the period required to ripen the hip, and in Ireland this takes considerable time, owing to the cold and dampness of our climate. Then comes the sowing of the seed, and the attention and care during the period of germination.

In this respect it is interesting to note the wide differences in the period of germination in the different cases. In some instances the seed will germinate in two or three months, and in others I have known it to lie dormant from twelve to fifteen months. I have never been able to give any reason why this should be so, and, particularly, why there should be marked differences in the periods of germination in seeds taken from the same hip; yet there is very frequently a marked difference.

Danger of Rash Judgment.

To continue on the point I am making, it takes anywhere from three to six months, according to the vigor of the plant, to bring it to such amount of growth as will enable us to bud it for the purpose of testing outside. Then, when it is budded, of course it takes a full year to bring the plant to maturity. Here, again, one has to face uncertainties and to be very careful about forming a judgment, as experience has proved time and again that in the early stages of culture some varieties have displayed the greatest shyness in flowering, and yet, after a few years' cultivation, have taken their places in the front rank, as perfect garden roses, blooming with the greatest freedom.

Each year we are compelled to make a very close selection, and to discard every seedling which does not suggest some improvement in at least one or two of the essential elements of the perfect rose; otherwise we would, of course, have been flooded out with varieties, which would have been of no practical value to us, or, indeed, to the rose world at large.

An Exact System of Experiments.

The system we ultimately adopted was hybridization, in the first instance, between hybrid perpetual and teas, and then inbreeding from their offspring, upon the following lines: We made four distinct crosses. We took a seedling of our own, which gave some evidence of possessing at least some of the qualities aimed at, and in the first instance this seedling was crossed with the male parent; secondly, the seedling crossed with the female parent; thirdly, the male parent crossed with the seedling; fourthly, the female parent crossed with the seedling.

As soon as we were able to form an opinion of the results of this interbreeding, we again made a selection of those most closely approaching our ideal, again inbreeding, but with this difference, that we only made use of a limited number of parents, but in almost every instance making a double cross.

For example, if we made a seedling with, say, Marie Van Houtte as the male parent, then during that season we reversed the cross, making Marie Van Houtte the seed-bearing parent, and the seedling the male parent. We always had relays of plants prepared in duplicate for this purpose, and we carefully and methodically registered each experiment, thus carrying on our work in a systematic manner, the system of selection, of course, always playing the most prominent part in the results.

Gratifying Results.

From practical experience, we were able to ascertain which varieties, or rather types, gave us the best results, and we were, therefore, able to a considerable extent to lessen the waste, and to reduce our methods to a system containing at least some elements of certainty. Of course, we have made use of varieties of other raisers, where we have been struck by any special features which they contained, which were, in our opinion, an advance upon anything in commerce.

The result of our labors has been to produce what is admittedly an absolutely distinct class, if not family, of roses, known as the Alex Dickson type. We, of course, claim that the types of roses we have introduced have made a great advance on those previously in commerce. We aimed at producing a type having vigor of growth, freedom and continuity of bloom, the flowers full and perfectly formed, with unusually long petals, at the same time growing on bushes the foliage of which is luxurious and handsome. How far the varieties we have sent out have done what we claim for them, you must judge.

Work With La France.

In our experiments and in struggling with the qualities we have indicated, we felt convinced that La France would prove one of the most useful parents we could possibly have, if we could succeed in making it produce seed. It was, of course, the opinion of most hybridizers that La France was sterile, and with this opinion we were for a long time inclined to agree, and indeed the best that could be said for it is this, that there is just the possibility that it may be fertilized. Out of many hundreds of crosses with this rose, only in one single instance did we succeed in making it produce seed, but we feel that the labor we spent was amply repaid, as the ultimate result of it was the introduction of Mrs. W. J. Grant, known to you as Belle Siebrecht, in our opinion one of the finest roses in cultivation, at least from the Britishers' standpoint.

Some Notable Varieties.

In addition to this, we have always found from practical experience that the roses descended from this particular cross have always impressed their offspring with some, at least, of the more prominent qualities of the parents, and it was pursuing this particular line of breeding that enabled us to produce varieties which, from a British standpoint, are ideal exhibition flowers, and at the same time the plants are floriferous and of excellent constitution. In this group we might mention Killarney, Mrs. Edward Mawley, Bessie Brown, Liberty, Lady Moyra Beaulere, Lady Ashtown, Mrs. David McKee, Dean Hole, Countess of Derby, Betty, Mrs. G. W. Kershaw, and, last but not least, Mildred Grant and William Shean, two of the finest exhibition roses at present in cultivation in Great Britain. Mildred Grant resulted from a seedling between Niphetos and Mme. Willermoz in the first instance, crossed with a seedling of our own, which is not in commerce, and the system of which this is an instance applies pretty generally to all the better classes of roses introduced by us.

The Long Sought Yellow Tea.

After many years of continuous experiment on various lines, we have at last been able to produce what has long been sought for, namely, a yellow tea of good size and color with the vigor and hardiness of the hybrid perpetual. I refer to the rose Harry Kirk, which is now being grown by most of you, and you will shortly be able to judge whether it fulfills the promises we have made on its behalf. I think you will not be disappointed.

It is interesting to note, in relation to the La France cross, that the same inclination to sterility is apparent in the rose Augustine Guinnoisseau, a sport from La France. Out of hundreds of experiments, we have not succeeded in getting a single seed pod from this variety.

Continuity of Bloom.

The only other point of practical importance, which occurs to me, is the fact that in our early experiments, when we had in view the object of producing varieties which would give a greater continuity of bloom, we used in our efforts Rosa Indica, and after a considerable amount of labor, we succeeded in impressing this much valued quality on some of its offspring which are now in commerce.

In a general way, we found it very difficult, and indeed impossible, to place the smallest dependence upon the presumption that hybrid perpetuals would impart to their offspring anything of their own color, and in a general way we may say that, after much experience, the chief varieties which we use, and use with the best results, for the purpose of getting blends, are the hybrid perpetuals, Horace Vernet, Charles Lefebvre, General Jacqueminot, and also Austrian briars, Persian Yellow and Harrisonii.

From what I have said, you will readily appreciate the fact that it would be wholly impossible, and indeed, I think, a waste of your time and mine, to give in detail the results of thirty years' hybridizing, and I have done my best to make clear the general lines upon which our work has been conducted, from which it will be readily inferred that the element of chance must always play a prominent part, and I might aptly use the well-known quotation from Pope:

All nature is but art, unknown to thee;
All chance, direction, which thou canst not see.
And I ask such of you as may desire to enter for yourselves upon this interesting field of experiment, to go forward with confidence—

Knowing that nature never did betray
The heart that loved her.

CYCLAMENS IN SUMMER.

I have 300 cyclamen plants which did not bloom. Would you kindly tell me the best way to keep them over summer and when to start them to have them bloom for Christmas? T. H.

As you do not state the size or age of your plants, I assume that they are probably seedlings raised last fall. These should now be in 3-inch pots on a light, sunny bench. A temperature of 50 degrees at night and plenty of ventilation will suit them. Pot along before the roots become matted. Let the next shift be to 4-inch pots. Flower them in 5-inch and 6-inch pots. June 1 your plants can be placed on a bed of ashes in a cold-frame, where they will do better than in the greenhouse. Let them have ventilation both from the top and bottom of the sashes. They require shade during bright weather. Do not shade the glass with whitewash. A better plan is to use lath shades or cheesecloth run over the top on a roller. Give all the light possible when bright sunshine does not strike the frame.

To ward off greenfly and thrips, put tobacco stems among the pots, renewing them every second or third week. Spray overhead lightly on warm evenings. Remove the sashes altogether on summer evenings, if there is no likelihood of rain. Keep the plants in the frames until October 1; then place in a light, sunny house kept at about 50 degrees at night and you will get most of them to produce some flowers for Christmas. Cyclamens prefer a lower temperature than 50 degrees, but the extra warmth will be necessary to flower them when you need them.

If perchance you have any old bulbs which have not bloomed, do not dry off in summer as you would Dutch bulbs. Cyclamens will not stand this treatment. Keep, however, on the dry side and shake out and repot them early in August, treating them as recommended for the seedling plants. C. W.

SWEET PEAS ROTTING OFF.

I am enclosing three sweet pea plants, which, like a number of plants in the same house, appear to rot off at the ground. They are on a solid bed, in a 100-foot house. Plenty of air is given them, and not too much water. The temperature is 58 degrees at night and sometimes 85 degrees on very hot, sunny days. No shade is supplied. From these particulars, can you give the probable reason for this continual withering of the plants? R. P.

You are giving your sweet peas much too high a temperature; 48 degrees we have found to be about an ideal night temperature to flower them in and we do not care to have it exceed 50 degrees. While making their growth and before flowering, 45 to 46 degrees is about the right heat. A temperature of 58 degrees at night is ruinous for sweet peas, and you must radically change your heat if you are to have any degree of success.

From the sample sent, we should say your plants are weak and spindly. It is probable that you have sown them too thickly. Allow two to three inches between the plants in a row. The best growers give them even more space than this. Sweet peas like a good supply of moisture at the roots, and if your beds are well drained you may have erred in giving them too little water. C. W.

ASK YOURSELF.

Will you kindly give me your advice on the following questions: After last season's experience, is it worth while for a man who can grow only 4,000 plants to compete with the modern flower factories in the wholesale market; that is to say, is there any hope of his making a reasonable profit?

Is the day of the big carnation bloom waning? The big blooms commanded an extra price for me in my market.

In the event of reducing one's planting by half, which of the following varieties would be best discarded: Enchantress, White Enchantress, Winsor, Haines, Imperial, Pink Imperial? J.

The REVIEW always is glad to answer questions, but the answers to some are so obviously found in the querist's own experience that it does seem as though all one had to do, instead of looking out, was to look in and read the answer.

in two or three months, and in others I have known it to lie dormant from twelve to fifteen months. I have never been able to give any reason why this should be so, and, particularly, why there should be marked differences in the periods of germination in seeds taken from the same hip; yet there is very frequently a marked difference.

Danger of Rash Judgment.

To continue on the point I am making, it takes anywhere from three to six months, according to the vigor of the plant, to bring it to such amount of growth as will enable us to bud it for the purpose of testing outside. Then, when it is budded, of course it takes a full year to bring the plant to maturity. Here, again, one has to face uncertainties and to be very careful about forming a judgment, as experience has proved time and again that in the early stages of culture some varieties have displayed the greatest shyness in flowering, and yet, after a few years' cultivation, have taken their places in the front rank, as perfect garden roses, blooming with the greatest freedom.

Each year we are compelled to make a very close selection, and to discard every seedling which does not suggest some improvement in at least one or two of the essential elements of the perfect rose; otherwise we would, of course, have been flooded out with varieties, which would have been of no practical value to us, or, indeed, to the rose world at large.

An Exact System of Experiments.

The system we ultimately adopted was hybridization, in the first instance, between hybrid perpetual and teas, and then inbreeding from their offspring, upon the following lines: We made four distinct crosses. We took a seedling of our own, which gave some evidence of possessing at least some of the qualities aimed at, and in the first instance this seedling was crossed with the male parent; secondly, the seedling crossed with the female parent; thirdly, the male parent crossed with the seedling; fourthly, the female parent crossed with the seedling.

As soon as we were able to form an opinion of the results of this interbreeding, we again made a selection of those most closely approaching our ideal, again inbreeding, but with this difference, that we only made use of a limited number of parents, but in almost every instance making a double cross.

For example, if we made a seedling with, say, Marie Van Houtte as the male parent, then during that season we reversed the cross, making Marie Van Houtte the seed-bearing parent, and the seedling the male parent. We always had relays of plants prepared in duplicate for this purpose, and we carefully and methodically registered each experiment, thus carrying on our work in a systematic manner, the system of selection, of course, always playing the most prominent part in the results.

Gratifying Results.

From practical experience, we were able to ascertain which varieties, or rather types, gave us the best results, and we were, therefore, able to a considerable extent to lessen the waste, and to reduce our methods to a system containing at least some elements of certainty. Of course, we have made use of varieties of other raisers, where we have been struck by any special features which they contained, which were, in our opinion, an advance upon anything in commerce.

The result of our labors has been to produce what is admittedly an absolutely distinct class, if not family, of roses, known as the Alex Dickson type. We, of course, claim that the types of roses we have introduced have made a great advance on those previously in commerce. We aimed at producing a type having vigor of growth, freedom and continuity of bloom, the flowers full and perfectly formed, with unusually long petals, at the same time growing on bushes the foliage of which is luxuriant and handsome. How far the varieties we have sent out have done what we claim for them, you must judge.

Work With La France.

In our experiments and in struggling with the qualities we have indicated, we felt convinced that La France would prove one of the most useful parents we could possibly have, if we could succeed in making it produce seed. It was, of course, the opinion of most hybridizers that La France was sterile, and with this opinion we were for a long time inclined to agree, and indeed the best that could be said for it is this, that there is just the possibility that it may be fertilized. Out of many hundreds of crosses with this rose, only in one single instance did we succeed in making it produce seed, but we feel that the labor we spent was amply repaid, as the ultimate result of it was the introduction of Mrs. W. J. Grant, known to you as Belle Siegrecht, in our opinion one of the finest roses in cultivation, at least from the Britishers' standpoint.

Some Notable Varieties.

In addition to this, we have always found from practical experience that the roses descended from this particular cross have always impressed their offspring with some, at least, of the more prominent qualities of the parents, and it was pursuing this particular line of breeding that enabled us to produce varieties which, from a British standpoint, are ideal exhibition flowers, and at the same time the plants are floriferous and of excellent constitution. # REFRIGERATION FOR THE FLORIST

Modern Places Use Many Machines.

With the development of the big modern ranges of glass has come the need of mechanical equipment, in heating, lighting, power and other lines, that would have been considered outside the bounds of reason had it been predicted before the days of 1,000-foot greenhouses and single establishments of acres practically under one roof. With the vacuum system of heating, and the need for powerful pumps, many a florist's service building now resembles a first-class engine room and machine shop. And the end is not yet. While it might seem at first thought that artificial refrigeration would find little place in an industry consisting of the growing of flowers under glass, where artificial heat is the prime requisite many months of the year, as a matter of fact it will soon be extensively employed, not in the growing of the flowers, but in cooling them after they are cut, and for storage before they are sent to market; also, for the retarding of lily bulbs, valley pips, lilacs and other forcing stock, and the keeping of cut ferns, galax and other decorative greens now kept in public cold-storage establishments.

A recent installation for this purpose has been made by Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove, Ill.

Adjacent to the office building shown in Fig. 1 are located houses 500 to 600 feet long, shown in Fig 2, which is a view of part of the houses devoted to carnations and shows the power house at the left. To provide soil, a farm of sixty-five acres is utilized, the soil removed from the houses being returned to the farm. The fresh soil is run through a portable soil mixer which is operated by a six horse-power gasoline engine.

Heating Equipment.

Heat is supplied by direct radiation, the mains passing overhead in the walks connecting the houses and the condensation being taken care of by a vacuum return system and by traps. In this system, four benches, as in Fig. 3, form a heating unit. Three steam pipes lie underneath the full length of the two right hand benches, which are about 250 feet long, the pipes under the other two benches forming the return loop, and the steam passing to a manifold from which the condensation is returned to the surge tanks in the pump room. By referring to Fig. 3 the flexibility of the radiating system will be understood. In mild weather the coils under benches 2 and 3 may be in use while those under

1 and 4 are not. If more heat is required the Nos. 1 and 4 loops can be put into service, which will furnish many times the radiation of 2 and 3, or all may be used together in the coldest weather, making an arrangement which is able to meet any demand. Each flow is valved, so any pipes can be cut out as desired.

Boiler Rooms and Pumps.

A total of nine boilers supply heat to Plant A and these are divided into two boiler rooms, the larger of which is shown in plan in Fig. 4 and contains five boilers varying from 150 to 200 horse-power, three of the horizontal return tubular type, which can be seen in Fig. 5, and two of the horizontal water tube type, all furnished by S. Freeman, Sons & Co., of Racine, Wis., and fitted with Reliance safety water columns. Eighty pounds gauge pressure is ordinarily required on the boilers. This boiler plant is served by a circular brick stack 100 feet high, shown at the left in Fig. 2.

The pumping equipment consists of three Worthington feed pumps, taking water from the return tanks of the heating system at a temperature of about 200 degrees, and three Marsh vacuum pumps. Two Worthington duplex pumps supply water to the waterworks system at 125 pounds pressure. These waterworks pumps take their supply from two drilled wells 200 feet deep and another similar well is used to supply water pumped by compressed air, supplied from an air compressor located in the pump room.

Heating mains leave the pump room in various directions, the pressure being reduced to from five to seven pounds by the means of Davis reducing valves, and the mains are drained of condensation by both Victor and Squires traps.

The Engine Room.

Passing through the pump room is a 5-inch steam main supplying the electric generating apparatus. This line has two pockets for condensation as shown in the elevation, Fig. 6, one located at the end of the line and one just before the first branch to the generators. These pockets are drained of condensation by a Squires trap furnished by the Advance Packing Co., of Chicago.

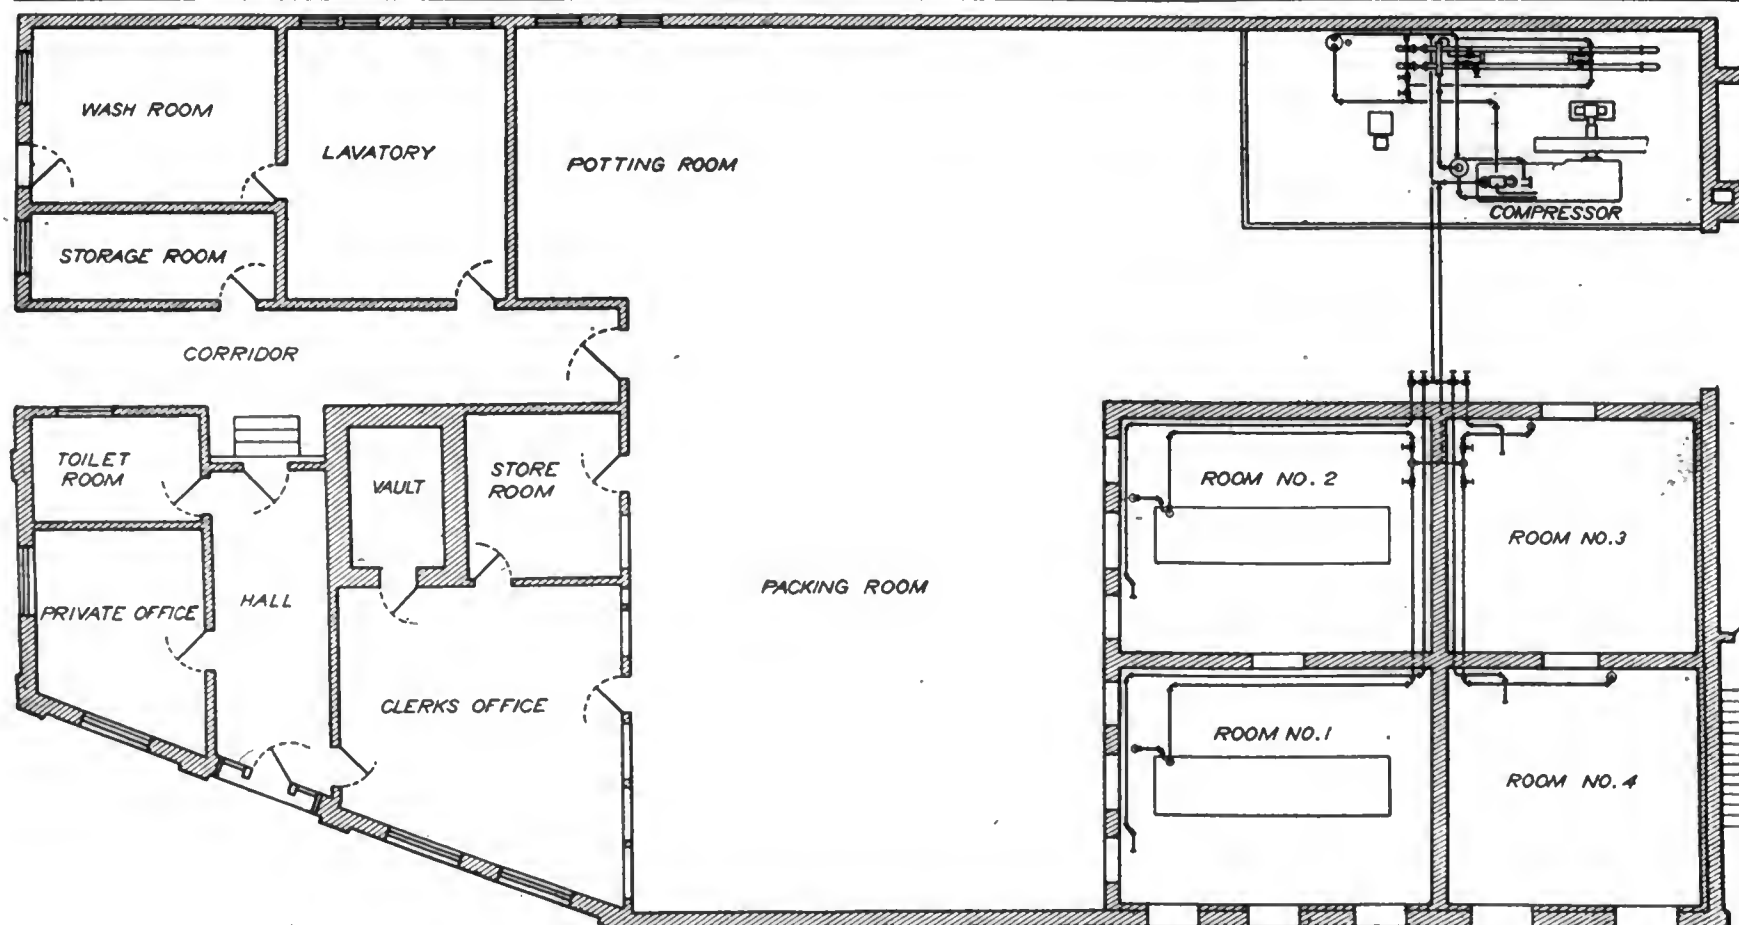

Fig. 8. Plan of Refrigerating Plant and Office Building.

The engine room is a glass-enclosed space at one corner of the building and contains two 10x11-inch McEwen engines, one of which is shown in Fig. 7, direct power for the compressor serving the cold storage rooms, and together with the refrigerating plant complete was installed by the John Wishart Machine Co., Chicago.

The Refrigerating Plant.

A power circuit some 600 feet long, extending over the tops of the houses, connected to 30-kilowatt Thompson-Ryan generators, engines and generators being built by the Ridgway Dynamo and Engine Co., Ridgway, Pa. These run at 300 revolutions a minute and are capable of supplying 120 amperes at a pressure of 250 volts, although only 220 volts are carried on the mains. They are fitted with governors and can be adjusted to maintain a constant speed regardless of the load, or they may be made to decrease the speed as the load comes on or to increase it as desired to meet special conditions.

This equipment has but lately been added to the original heating installation, its primary purpose being to furnish connects the engine room with the combined refrigerating plant, shipping room and office building. Figure 8 shows a general plan of this building.

The compressor is located in a glass-enclosed space partitioned off from the shipping room and is of the Linde horizontal, double-acting type of 20 tons refrigerating capacity. In this machine, a view of which is shown in Fig. 9, the heat of compression is taken care of by the unexpanded ammonia which, in the form of fog or vapor, enters the compressor on the suction stroke.

Located alongside of the compressor is a double-pipe ammonia condenser, consisting of two series of pipes, one within the other. The ammonia is circulated downward through the outer and larger pipe, while the water is circulated in the opposite direction through the inner and smaller pipe. The compressor is driven by a twenty-five horse-power General Electric compound wound motor and controlled by a Cuttler Hammer speed controller, which permits of variable speed corresponding to the amount of refrigeration required in the storage rooms.

The Cold Storage Rooms.

The cold storage rooms, of which there are four, are shown in the plan and elevation in Fig. 10. A  $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch ammonia line runs to a manifold on the outside of the storage room, from which four expansion valves lead to the separate rooms. Direct expansion is used in all of the rooms and a 2-inch suction line returns to the compressor.

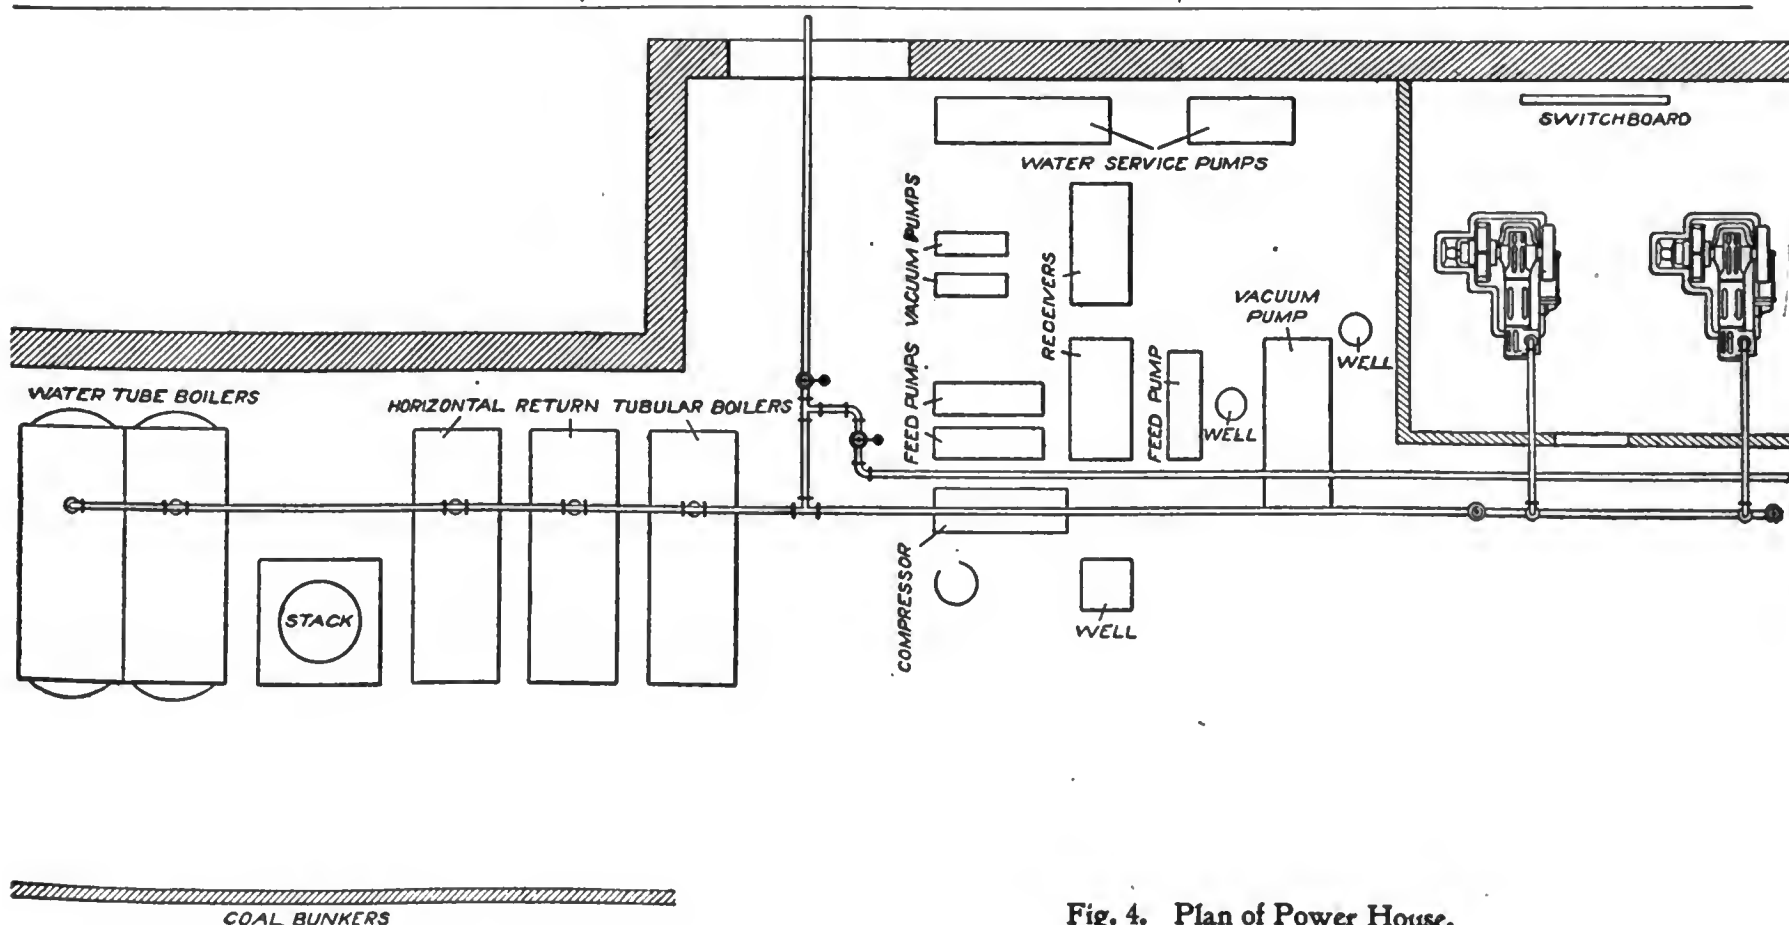

Fig. 4. Plan of Power House.

Rooms 1 and 2 are used for cooling and storing cut flowers and are maintained at a temperature of 38 to 40 degrees. The expansion lines, which are all 2-inch extra heavy galvanized iron pipes with soldered connections, encircle rooms 1 and 2 on three sides, the expanded gas entering at the top and circulating downward in such a manner as to form no pockets for the accumulation of ammonia. There are no elbows in the piping, all being 90-degree bends, and no joints except the flange fittings. At the lowest point in the system, a  $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch oil drain is provided to take out any accumulation of oil in the system. The piping is hung on galvanized iron brackets with 7-inch centers, in a substantial manner, and to engineers gives the impression of a most permanent and satisfactory installation.

Aside from the ammonia expansion coils in rooms 1 and 2, there is an additional provision for the maintenance of low temperature during periods when the compressor is not running. This is in the shape of a galvanized iron tank containing brine which is cooled by direct expansion and is a source of refrigeration when needed. The tanks are hung on galvanized iron brackets from the ceiling. The location of the tanks is clearly shown in Fig. 10.

The expansion coils in rooms 3 and 4 differ somewhat from those in rooms 1 and 2, in that they are not provided with brine tanks and are located both on the ceiling and on the side walls. In details of construction the piping is similar to that already described, being 2-inch galvanized iron with soldered joints and arranged with particular reference to the drainage of ammonia downward from the top to the lowest point.

These rooms are known as the lily bulb rooms, and a temperature of 24 degrees is maintained, the object of the low temperature being to retard the growth of the bulbs stored here, making it possible to hold Easter lily bulbs and valley pips dormant and maintain a supply of cut flowers the year around.

For purposes of storage, the bulbs are put in closed boxes and piled one above the other upon brackets or shelves, having a space between each box so that the air can be perfectly circulated and an even temperature maintained. When taken out of storage the bulbs are not planted at once, but are put through a process of gradual thawing out.

You are doing splendid work with the REVIEW. I have had all the trade papers, but yours is the only one I have stuck to. Find enclosed my dollar for another year, and I think it is money well spent.—H. C. BUCHELER, Sewickley, Pa.

A FLYING TRIP TO CHICAGO.

How the Windy City Looks to Wm. Penn.

A baseball team of Philadelphians gathered in the Art Institute at Chicago on Wednesday morning, March 25, to witness the opening of the national rose show. Frank P. Myers, A. Farenwald and Martin Samtman came over on the sixteen-hour train; the limited brought William P. Craig, Clarence Upton and J. W. Young, while E. J. Fancourt, J. J. Karins and S. S. Skidelsky came from nearby cities, where business had called them. Cordial greetings were exchanged with Secretary Hammond and then came the interesting task that became pleasure of seeing all that could be seen in a brief period of time.

The National Rose Show.

The rose show was truly a national affair, eastern and western growers meeting in friendly rivalry as they had never met before.

The view from the gallery overlooking the exhibition hall was most beautiful. Fancy a long, wide hall, with lofty ceiling, large windows, rather high, admitting ample light and air; the hall, a work of art itself, adorned with handsome statuary of heroic size in sufficient numbers to the immense vases of the queen of flowers visible everywhere, not crowded together, but standing well apart on the floor or on low tables, showing color, size, stem and foliage to advantage. Fancy all this and you see the Chicago rose show of last week from a spectacular standpoint. But you want a closer view.

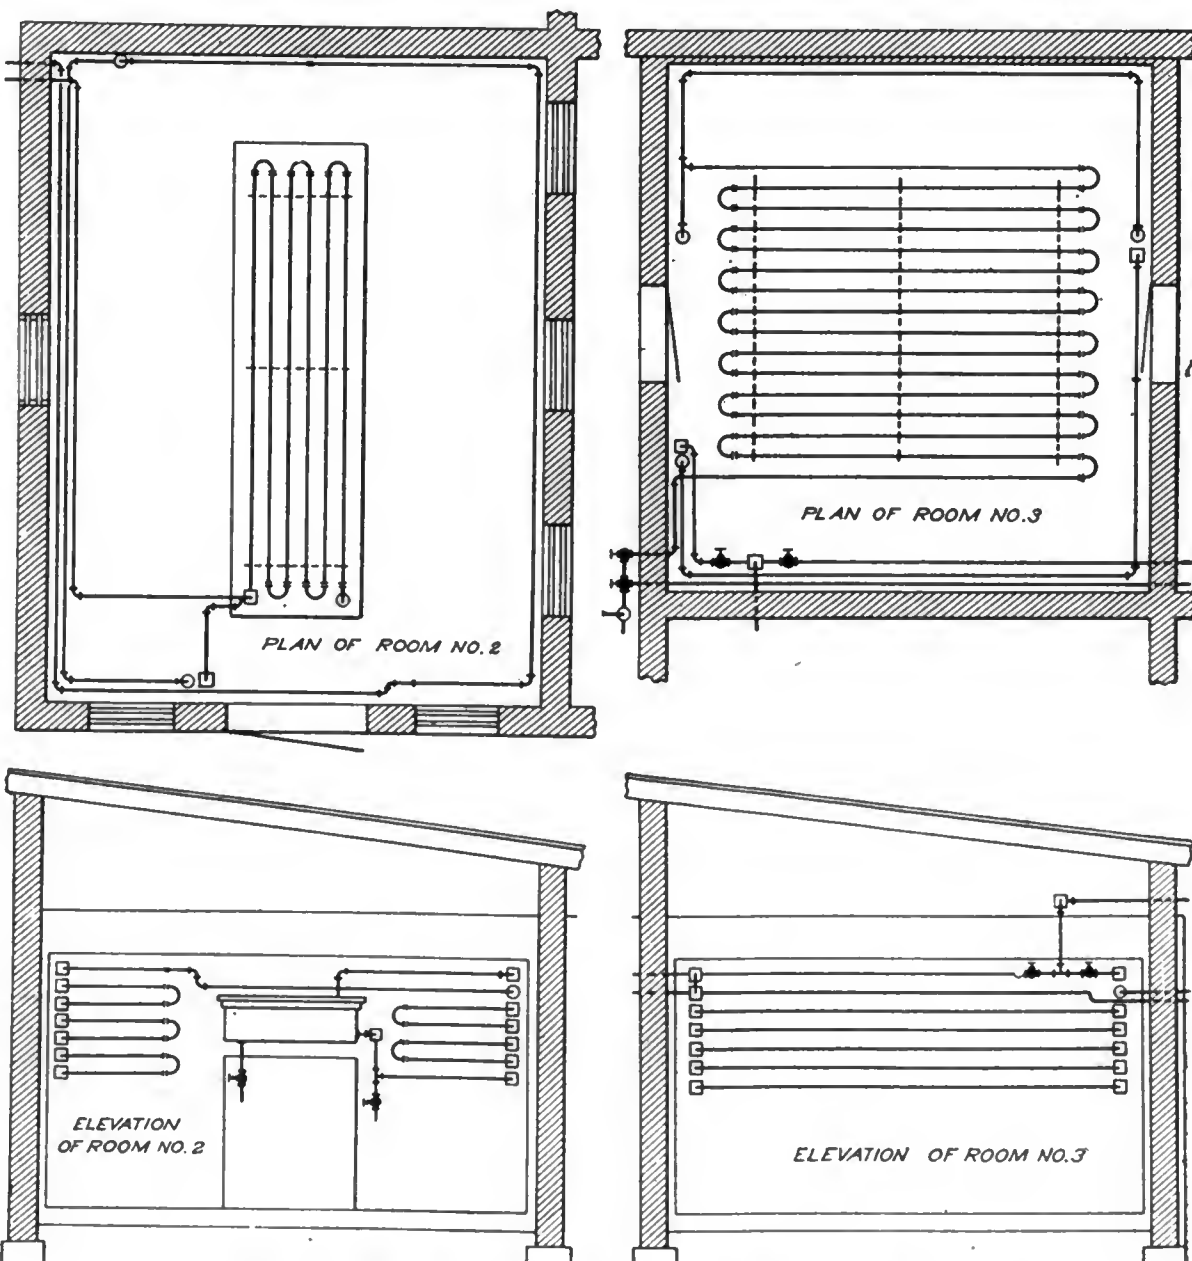

Fig. 10. Plan and Elevation of Cold Storage Rooms.

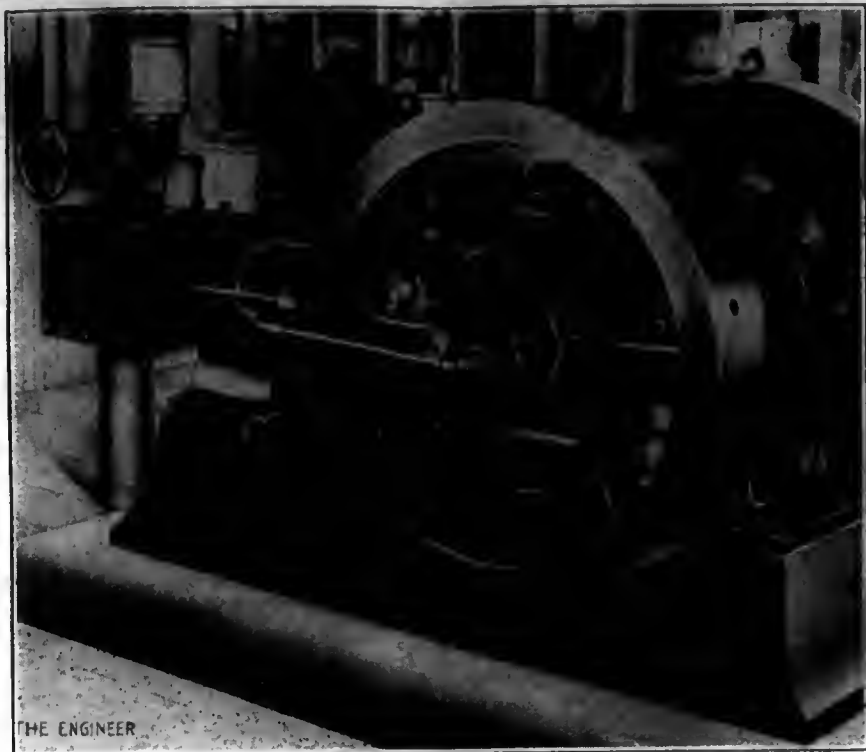

Fig. 7. One of the Generating Units.

Fig. 5. View in Boiler Room.

Descend the stairway to the main hall. American Beauty has the place of honor in the center. Some 1,000 blooms in vases containing fifty and 100 flowers each make a grand display. Even the immense hall cannot dwarf them; each vase resembles a standard rose bush in full bloom. Their only fault, if fault it be, is that they do not fade prettily.

Richmond comes next. Strong in Beauty's weakest point, their rich glowing color attracts the eye at once, the quality such as to leave little to be desired. Mme. Chatenay comes next, a vase from Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., having stems of extraordinary length, with excellent foliage and good flowers. The color of this fine rose does not appeal to me.

Killarney is easily the best pink rose in the hall and here is a surprise, for W. H. Elliott, of Madbury, N. H., had a vase of single-jointed stems of unusual length, say twenty-four to thirty-six inches, surmounted by exceptionally large, fine blooms. The double-jointed of Killarney are fully four feet long.

The other standard varieties are present in numbers, Ivory being exceptionally fine. The novelties are all full of interest, but to me the novelty most surprising of all is Safrano, a rose discarded before my day but shown here in such extraordinary form by W. H. Elliott as to be a wonder to a rose expert like W. W. Coles.

The Wholesale Houses.

A majority of our party, or, to be accurate, five of the nine, toured some of the wholesale houses to learn wherein lay their wonderful success. The selection made by chance, assisted kindly by a policeman and most kindly by I. G. Bertermann, of Indianapolis, included E. C. Anling, Bassett & Washburn, J. A. Budlong and Pohlmann Bros. Co. The facts learned seemed to fully justify Frank P. Myers' assertion that even the Indians had been educated to use flowers by these Chicago hustlers. The magnificent railroad facilities are largely responsible for the vast business transacted—but this is trite.

Morton Grove.

Pohlmann Bros. Co. has a range of glass at Morton Grove that amply repays a visit. The great area, the second largest near Chicago, is divided into two sections: Section A is devoted chiefly to American Beauties and carnations, with some Asparagus plumosus and other side lines; Section B, to all the leading varieties of roses. Both ranges are well built on good business lines; the stock in them is uniformly good. The batteries of large boilers run at high pressure, the coal handling by hydraulic pressure, the ice-making machine, the dynamo, the suction pump, the air pump for syringing cold air through the water pipes, were all objects of deep interest.

The Banquet.

The banquet given by the Chicago Florists' Club at the Union restaurant in honor of the national rose society was in every way successful. Probably 100 members of the profession, many of them of national reputation, sat down to an excellent dinner. Willis N. Rudd acted as toastmaster and his happy manner of presenting the speakers did much to evoke replies that were felicitous and to the point. The best of good feeling prevailed throughout.

Perhaps nothing will better illustrate the hustling Chicago spirit than an incident that occurred at this banquet. When the guests were ready to take their places at the table a flashlight photograph of the room was taken; about an hour after a neatly mounted proof of the picture was shown to each of the diners.

Peter Reinberg's.

It rained and rained, so you could not expect that water-soaked party of seven to get enthusiastic over even a million and a quarter square feet of glass, but the last man of the party had the pleasure to be overtaken by Peter Reinberg himself and had a pleasant chat with the man who is the living contradiction to the ones who ask you sneeringly whether you ever heard of a millionaire florist. This too brief chat was interrupted by the alderman's henchmen (he is up for reelection, you know), but it lasted long enough to make one of the seven forget that his feet were wet and that it was raining very hard indeed.

SUGGESTIONS

Hotbeds.

With the heavy inroads on bench space by Easter plants and the rapid growth now being made by bedding stock, the grower's ingenuity is now taxed to properly accommodate and give the requisite space to his plants. The weather has now become sufficiently warm to allow the removal of some of the hardier bedding stock to frames, more especially where they can be stood over a little warm manure. In hotbeds we have a relief for the congestion which usually exists in all establishments early in April. If the sash is tight and the frames well made, it is now perfectly safe to move quite a few of the hardier bedding plants into them. First, however, throw out any loam in the beds and replace it with a mixture of fresh stable manure and leaves. If this can be thrown in a heap and allowed to sweat for a day or two first, all the better. Moisten any material which may be dry, but do not soak it. When placed in the beds it must be firmly tramped, and if, after this is done, it has a depth of eight inches, it will give a genial warmth for some weeks. Place a coating of coal ashes over the fermenting material and it is then ready for occupancy.

After April 10, or earlier in the more southern states, geraniums, verbenas, fuchsias, alyssum, asters, stocks, dianthus, Drummond's phlox, lobelia, ageratum, antirrhinum and candytuft, among other varieties, will be found to succeed as well in the hotbed as in the greenhouse. Of course, mats and shutters are needed on cold nights for a few weeks yet. Quilted mats packed with wool are durable; burlap answers well. Straw is probably more used than any other kind, but makes the glass present an untidy appearance all the time.

After the middle of April, if a depth of twelve to eighteen inches of warm manure is placed in a frame, such plants as coleus, alternanthera, heliotrope, achyranthes, acalyphas, and others enjoying a warm, moist temperature, will be found to grow much better in the hotbed than in the greenhouse. It may seem to some obsolete, but we still find that one or two sashes devoted to propagating this class of bedding plants gives us better results than we can get in the greenhouses, where the declining amount of fire heat used means that the cutting benches are to be cooler. The geniality and warmth in a hotbed is surprising. By closing up early in the afternoon after damping them down, they can be run up to 100 degrees or more in the shade if wanted, and the growth made is an eye-opener to the uninitiated in this old but useful branch of horticulture.

Dahlias succeed well started in a gentle hotbed. Cannas grow fast in the warmer frames. Vegetable plants of all kinds grow sturdier and better in them than in the greenhouse; in fact, their usefulness can scarcely be estimated. Careful ventilation and watering, particularly in dark weather, are a necessity.

We should have said that if your sashes face due south, they will be better for this bedding stock. Any you may have facing north, east or west will soon be useful, however, for hardening purposes or growing plants in during the summer.

Planting Hardy Shrubs.

This is the rush season with the nurserymen, who must crowd an enormous amount of energy into the next few weeks. The retail florists invariably have more or less hardy shrubs to set out for their customers. Not all can lay claim to belong to that rapidly swelling army of landscape gardeners, but many could, no doubt, give points to not a few of this latter class when it comes to the really practical points of the game. A noted tree authority in the east not long ago stated that if he had $20 to spend on trees and shrubs, he would use $19 of that sum in proper preparation of the soil. Far too often the reverse is practiced. High-priced evergreens, for instance, will have a hole dug barely large enough to contain the roots, and possibly a few shovelfuls of loam may be thrown in to "give it a good start." The start such stock gets is speedily followed by their finish.

Cut off any broken fragments of roots on the trees or shrubs you are to plant. Make generous holes; the bigger the better. Go down two feet and loosen up the material at the bottom. Take away all gravel and poor material. Do not use any fresh manure in the compost. Good loam is preferable to a mixture containing even well decayed manure. Place the latter on the surface after planting, to serve as a useful mulch and gentle stimulant. Be sure to firm the compost below the roots thoroughly. Spread the roots out evenly and firm the soil well after they are covered. Too many plants still have the holes filled up at once and a little tramping completes the job. In firm planting much of the secret of success lies. Loosely set out stock may be expected to fail. Let all manure used be well decayed. Before planting, if roots are dry, dip them in a tub of clay and water. In the case of evergreens, after partly filling in the holes give a soaking of water and allow this to settle before filling in the balance.

A point to be remembered in planting large sized shrubs and trees is to prune them back quite severely. Particularly is this necessary with oaks. All deciduous flowering shrubs are better cut back after planting. Much of the nursery stock sold is carried over winter in sheds, packed in sand. These plants look fresh on arrival, but a few days' exposure to the sun soon disfigures them and, as a rule, they need a severe cutting back. If you can secure fresh, outdoor dug nursery stock, it is much to be preferred.

Propagating.

Such plants as coleus and alternanthera can still be propagated and will make fine plants by June 1. The place to grow alternanthera is in a hotbed. With the reduced fire heat in the houses it hangs fire, but give it a nice bottom heat, such as hotbeds afford, and it will grow apace. Heliotropes, salvias, ageratums, acalyphas, lemon verbenas and other sorts may still be rooted. Fuchsias for late flowering, marguerites, hydrangeas, dahlias, and such decorative subjects as dracaenas, crotons, dieffenbachias, pandanus and panicum, will all root quickly in a good bottom heat if the sand is kept constantly moist. Be sure to pot off the little plants before they become hard and stunted.

Show Pelargoniums.

Some of the pelargoniums, on which pinching was discontinued very early, will be in good condition for Easter and promise to make very salable plants. Pelargoniums want a cool and well ventilated house at all stages of their growth, and are better if given full sunlight until the flowers open, when a little shade will be found necessary. At Memorial day they are very useful, and while they will not bloom as zonal pelargoniums do, still we always have a fair call for them. There are some fine varieties now in commerce and it will pay anyone growing these plants to secure a small set of the newer ones. Any plants becoming pot-bound, if in less than 5-inch pots, had better be potted on. It will well repay you for the extra labor. Feed plants twice a week which are in their flowering pots and well rooted. Use weak nitrate of soda water if the foliage is at all pale. Remember the partiality of aphids for these plants and do not neglect the regular fumigation.

FUNERAL FLOWERS.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph showing the floral arrangement for the funeral of a prominent citizen of Indianapolis. The flowers were furnished by various Indianapolis florists and represented a value of from $1,000 to $1,500. The arrangement for the funeral was placed in the hands of Bertermann Bros. Co. The picture shows nicely how well they executed the work. The funeral was held in a public hall, the stage, as shown, being banked with plants. A large rug was spread for the casket and the flowers were dispersed about the end of the hall, the effort being to give each piece an opportunity to show for itself, which it does not have where the flowers are massed, as is necessary in a small room, and as is sometimes seen where space is available for more artistic arrangement. One of the prettiest ideas was that of roping off the space around the casket by the use of pyramidal boxwood in decorated tubs, the plants fastened together by strings of smilax.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Yucca Gloriosa From Texas.

We have sent to the REVIEW a head of bloom from one of the Yucca gloriosa growing in our yard. The spike submitted is about the usual size—from two to three feet in height and a foot or more in diameter. Our plants in previous years have always been in bloom at Easter. This season, however, as Easter is late and our spring so early, the blooming period will be too early for that festival. We have used many of the blooms in funeral designs during the last two weeks. They keep fresh longer than many flowers on the graves in the hot sun.

There has been no winter here this year—only two nights with 10 or 12 degrees of frost early in the season. Now—March 19—roses are coming into full bloom. Tulips, Phlox Drummondii and other spring flowers are in bloom. Narcissi and hyacinths have been fine, but are almost over now. Spring trade is good, with everybody planting out roses and general bedding plants.

RUST ON CARNATIONS.

Please advise me what to do to save a lot of Victory carnation cuttings. I enclose leaves taken from the plants. All are affected. The plants are in slat houses, open at the sides and top. The foliage is never wet and the soil is only sprinkled.

A. L. H.

The leaves you sent are affected with the common carnation rust, which we feared and dreaded years ago, almost as much as we do smallpox. While we have learned to handle it now so that it seldom causes any loss among the blooming plants, yet occasionally it will get a hold on a batch of cuttings and ruin them before it can be checked. Certain varieties are, of course, more subject to it than others, and Victory is one of these.

Last year we heard considerable complaint of cuttings being full of rust when taken from the sand, the disease appearing during the last week or ten days before the cuttings were taken out. We had the same experience, too. This year we are not troubled so much, but we notice it appear just after the cuttings are potted. In that case it can be controlled better, because after a few days in the pots the sun can be allowed to shine on the plants, and other remedies can be applied which cannot be applied to advantage in the cutting bench before the cuttings are well rooted. Cardinal was another bad one, and also Adonis.

I hardly think you should blame the propagator altogether. I would advise picking off all affected leaves and burning them. Then dust the plants with dry-slaked lime and keep the foliage as dry as practical. The plants, if they possess any vigor at all, should soon grow out of it. Do not overwater the plants.

A. F. J. B.

LEAF SPOT ON CARNATIONS.

Would you kindly tell what disease causes the brown spots on the leaves of the enclosed plants and starts to dry up the plant? The variety is Hannah Hobart, and the disease is beginning to spread to others as well. How could I fight it?

A. A.

The specimen forwarded showed an aggravated case of carnation leaf-spot, or Septoria Dianthii. All plants as badly affected as the specimen would best be pulled up and burned, as they are full of the disease and at this late date could not be made to produce a crop of good blooms before the end of the season. This disease, if taken in hand in its early stages, can be checked and stamped out readily enough, but when a plant is thoroughly permeated with it, it will never recover its normal vigor and health.

After pulling up all the badly affected plants, pick off the diseased leaves from the plants left standing and burn them up. Then mix up a batch of Bordeaux mixture and apply it once each week. You can wash it off each time just prior to applying the next batch if you like, say, the day before.

Next season, keep a sharp lookout for all such diseases and, as soon as you discover any signs of them, begin your work to check and eradicate them at once. Don't wait until the plants are doomed.

A. F. J. B.

interfered with. This practice, therefore, is almost entirely abandoned for the apparently better one of sterilizing the soil by the use of live steam. This work can be done either upon the benches, when proper provision for doing so has been provided, or it can be accomplished by means of a specially constructed sterilizing box. If the work is to be done upon the benches, it can be accomplished by the use of drain tile laid at intervals lengthwise or crosswise of the benches and provided with an opening through which a pressure hose carrying live steam can be inserted. The steam passes through the tile and out into the soil, heating it to a sufficiently high degree to destroy these organisms. One difficulty with this method is that it requires a large amount of steam, and it is not easy to cover the bed so as to hold the temperature in the surface soil at the same point that it is in the deeper layers. It has this advantage, that it does not necessitate the removal of the soil, but in ordinary greenhouse practice, where raised beds are used and the soil is annually removed, this advantage is of little consequence.

The Sterilizing Box.

The specially constructed sterilizing box is undoubtedly the most satisfactory system of soil sterilization. The boxes, of which there should be two, can be constructed of such size as to enable the operation of filling and emptying to go on simultaneously; that is, while one is being sterilized, the other can be emptied and refilled, so that while the soil in one box is becoming thoroughly cooked the other will be ready for the admission of the steam. In the construction of boxes different plans have been followed, and those best suited to the particular conditions will, of course, be adopted by the grower. In general, however, a box two and one-half feet deep, six feet wide and twelve to sixteen feet in length will be found satisfactory. The steam can be admitted either through drain tiles laid in the bottom of the box, or, perhaps better, through 1½-inch pipes perforated six inches apart with ⅜-inch holes. The holes in the pipes should all be made along one side and in line, and when the pipes are placed in the manifold from which the steam is to be drawn the orifices should all look down, the pipes being arranged at intervals sufficiently wide apart to admit of the use of a standard size shovel or spade between, and the rows about an inch or an inch and a half from the bottom of the box. The object in placing the holes downward is to prevent them becoming clogged by earth packed about the pipes.

The customary method of determining the point to which sterilization should be carried is to place a medium-sized potato in the surface two inches of the soil, and when it has become cooked by the heating the soil is considered to be sufficiently sterilized. It is found that high-pressure steam is more effective than low-pressure steam for this work, and the conditions usually recommended are forty to sixty pounds' pressure, which gives a drier steam and does the cooking more rapidly than does low pressure.

Necessary Precautions.

In order that the work of sterilization may be thoroughly effective, it is necessary to observe certain precautions. These organisms are of a low order, and, like all low forms of life, multiply very rap-

SOIL AND THE FLORIST

Soil Sterilization.

In those portions of the United States where the soil does not freeze during the winter months, or freezes only slightly, low organisms, called nematodes, are able to maintain themselves in the soil throughout the winter. Under such environments these organisms have become parasites upon a great variety of plants, and interfere seriously with the commercial cultivation of many crops throughout the southern portion of the United States, and in other sections where winter conditions of the character above described prevail. These little eel worms, by attacking the tissue of the roots of the plants, cause galls or enlargements to appear upon the roots, and as these are of a chalky nature, the normal function of the root is interfered with, and the plant languishes and in many instances dies. In practically all serious infections from nematodes the possibility of a profitable crop is defeated. In the open there is no satisfactory way of combating these organisms except in the development of resistant strains of plants. In many instances perennials have been able to develop characters which make them immune or able to contend with these injuries, but in the case of most annual plants conditions are quite different, and few of them, or comparatively few of them, are able to resist severe attacks of nematodes. On small areas it is possible to add materials which are more or less effective in the control of these organisms, and in some instances it is possible to sterilize the soil by means of heat, but on large commercial areas this is a different question.

In greenhouses, however, the problem is quite different. As has been noted, the soil is prepared artificially and the question of keeping it free from nematodes is much more easily handled than in field practice. While root galls upon certain of our greenhouse plants have been known for a number of years, particularly upon tomatoes, cucumbers and roses, it was not until about 1892 that any definite information was to be had upon the subject. It had been determined that by freezing the soil in which nematodes were abundant they could be destroyed, and a clean crop then grown in the same soil, but as not all the soil which is used in the greenhouse can be annually frozen, the idea of sterilizing the soil by heat took hold upon the growers and has been practiced with good results.

Methods of Sterilizing.

The first idea was to sterilize the soil by heating it over an open fire in a shallow pan. This is effective for sand to be used in propagating buds, and for sand to be scattered upon the surface of seed pans and flats where germinating seeds or spores are to be handled. When heating in an open fire in a pan is resorted to, in soils containing a large proportion of organic matter the physical condition of the soil is very perceptibly changed and is less practicable than when not so heated. In fact, its water-holding capacity is modified; its physical conditions are also altered by the destruction of a portion of the humus in the soil, and then, too, chemical changes are decidedly

A paper by L. C. Corbett, of the United States Department of Agriculture, read before the New York Florists' Club, March 9, 1908, and continued from the Review of March 12 and March 19.

House of Cyclamens at Haugen &amp; Swanson's, St. Paul idly. It therefore requires but a small number of nematodes to be introduced into a bench or greenhouse to thoroughly infest the entire bench or house. If it is found that the plant is infested by these enemies, the precaution should be taken to not only sterilize the growing soil, but the potting soil and the sand in the propagating bench, as well, should all be thoroughly sterilized. If any one of these steps is omitted it becomes an easy matter for the nematodes to be introduced, either from the sand adhering to the roots of the plants when they are transferred from the propagating bench, or through the soil used in the first handling, before the rooted cuttings are finally transferred to the field or growing bench. In the northern portion of the United States there is comparatively little danger of contamination from field-grown plants unless the field be mulched or manured with compost or soil which has been removed in the spring from infested greenhouses. Soil which has been exposed to repeated freezing during the winter months can be counted upon as free from nematodes.

In most instances potting soil and growing soil can be rendered free from nematodes by careful precautions during the composting period. This requires that the soil be composted at least ten months in advance of the time it is to be used in the house, so that it may remain in the open throughout the entire winter, and the heap should be made broad, flat, and shallow enough so that the action of the frost shall penetrate throughout the whole heap. Under ordinary conditions, however, the heaps are not made so that frost action will extend from top to bottom of them. It is necessary in the latitude of this city (New York) to make compost heaps that are to be exposed in this way not more than twelve or fifteen inches in depth, and ten inches would be better. There is an objection to this; if the heaps are exposed to the weather, more leaching takes place than in deeper and more compact heaps, so that it is undoubtedly a wise plan to follow the customary system of composting and make sure of freedom from nematodes by the use of steam sterilization. This, of course, can be carried on quite economically in greenhouses heated by steam, but where a supplemental boiler must be provided in order to secure steam at proper pressure, a very considerable item of expense will be incurred.

Another Advantage of Sterilization.

There is, however, an added advantage in sterilizing the soil over that of mere freedom from nematodes, weeds and disease germs, all of which, or a large percentage of which, are destroyed by sterilization. Sterilized soil, when steam is employed, has been observed to produce a more luxuriant growth than similar soil not so treated. The process of sterilization seems to hasten the liberation of plant foods and to render the physical condition of the soil better than that not so treated. The application of moist heat at a high temperature has the effect of digesting a considerable portion of the organic matter in the soil, rendering it more suitable for the action of the bacteria and the assimilation of plant foods so liberated by the plant. This is perhaps of sufficient importance in greenhouse operations to justify the use of the sterilizer even under conditions known to be free from nematodes and other soil troubles.

From what has been said, some of the intricate work involved in the transformation of the crude materials of the soil, of plants and animal products, into available food for our crops, can be conceived. The natural processes are going on constantly, and man, by a thorough understanding of them, can in a way supplement them and increase their activity. In a great majority of cases the natural processes are beneficial. Only when they become excessive in some particular do they delay or interfere with the preparation and liberation of plant food. The grower should be on the alert to take advantage of every opportunity offered him to supplement and to stimulate the work of nature for his own benefit.

VIOLETS AND CYCLAMEN.

Among the specializing growers in the vicinity of the Twin Cities there is none more prominent than Haugen & Swanson. The accompanying picture of one of their cyclamen houses shows what can be and is done here in growing this plant. Mr. Haugen saves the seeds from selected plants of his own growing and has one of the best strains in the country. Only ordinary care and attention are given the plants, but ordinary care with him means daily watching and working among them. The specialties of this firm are violets and cyclamens and they are undoubtedly the violet kings of their section. They grow only double varieties, but grow them so well that "St. Paul on the Mississippi" will soon be as famous in florists' circles as Rhinebeck on the Hudson. Their neat plant, though not large, is well kept and is located on a side hill with a southern exposure on West Seventh street, near the historic Fort Snelling, and only a short distance from the Mississippi river. When the hot weather is on and there is nothing doing at the greenhouses, Mr. Haugen sits on the river bank and catches 15-pound pickerel to while away the time. Mr. Swanson is not now active in the firm. X. Y. Z.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

LATE ramblers intended for Memorial day should now be breaking freely.

Do not forget to pot off the little bouvardias propagated from root cuttings.

POT off the seedling Salvia splendens before they become crowded and lanky.

If the first buds on your Easter lilies are now showing white, they will be all right.

Do not be in a hurry about pruning hardy roses. A week hence will be time enough.

MAKE a first planting of gladioli outdoors as soon as the ground is free from frost and dry.

GET in a good batch of gardenias. Keep them hot and moist and they will soon make roots.

REMOVE the covering from the Dutch bulb beds now. Be careful not to break the brittle shoots.

THE present is sufficiently early to sow cosmos. If started too soon it becomes of unwieldy stature.

BEDDING geraniums are growing fast and will need spreading out frequently. Pot along any still requiring it.

ARE there any annuals you have forgotten to sow? Look over your list and, if any are forgotten, sow at once.

THE town of Wellesley, Mass., will be able to show a rose house 1,000 feet long next season, at the Waban Conservatories.

WATCH closely the Dutch bulbous stock for Easter. A few warm days may necessitate its removal to a cold shed or cellar.

THE king of the Belgians has consented to open the great exhibition of the Royal Agricultural and Botanical Society of Ghent, April 25.

MEMORIAL day lilies should now be three or four inches high. Give them a sunny bench and drop some tobacco dust on the tops of the shoots.

JUST prior to the adjournment of the ninth annual meeting of the American Rose Society, at Chicago, March 27, a paper was received from Alex Dickson, Newtownards, Ireland, dealing with his many years of experience in hybridizing the rose. It is said to be the first time this noted grower, raiser of Killarney, Liberty and many of our best garden roses, has accepted an invitation from any horticultural body to set forth his thoughts on the subject, and the paper, which will be found on page 3 of this issue of the REVIEW, will be read with much interest, both in this country and in Europe.

CALL THE POLICE.

Complaint has been received that someone claiming to represent a number of trade papers is soliciting subscriptions for the REVIEW and that those who paid have not received the paper. When last heard of, this petty swindler was operating at Albany, N. Y., where he signed receipts with the name J. O. Pullen.

The REVIEW never heard of J. O. Pullen until complaint was made that the paper did not come after subscriptions were given him. If he approaches you, call the police.

The REVIEW has no subscription agents other than the well-known members of the trade who are its local correspondents. Don't pay money to strangers. The mails are much safer.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The improvement in the market noted last week was not of permanent character. A few days of renewed activity gave hope of a permanent return to normal conditions, but the latter part of last week saw the market back to the state in which it has been for several weeks. The relapse was possibly not quite so bad as the first attack, but it extinguished the hopes of the wholesalers and growers. It appears that the weather is playing a large part just now. Bright, warm days have brought in increased supply in all lines, but a change to dark weather may make a radical difference, as it did a week ago.

The Beauty market is not undergoing the pressure that was anticipated. There are enough Beauties for all requirements and the buyers refuse to countenance any stiffening in prices, but the supply does not demand slaughter sales. Quality is excellent and prices, while low, are not out of harmony with other lines.

While there are plenty of roses of all varieties and every grade, including a large percentage of select stock, the rose market would not be overburdened if demand were up to the mark.

It is in carnations that the most trouble is experienced in cleaning out without sacrifice sales. Also, the quality of carnations is not as good as it was. Violets are seldom cleaned up and prices seem to have reached the point where they can go no lower. The bulk of the receipts are sold at from $1.50 to $2.50 per thousand. Some fine sweet peas go well, and there are quite a good many of them. Shorter stock is little wanted.

Calla lilies are immovable, the quantity is so great. Easter lilies are more than equal to the requirements and as April 19 approaches will become more plentiful. All bulbous stock is abundant and difficult to move, even at the low prices prevailing this season. The southern jonquils are a decided factor and do much to depress the general market. The cheap sales people can buy for $10 as many of these flowers as they need in a day's business that would call for $50 worth of roses and carnations.

It has been said that common cut ferns would be short before the end of the season, but the present indications are that the reverse may prove to be the case. The spring openings make a fair sale for smilax and asparagus strings.

Easter Prospects.

The one subject for conversation at present is the prospect for Easter business. Some of the wholesalers report Easter orders already coming in and the general expectation is for a good business, at prices somewhat below those which have prevailed at Easter in recent years.

In the matter of lilies, there appears to be a large number, but many are only a few inches high and a large proportion will not meet the requirements of critical trade. So it is thought first-class lilies will bring 12½ cents to 15 cents. If we get some hot, bright days it may alter the situation by bringing the lilies in too soon.

It is figured there will be an abundant supply in all other lines, but that the demand will easily take all the shipping grades, so that buyers will be wise in placing orders for enough to insure them against loss should weather conditions be unfavorable and produce a shortage of the right grade of material.

State of Business.

Clifford Pruner has returned from a business trip in the eastern and southern Chicago territory, Detroit, Louisville and St. Louis being on his route. He says that business was fair, the manufacturing towns being the only ones to show any falling off. Where agriculture supports the community, he found business as good as ever, and in some cases better than it has been before. The farther east he went the more the manufacturers seemed to be affected. Mr. Pruner will not go on the road again until after E. H. Hunt has shipped the Easter orders.

Ferns From the Pacific.

There was a time when practically the whole country looked to New Eng-side, Cal., at a considerable saving in transportation charges over the northern route. The car contained 960,000 ferns and there are two other cars en route. These are the same ferns that the Winterson Co. handled in less quantity last season. The distance seems to be the only thing to prevent the state of Washington being a regular source of supply for Chicago wholesalers.

Banquet to Rosarians.

There were seventy guests and thirty local people at the banquet given by the Chicago Florists' Club to the rose show visitors March 26. A photograph of the banqueters is reproduced on page 5 of this issue. When cigars had been lighted President Leonard Kill introduced W. N. Rudd to act as toastmaster. No speaker took over five minutes, among those called upon being F. H. Traendly, president of the S. A. F.; Robert Simpson, president of the Rose Society; W. J. Stewart, Leonard Kill, Philip Breitmeyer, Benjamin Hammond, J. C. Vaughan, W. F. Kasting, J. A. Valentine, E. V. Hallock, P. Welch and W. H. Elliott. It may well be recorded that the affair was one of the pleasantest in the club's history.

During the evening the visiting ladies were entertained at dinner at the Tip Top Inn and at the English Grand Opera at the Auditorium.

Various Notes.

Miss Nell M. Sisler, who was for many years with the late E. H. Vaughan & Sperry say the growers are taking to the shredded cattle manure and that they have handled several carloads during March.

Word comes from Crown Point, Ind., that Aloys Frey, head gardener at Lincoln Park, has bought what is known as the Krost tract of thirty acres northeast of that town and will at once build a range of glass and establish a nursery.

E. C. Amling says that, taking everything into consideration, he is more than pleased with results for the month of March. He says his sales were slightly in excess of those of a year ago, although last year Easter fell on the last day of March.

C. W. McKellar's new ice-box was installed last week and is now in operation. It is an Orr & Lockett box of improved design, with plate glass in one side to permit examination of the orchids without taking them out of the box.

George Reinberg says that one of the pleasing features of the business in recent years has been the way the old Beauty plants have sold. Not many years ago these were dumped, but now there is a good sale for them and Mr. Reinberg expects to dispose of from 10,000 to 15,000 this year at a nickel apiece or better.

The Florists' Club will hold its April meeting at the Union restaurant tonight, April 2.

Miss Martha Gunterberg was absent from the Flower Growers' market last week, being ill with the grippe.

J. A. Valentine, of Denver, says he gets to Chicago so often he feels quite at home here and has on this trip made application for membership in the Chicago Florists' Club.

C. M. Dickinson has been at home ill for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Bassett are now at Arrowhead Springs, Cal., and have decided not to return to Chicago until about Easter.

C. L. Washburn says the way the blooms of the Orland P. Bassett carnation stood up at last week's show pleased him exceedingly. The blooms cut Tuesday were still in first-class shape Saturday morning, when he gave them to the art students.

Scheiden & Schoos, at Evanston, will rebuild all benches throughout their 45,000 feet of glass this season. They have bought three carloads of pecky cypress to do it with, including 18,000 feet of 2x4 pecky scantling for runners and crosspieces.

The George Wittbold Co. had a large decoration at the Fair, March 30, and has had a great deal of other State street work in the last fortnight.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports that this week's department store decorations have cleaned them out of wild smilax and brought to an end the most successful season they ever have had with this specialty.

J. J. Kruchten is handling rambler rose and hydrangea plants and finds them good sellers.

James McCrea & Co., who supply greenhouse owners with steam specialties, will move May 1 to 63 and 65 West Washington street, where they will have double their present facilities.

Peter Reinberg has received the endorsement of both the Municipal Voters' League and the United Societies, and so certain is his reelection regarded that he has been appointed a member of the non-partisan committee on organization of the city council, which will go to West Baden the Friday after election and work up the council committees "far from the madding crowd."

The Tribune will have a gardening department this season and announces prizes aggregating $625 for the best gardens, and $250 for the best window boxes.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market is just in such a state that one can hardly say it is bad or good. There is plenty of everything in the cut flower line to be had at any of the wholesale houses, but not enough demand to clean up in any one variety. White stock seems to have the best demand at present, as there were last week several large funerals at which a number of large designs were seen, especially at School Superintendent Soldan's funeral, which was held from the Central high school. Nearly all the florists in the city had a design or two to make up.

At present there is a good deal of speculation as to the supply for Easter, and the main talk is about lilies, which some say will come in too early, as Easter is yet three weeks back, but no doubt there will be enough for all. Other bulb stock will be all cut out.

On Monday, March 30, stock was coming in freely at the commission houses and the demand was good. Roses, carnations, sweet peas, violets and all bulbous stock were of extra good quality.

Weather conditions are not of the best, as it is cloudy, cold and rainy.

Various Notes.

'Tis neither rank, nor wealth, nor state,
 But advertising that makes men great.

The above was the motto used at a banquet given by the St. Louis Advertising Men's League, at the Planters' Hotel, March 25. The tables were beautifully decorated.

Gifford Pinchot, United States forester, addressed the St. Louis Society of Pedagogy last week, at the Central high school. In his remarks he said that the forestry problem is becoming critical, and declared that the future will suffer from present carelessness. Professor William Trelease, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, also spoke. The attendance was large.

Herman Riessen, brother of Mrs. Bertha Burchel, of the Riessen Floral Co., died last week. The funeral took place March 26, from the family residence, 3484 South Jefferson avenue. The large circle of friends in the trade extend their sympathy.

Jules Burdett, on South Vandeventer avenue, is supplying the St. Louis Seed Co. with a fine lot of Dutch hyacinths in pots. The bulbs were furnished by the seed company last fall. The company is using its old store, which it vacated recently, to store these plants, which number in the thousands.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society has issued its first bulletin, naming in it a list of prizes for the best gardens, window or porch boxes and back yards, in all amounting to $185. The committee on awards will make inspections from time to time and the prizes will be awarded during the fall show.

Nat Kingsley, of the Mullanphy Flower Co., who was reported missing in the last issue, turned up safe and sound and reported having made a trip to visit some of his friends, not thinking that his disappearance would create a sensation here. So everything is running as usual at the Mullanphy.

Harry Rieman, who was arrested some time ago for passing worthless checks on a number of florists here, pleaded guilty and was bound over on $500 bail and held for the grand jury.

Fred Foster, who was hurt a week ago, is out on crutches and was not so badly injured as first reported, but it will be some time before he can do away with the sticks.

W. C. Smith & Co. are having a good run on tree boxes, garden trellises and chairs. They are also fitting up this department with other supplies for the garden.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., attended the American Rose Society's ninth annual meeting at Chicago last week, and his many friends in the trade here were pleased to learn that he was successful in capturing some of the prizes for roses. His Richmond, Chatenay and Ivory, on which he took first, are consigned to this market daily and handled by C. A. Kuehn.

Among the St. Louis florists who attended the Rose Society meeting at Chicago last week were F. H. Meinhardt and O. G. Koenig.

Our nurserymen, Sanders, H. Weber & Sons, J. W. Schuette and Emil Rothenheber, have had an exceptionally good year in fruit trees, ornamental trees and shrubs of all kinds, and are still busy with a few late orders.

George H. Angermueller is handling a nice lot of American Beauties consigned to him by Heller Bros.; also, good Brides and Maids from the same firm.

Henry Berning received large consignments of extra fine carnations last week from Winter, Ude and other Kirkwood growers.

The directors of the Henry Shaw estate have decided to grade a large tract of land belonging to the estate, from Grand and Lafayette avenues, west, within the next year. These improvements will cause the removal of florists Eggeling, Riessen and Burdett, who occupy parts of this tract with greenhouses.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers and George Waldbart, on Grand avenue, are showing a fine lot of azaleas in full bloom, which are attracting some attention.

The Florists' Club members should not forget that on next Thursday afternoon, April 9, the regular monthly meeting takes place in the new meeting hall, Eleventh and Locust streets, at 2 o'clock. A discussion on "Easter Stock" will be one of the features. J. J. B.

While in the city on business, March 25, Thomas J. Brown, a florist of Jefferson City, Mo., called on Miss Gertrude Eaton, to whom he was to have been married April 20, and persuaded her to elope with him to Clayton, where they were married by Rev. Walter Langtry.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

We have had a touch of summer weather and the markets were flooded with roses. Grand stock, too, but prices fell. The demand could not keep pace with the supply. March 28 found everything at low ebb, and notwithstanding a week of tremendous funeral work, farewell floral demonstrations at the opera and elaborate dinners to princes and such, there was always enough and to spare. The display of roses in all the wholesale houses Saturday afternoon looked like an echo of the convention of the rose society.

Sunday night the last breath of winter blew in, as was inevitable after such unseasonable heat, and on Monday the temperature had gone back to freezing again. It will be fortunate for all if the chill north wind blows steadily for a week or two. Otherwise, everything will be off crop for Easter; even violets, which we fondly hope to see make one last kick before they die. Some say 75 cents will be top for them at Easter. Their quality shows already the effect of the warm spell, and as to prices, wagon loads of them went to the Athenians at $1 a thousand. Not so, however, with the single violet, which at last has asserted its sway. Fine long-stemmed, large flowered stock I noticed at McConnell's and other retail stores, going readily at $2 to $3 a bunch. But the good old days when Louise brought $3 a hundred, wholesale, seem gone beyond recall.

The southern daffodils are everywhere. I saw the best of them selling at 5 cents a bunch Saturday. They are arriving in splendid condition and there must be millions of them. No one seems to want bulbous flowers. Tulips, hyacinths, freesias, valley even, display their charms in vain. Lilies are abundant; callas, never finer. Prices are low. Easter probabilities are about the same as last year and every year. Quality talks 12 cents; the next grade is 10 cents, and in large lots, I have heard of orders booked on and off the plants at $80 a thousand. One thing you may depend upon: Easter will be far better than the pessimists prophesy. There will be a complete clean-up of everything good at fair prices, but the pickler will get no returns whatever, if he has not yet learned his lesson and continues to send old stuff to the wholesaler, as usual.

Plenty of gardenias are here yet, and there will be. The stock of Thomas Young, Jr., is as fine as comes to the city. His wholesale distribution of it is large and his own windows, at 500 Fifth avenue, utilize it in abundance, with orchids and azaleas, for daily artistic decoration. McManus says a dozen or more varieties of orchids are coming in daily, with the tendency of prices recessional.

Carnations continue coming in battalions, and prices will not advance much before Easter. The best of them ought to touch 5 or 6 cents, the experts say, and Maids should rise to 10 cents and Beauties to at least 35 cents for the holiday. Good Beauties could be had on Saturday at $15 a hundred. Even in small quantities nothing went above 20 cents.

I note in the records of 1907 and 1906 almost similar conditions—dullness and low prices before Easter, and yet Easter itself maintained its reputation. So it will this year. The outlook is surely brighter than at any time since Christmas. The banks and trust companies are reopening, the value of securities is rising, the country, and especially this city, is awakening to the fact that the American field in every line of industry is boundless and that this great country has only begun to live.

Various Notes.

F. H. Traendly and John Young are back from the west with enthusiastic tales of the executive conference at the Falls and the elaborate plans for the greatest convention ever. They are especially eloquent as to the courtesy and entertainment of their Chicago hosts, and the beauty and success of the rose convention.

The auction sales are drawing. Ambrose Cleary was enthused by the crowd of buyers last week and prices realized are satisfactory. The display of nursery stock of every kind is already abundant. William Elliott, on Fulton street, is in fine voice and quite satisfied with the start of the spring race, patrons and prices proving pleasing. Roses, rhododendrons and shrubs in great variety appeal not only to the florist seeking bargains, but to the multitudinous suburbanite, who has discovered this source of supply, much to the disgust of the local florists in the adjoining towns. April 1 the Fruit Auction Co. began its regular daily sales of plants at auction, an innovation in the distributing of florists' goods that, if a success, opens up a field that may mean much for floriculture in and around New York. John P. Cleary is the salesman.

William C. Krick has been on the sick list for several weeks.

The ribbon industry goes right on and upward, despite local depression in the luxury trades. Ribbons have become a necessity to the florist. Wertheimer Bros. already find their new store too small for their growing trade. They are busy nights now, shipping Easter orders. Sidney Wertheimer is back from a successful western trip. He says no one talks depression outside of New York.

Schloss Bros. are now comfortably settled in their new store at 542 Broadway, with plenty of room for the large and varied lines they always carry. Here, too, night work indicates the big Easter demand. Emil Schloss entertained the stork last month.

Monday, April 13, at the first meeting of the New York Florists' Club in the old headquarters at the Grand Opera House building, Eighth avenue and Twenty-eighth street, every member is requested to make a special effort to be on hand. There will be many interesting features. Will Rickards has some original surprises brewing in his department, and the following exhibits will add greatly to the joy of the home-coming: Newport Fairy, by the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.; Rhea Reid, from E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; Wyndmoor, from Myers & Samtman, Philadelphia; My Maryland, from John Cook, Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. Potter Palmer, from Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; Mrs. Jardine, from W. P. Craig, Philadelphia; Carnation Lloyd, from A. Jahn, New Bedford, Mass. There will be other exhibits from local growers and altogether a splendid spring show will be staged.

A visit to S. Jacobs & Sons' last week found the quartette head over heels in work, and cheerful as to the outlook from the practical standpoint of booked contracts that speak with no uncertain sound of Long Island greenhouse enterprise.

the daily papers, with a lot of unfounded conclusions by writers who cannot tell a lily from a turnip. The cry of “wolf” does not scare the local growers of perfect flowers at all. Even the department stores will have nothing to do with them. Funeral work is all they deserve and all they get. It is an appropriate finish.

The Van Praag Co. opens its new store on West Fortieth street, near Broadway and opposite the great New York library, April 1. It is a large, handsome store and is to be artistically fitted up.

There are to be some changes in the wholesale district this spring; and some surprises among them. The veteran, James Hart, moves May 1 to 111 West Thirtieth street, close to where he began selling cut flowers over thirty years ago; and another of the younger, ambitious merchants has found his quarters cramped and has branched out into a full fledged wholesale nabob with an entire floor.

Joseph Leikens has rented the store near the corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-sixth street, close to Hodgson's old stand, for a term of years and will make this his headquarters immediately. He will continue his store on East Thirty-third street until spring, and also his branch at the Hotel Belmont, and will open the Newport store early, in anticipation of a good season, among the duchesses and countesses and princesses now expected to spend the summer there.

James Mallon's Sons, Brooklyn, handled over $2,000 worth of funeral work in one day last week, wreaths, casket covers and designs innumerable. Over 30,000 violets were purchased. The Brooklyn wholesalers, Bonnet & Blake and W. H. Kuebler, were drawn upon to the limit.

W. H. Kuebler joined the ranks of the Knights Templar last week and was bracing his nerves for the promised ordeal. He hopes to recover in time for the Easter rush, which is always immense in every section of the city of churches.

Samuel A. Woodrow is away booking plant orders for the Easter shipments and meeting with fine success.

The outing committee will meet at W. E. Marshall's, Monday, April 13.

Every member is requested to be present. Important matters must then be decided.

William Griffin, gardener for George Gould, of Lakewood, N. J., died last week, the funeral, March 30, being largely attended. He was highly esteemed by the gardening fraternity and a gentleman of wide experience and sterling character.

Among late visitors in New York were E. W. Breed, of Clinton, Mass.; George Shaffer, Washington; William J. Palmer, of Buffalo, and Carl Jurgens, Jr., of Newport, R. I.; and a host of bulb salesmen on their way to Europe, the majority somewhat disappointed, they say, at the decreased volume of business as compared with 1907.

Thirty cases of roses arrived March 28 for A. T. Boddington and most of them this week will be on their way. The firm has quadrupled its force of a year ago.

Charles Allen, of Queens, is on the sick-list. If he is well enough he will address the New York Florists' Club at its next meeting.

Frank Hicks & Co. will remove to 39

The rose cut daily at Coddington's big range reaches well into the thousands, the output being handled by H. E. Froment.

N. Lecakes & Co. say their cut flower and smilax department has grown rapidly during the last year and they will also handle flowering plants this year.

J. K. Allen has fully recovered from his tussle with the gripe and finds time to do some house building in his home town as well as maintain his city 6-o'clock-every-morning reputation. He declares in his twenty-one years' experience he has never seen the New York rose market so utterly demoralized as now.

Clarence Saltford has been recuperating for a week from an injured ankle.

Bowling.

The bowling club had its second spasm Friday, March 27, and made considerable progress, as the scores will demonstrate. Fenrich bowled 234, and Manda also qualified in the 200 class. For business purposes the bowling club will meet at 7 o'clock on bowling nights at President Marshall's, 146 West Twenty-third street. The last scores were:

The contest commences this week for the Traendly transportation. Bowling begins promptly at 8 o'clock. Two games will be rolled each evening for the club's convention team standing. Twenty members have qualified. Mr. Traendly thinks he put the average too low, after studying the results column.

Hodgson's flower store, an establishment which for nearly four decades was in Fifth avenue, has disappeared. Its last stand on the southwest corner of Fifty-sixth street has been closed and its affairs are being conducted from an apartment house in Fifty-eighth street, near Eighth avenue.

John M. Hodgson, an English florist, started the business in 1865, and speedily won the favor of New York society. The Astors, the Vanderbilts and other members of the four hundred generally were his customers. The original store was at Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street, where it remained for twenty-five years. It was moved to Thirty-seventh street, on the present site of Tiffany's, where it was for four years. The Fifty-sixth street store had been occupied for nine years. It was leased shortly before the death of the founder of the house.

The corporation which succeeded to the business in 1902 went into bankruptcy September 27, 1907. A new corporation has been formed and Mrs. Spalding, daughter of the founder, says that probably a new location on The Avenue will be found by fall.

The Market.

There is little that is new to report of cut flower conditions. On some days there is a fair call, but on the majority trade remains extremely dull. The near approach of Easter, it is hoped, will give the market a little fillip after the present week. Roses are abundant and cheap. Nice Bride, Maid, Chatenay and other varieties are selling for a mere song, and returns must be discouraging to the growers. Carnations show, if anything, a slightly better tone, but are in heavy supply. While the best grade flowers may clean out fairly well, no reasonable offer is refused for much of the balance. Violets are still quite abundant. The singles are deteriorating and the doubles are also of smaller size.

Bulbous stock is still plentiful and not selling at profitable prices. Lilies are not in much demand, nor are callas. Mignonette and antirrhinum continue to come in of excellent quality. English primroses are plentiful, as are pansies, forget-me-nots and marguerites. Lily of the valley is only in light demand at present. Sweet peas sell well.

Trade in pot plants is still somewhat sluggish, but another week will see a more active trade. Lilies are making 10 to 12½ cents per bud; more will probably bring the first named price, from present indications. Rambler roses, azaleas, genistas, acacias, marguerites, spiræas and other seasonable flowering plants are arriving of good quality.

Club Banquet.

Indications point to a splendid attendance at the annual club banquet April 1. A report of this must wait until next issue of the REVIEW. The reception committee consists of Duncan Finlayson, chairman; James Wheeler, W. Downs, F. E. Palmer, W. J. Stewart, George W. Butterworth and J. P. A. Guerineau. Edward MacMulkin has charge of the decorations and his corps of assistants consists of Peter Fisher, M. A. Patten, S. J. Goddard, P. Welch, Eber Holmes, W. H. Elliott, C. Holbrow, P. J. Turley, William Robb, George M. Anderson, Joshua Lawson and Thomas Pegler.

Peter M. Miller is floor director for the dancing, his assistants being W. J. Collins, William Wylie, Alex. Lowe, James L. Miller and Joshua Lawson. Edward Hatch, as usual, will make an ideal toastmaster. Miss Hanagan and Mrs. C. Whittet, as lady soloists, will leave nothing to be desired. The Ponagen orchestra will furnish music for those who trip the light fantastic.

Various Notes.

Edward J. Rogean, lately salesman for H. N. Eaton, at Park Street market, is now acting in a similar capacity for Paul Richwagen and others at his usual stand.

S. J. Goddard captured twenty-one carnation premiums at the Park Street market and Horticultural Society's exhibitions, the best record any grower has made for years in Boston. His stock is fit to run in any company.

William W. Tailby, of Wellesley, is receiving congratulations from his conferees on the arrival of a daughter in his household March 24.

Thomas Pegler has added F. J. Dolansky, of Lynn, to the list of growers whose produce he handles. Lilies and spiræas from this gentleman are of fine quality.

T. F. Galvin has had an attractive window of orchids, the plants being grown by Seth E. Borden, of Fall River.

The lecture season at Horticultural hall closed March 28 with a conference on grape growing, opened by Wilfrid Wheeler.

Receipts at the recent spring flower show were nearly double those of a year ago. Spring exhibitions are becoming more popular than chrysanthemum shows in Boston.

Elijah A. Wood's scarlet seedling, Mrs. George E. Frost, certificated at the recent spring show, is in good demand at Park Street market. It is a seedling from F. Mangold and a free and continuous bloomer rather than cropper.

The attendance at the club field day at Thomas Roland's, Nahant, April 11, promises to exceed any the club has yet held. Members and friends are asked to take the 12:30 p. m. train at North Station for Lynn, where the party will be met by Mr. Roland.

Dutch bulb travelers have been fairly numerous the last few days. They report business as much less than a year ago. One admitted a slump of fifty per cent, another of twenty-five per cent.

Arthur Zirkman, assisted by Charles E. Schackerman, representing M. Rice & Co., of Philadelphia, had a fine exhibit of Easter novelties, baskets, ribbons and Decoration day goods at Young's hotel for a whole week and were kept busy with their many in and out-of-town customers. Business in the Boston district is better than ever with them, no signs of depressed times being evidenced.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

Trade has been holding up well for the last two weeks, with plenty of stock to go around, except carnations, which were short on several occasions. Roses are coming in fine at this writing and the indications are there will be a good crop for Easter. Carnations being off crop here for the last few weeks helps the outlook for a big cut about Easter, as all the growers report stock in fine condition. The outlook for Easter lilies is a gloomy one, as some of the growers report losing their entire crop from disease, while others report plenty of lilies before Easter and plenty after Easter, with a big blank between, just when they are most wanted.

Bulbous stock still is plentiful and the demand for it light, outside of funeral work.

Everyone here is looking forward to a heavy business for Easter. Growers all report their bedding plants in fine condition.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a short business meeting Tuesday night, March 24. As there was nothing special on the docket, the meeting adjourned early to give way to a little hop, which all enjoyed. The first annual ball of the club will be given Monday night, April 20. As this is a new feature with our club, everyone is looking forward to a big time.

There was some damage done here by the recent hail storm, but all are thankful it was no worse.

Gus Ackerman, a member of the craft, has the sincere sympathy of all in the loss of his beloved wife of only a year, from tuberculosis.

Wm. Graff is in Chicago, looking up Easter stock.

Mr. Gibson was able to be removed from the hospital, but it will be some time before he is on deck again.

A. Knopf returned from the south. While somewhat better, he could not content himself away from business.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

John Coombs, of Hartford, Conn., is around after a hard struggle with the grippe, which at one time looked serious for our veteran fellow craftsman. He is much pleased with his new Hitchings house, 40x175 feet, and thinks of duplicating it next summer.

Wm. Schlatter & Son, of Springfield, Mass., report large sales for the pin for attaching ferns to funeral designs,

The Yuess Gardens Co., of Newburgh, N. Y., reports a steady increase in the seed branch of the business. The firm has excellent facilities for handling big lines and an excellent field. The greenhouses are in charge of Donald Cameron, a grower of the old school.

L. C. Midgley, of the Worcester Conservatories, Worcester, Mass., finds time to take an active interest in the Horticultural Society, which plays a prominent part in the business here. With a compact range of 100,000 feet, he finds the local demand steadily increasing and contemplates further additions. He has a fine crop of roses and carnations in sight for Easter. Lawson is very heavy.

Chas. D. Thayer, of Worcester, Mass., has rented extra houses to accommodate the large stock of bedding plants. He has no doubt but that the demand this spring will be up to last year.

Fred Keyes, of Worcester, is continuing the business founded by his father and expects to make many improvements after the spring rush is over.

H. F. A. Lange, of Worcester, has a grand stock for Easter.

H. F. Littlefield, of Worcester, says his two stores are taxed to the utmost during the holiday season and he may expand yet more.

Saxe & Floto, of Waterbury, Conn., report business as increasing right along. The new house built by Lord & Burnham will be duplicated this summer.

Alexander Dallas, of Waterbury, has leased the plant owned by the late Mr.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business conditions are not as good as they were one week ago. The warm weather of the last three days of last week brought in so large a quantity of flowers that the market weakened under the load. Prices fell and it was impossible to dispose of the poorer grades advantageously. Conditions have not improved with the first half of the present week, despite the cooler weather.

The quantity of carnations coming into the market is large, much larger than was generally anticipated. Choice colored blooms are in fair demand, but white carnations are hard to sell, excepting in the cheaper grades for funeral work. Roses are also plentiful, though it is noticed that really good stock is seldom wasted. The rose list has been strengthened by Gen. Jacqueminot. Kaiserins have also made their appearance. The quality is excellent.

The vast quantity of southern daffodils finds sale somehow. They tend to depreciate the value of the home-grown stock. Single violets from greenhouse and coldframe are pretty well over, the stock now coming in being largely from the open ground. It is doubtful whether these will last until Easter. Sweet peas are fine and so plentiful as to bring even the finest within the reach of the lower-priced buyers. Gardenias are becoming more plentiful. Only the finest stock brings listed quotations. Some choice smilax is coming into the market. The price on this grade has advanced. Atlantic City is becoming a factor in the shipping business as Easter approaches.

Sharon Hill.

It was intimated to Phil that "the great Sam" would be pleased were he to visit Robert Scott & Son and see their Easter plants. So to Sharon Hill Phil repaired straightway, arranging one of those flying connections that make it possible for the poor newspaper correspondent to get anything done at all. Unfortunately Alexander B. Scott was away, but Miss Gloster secured one of his representatives, who did everything in his power to enable the visitor to see all that could be seen in the brief space at his command.

The principal Easter plants grown at Sharon Hill are lilies and ramblers. Carrying out Mr. Scott's idea of making an impression on the market, lilies and ramblers are grown in quantity and grown well. Lilies are being cut now and will be cut and sold in pots in immense quantities at Easter. The stock promises well, the giganteum variety being especially fine. It is with Crimson Ramblers especially that Mr. Scott is seen in his best form. The plants of this grand rose were in magnificent condition, set more heavily with buds than I can re-

The Barons of Roslyn.

There are three barons of Roslyn whose fair lands lie side by side, to the east of Glenside. Unlike the barons of old, their domain is not on the hill-top from whence they can see an enemy from afar, but halfway down in the valley, protected from the biting winds of the north by hill and woods and open on the south to the full force of the winter sun. Neither do they quarrel nor commit petty depredations on each other, as did the barons of old, but they live side by side in peace and harmony, each striving to outdo the other in the quality of the products of his place.

When Victor Groshens, the last of the barons to reach Roslyn, had experimented with the soil in the greenhouses for a few months, he sententiously remarked that the soil suited red roses. It certainly does, though I have always believed that the growers do a great, great deal in assisting the soil and I probably shall continue to believe this in spite of all the skeptics. The soil or the grower produces magnificent Richmond, Liberty and Beauty at Roslyn, as a visit to the places there will show. Adolph Farenwald has, in addition to these varieties, Killarney, Miss Kate Moulton, Aurora—now called Mrs. Somebody, I can't recall who—and possibly another variety, all in splendid condition. Miss Kate impressed me particularly by its vigorous growth and sturdy stem, the weakness sometimes noticed under the bud being absent, except, possibly, in a few of the short-stemmed flowers. Killarney was excellent, the grafted plants seemingly more vigorous than the own-root, but a careful comparison of the results has convinced Mr. Farenwald that they are not worth the addition in cost to him. The star with a new name was all that its originator claimed, the canes being truly magnificent. One house of Beauties had been cut down for Easter and were breaking finely. This house is planted out in beds and has been cut down twice each year for, I think, three years, with excellent results. The present growth should be in bloom about Easter. Three long beds of Beauties, full-grown, are producing good flowers. Liberty, always a money-maker here, is looking well, and Richmond, with canes four or five feet long from the base, looked even better.

Edward Towill had his Richmond in superb condition. The wood was very heavy, the foliage luxuriant, and the buds showed substance. The Beauties were divided into two groups, one flowering, the other just starting into growth after resting. Mr. Towill had two interesting seedlings, one plant of each, and two plants of a cross between Bon Silene and Liberty, of which he has several hundred small plants. This variety resembles Bon Silene in appearance, the bud being larger and possibly a little deeper in color, while the growth was more luxuriant than that of the old favorite. Another rose of interest is one that is believed to be a sport from Killarney, with more substance than the older variety. It is evident that the barons of Roslyn believe in feeding, as the condition of their beds and the health of their plants abundantly testify.

Unfortunately, want of time forbade a visit to Mr. Groshen's, but Mr. Towill justly remarked, "The last time you were here you went there and no place else."

Another Propagating Wrinkle.

There are some propagating secrets that are learned by long and careful experience; others come accidentally, but are only grasped by those who are alert, careful students of nature. It so chanced that Phil happened in one day on Henry Diehl, a propagator of experience. Mr. Diehl had produced some marvelously fine plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine during the last season, plants that ranged from a 6-inch pot to a 12-inch pan—no bunching of small plants, just one single plant in a 12-inch pan. Just think of that! Mr. Diehl was willing to talk about his methods for the benefit of florists in general. While these methods, or something like them, are undoubtedly known to Thomas Roland, of Nahant, and a few other skillful growers, I doubt whether they are generally known, and, therefore, give them here.

Henry Diehl accidentally broke a shoot from a small plant of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine about three and a half years ago. Being of a thrifty turn of mind, he put in a soft-wood cutting in October or early November and found that this cutting rooted more readily even than a geranium. Carried over winter in a small pot, the begonia grew far more luxuriantly than plants grown from leaf cuttings made during the winter. The next season a number of soft-wood cuttings were tried, the result being even more gratifying than the first year. This season Mr. Diehl had 150 plants produced from cuttings early in November, 1906. Without exception, the plants grew far faster than those of other growers who produced them from leaf cuttings, resulting in a continuous crop of begonia flowers, all on splendid, healthy plants,

Various Notes.

Phil was favored with a pictorial postal card from Godfrey Aschmann, requesting a visit to his greenhouses at 1012 Ontario street. To Ontario street Phil repaired and found Godfrey Aschmann busy with orders. Mr. Aschmann did not say that the orders came from his REVIEW card, but Phil did not need to ask this question—he knew. As before stated, Godfrey Aschmann was busy. John, Edward and Howard also were busy, so Phil went through the houses by himself and saw a great quantity of Easter stock, enough to fully justify the assertion that all orders could be filled. No one need lack lilies, azaleas, hydrangeas, spiræas, cinerarias, primroses, hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, which were seen in numbers, with other kinds in smaller quantities. Mr. Aschmann has learned what varieties and sizes are most in demand and is fully prepared to meet all requirements.

C. Eisele purchased a lot 60x250 last week, adjoining his present site at Eleventh and Westmoreland streets. Hitchings & Co. will erect six houses 18x60 feet each, with a large show house in front, for Christian Eisele at Eleventh and Westmoreland streets. The present houses, built in 1885, will be torn down.

Edward Dillwyn Darlington, manager of the W. Atlee Burpee & Co.'s trial farms at Fordhook, near Doylestown, died March 26 of pneumonia, after a brief illness. The funeral took place March 30. Mr. Darlington, whose genial disposition had won him many friends, was in his fiftieth year.

J. B. Swayne, of Kennett, Chester county, Pa., will this spring erect four houses, ridge and furrow, 28x200 feet each. The Lord & Burnham Co. will

H. J. Hoffmeier, of New York, has opened a flower shop in the Marlborough-Blenheim at Atlantic City. C. H. Grant, late of Chicago, and since with J. J. Habermehl's Sons, Bellevue-Stratford, is his manager.

Carl Jurgens, Jr., of Newport, R. I., was in this city recently. Mr. Jurgens ships large quantities of choice bulbous stock to this market.

Edward Redfield, artist and formerly fern grower, of Glenside, Pa., has a handsome landscape painting in the Art Institute in Chicago.

William J. Baker is especially strong on choice daffodils, both northern and southern grown.

Robert Scott & Son captured a silver cup with Mrs. Jardine at Chicago last week.

Myers & Samtman captured a first with American Beauties, and two silver cups with Wyndmoor, at Chicago last week.

A. Farenwald captured a silver cup, a first, and a second, with Liberty, Richmond and Mme. Chatenay, at Chicago last week.

Wild smilax is being largely used for spring openings in department stores.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are receiving fresh importations of Porto Rican mats, magnolia leaves and adiantum this week.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is receiving some rose-colored snapdragon of exceptional quality.

The greenhouses of George Balderston, of Colora, Md., supply Eugene Bernheimer with the only Jacq now in the market.

Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., will address the Florists' Club April 7.

CINERARIAS.

I have a number of large cinerarias which seem to be bothered with red spider. They weave their webs around the clusters of buds until they enclose the whole mass of buds. What would you advise me to do with them? The leaves also become scorched and gradually dry up. Is this due to fumigation? I smoke once a week.

W.B.

I am afraid, from what you say, that your cinerarias are in a rather hopeless condition. As you do not say anything about the culture you have given them, it is difficult to see just what is the cause of their present state. Fumigation will not hurt the foliage on cinerarias unless you use tobacco stems and allow these to blaze. I doubt if at this late date you can do much to improve your plants.

The webs you say are woven by red spider, are probably those of the common house spiders. Pressure of water through a fine spray nozzle in your house will clean these away.

Cinerarias at all times require cool culture and will not stand much sunshine. Forty-five degrees at night in winter is ample. A moist atmosphere is quite to their liking. If fresh tobacco stems are packed among the pots every fortnight, it will keep green aphids in check. This is the only pest which is partial to these plants. A fumigation once a week, in addition, should ensure absolute freedom from insect attacks. C. W.

PLANTS AND ELECTRIC LIGHT.

An interesting exhibit was made by David King, nurseryman, Murrayfield, Edinburgh, at the March meeting of the Scottish Horticultural Association. Mr. King, having had electric light installed in one of his forcing houses, for evening work in busy seasons, placed four lilacs in the house in similar conditions. Two of them were exposed nightly to the electric light (twenty-five candle power incandescent lamps) and two were shaded during the night from the artificial light, with the result, according to the Horticultural Trade Journal, that the two plants exposed to the light were a mass of snowy white flowers, and the two which had been shaded covered with green buds only. Four azaleas, also shown, had been treated in the same way with the same results.

A LARGE FUNERAL.

Possibly the biggest funeral, from a florist's standpoint, that has occurred in this section of the country for years, was that of Miss Lydia Baker, daughter of Hon. Judge Baker, of Wilkesburg. The floral decorations were handled by J. W. Smith & Son, the pioneer florists of Wilkesburg. The young lady had been extremely popular among the younger set in Wilkesburg, Canton and the surrounding towns. The floral tributes ordered included many of the ordinary set pieces, but there were a number of original ideas of customers to be followed out. The funeral was on Wednesday morning and Smith & Son had booked a large number of orders Monday afternoon. Monday evening the elder Mr. Smith and Mr. Smith, Jr., looked over the order book and figured up the amount of roses, carnations, valley, lilies, greens, etc., that they would need. They were surprised to find that the quantity of stock required much exceeded what they had roughly figured upon. The source of supply for such a quantity of stock was a serious matter and only second in importance to securing a good, fresh grade of flowers. After some discussion Mr. Smith, Sr., remarked: "Jim, you had better wire the whole order to Peter Reinberg and we will have the satisfaction of knowing that we will get good, fresh stock and get it on time." Mr. Smith's idea was shown to be correct by Jim's remark after the orders had all been delivered: "Dad always said you were playing safe by ordering from Peter Reinberg, and I guess he is right."—Adv.

VISITORS TO KEW.

The number of visitors at the Royal Gardens, Kew, speaks for the interest which the English people take in gardening. The visitors during 1907 numbered 2,962,714. It is interesting to notice that this shows an increase of 623,222 upon the visitors during 1906. The average number of visitors for the ten years 1893 to 1902 was 1,352,425, so that the record for 1907 was more than double that average. The average attendance for 1903 to 1907 was 2,011,748, the figures for the several years being, respectively, 1,352,548, 1,579,666, 1,824,319, 2,339,492 and 2,962,714. The total Sunday attendance for the same years amounted to 568,726 in 1903, 675,225 in 1904, 853,631 in 1905, 867,148 in 1906, and 1,268,501 in 1907. These figures prove how increasingly popular these national gardens have become.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-sixth annual convention at Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25, 1908.

THE department store seed sections are getting busy.

THERE is a good call for the Davis Perfect cucumber.

THE March business, while heavy, has not made many new records.

THE canners are beginning to take a little more interest in seed peas.

THE seed shortages are beginning to develop in the stocks of the retailers—wholesalers were sold out long ago.

THE mail trade has taken a spurt in the last few days, for warm weather has visited the eastern part of the country.

THE death of E. D. Darlington, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., is reported in this week's obituary column, with a brief sketch of his career.

THE seed trade in general is either too busy, or too uncertain how to proceed, to take any action on the proposed national pure seed law.

COUNTER trade is on the boom with New York, Boston and Philadelphia seedsmen, for there have been several days of almost summer weather.

SOUTHERN seedsmen, with whom the season is pretty well along, say that most of them have done the largest business on record, especially in the southwest.

THE Holland bulb salesmen are making their departure for home and for the trip through England with more room in the order-book than has been the case in several years.

FROM all reports it appears that, to say the least, there will be no scarcity of gladiolus bulbs in a year or two, as soon as the growers who are now extending their facilities get things fairly swinging.

DURING the year ended December 31, 1907, the value of the declared exports of seeds, plants, etc., from the consular districts of London, England, to the United States was $1,182,502, according to the Horticultural Advertiser.

C. C. MORSE & Co., San Francisco, are authority for the statement that the California Seed Growers' Co., recently organized at Gilroy, Cal., has been dissolved by agreement. Ah Him, their Chinese foreman, who organized the company, has withdrawn from it and returned to China March 24 for a prolonged visit.

A MEMBER of the committee on seed legislation of the American Seed Trade Association says, in speaking of matters now under discussion: "There is, in my judgment, apt to be a great injustice if not direct injury done to the seed trade in the use of the name of the American Seed Trade Association in whatever comments are made or action is taken on the bills that are before congress. We, of course, cannot at this time attempt to control the action of our friends, but would request that they act entirely independent and do not use the name of our organization."

W. ATLEE BURPEE and Mrs. Burpee, of Philadelphia, were called back from the south by word of the death of E. D. Darlington.

COMPLAINTS have been almost universal this season over the failure of many bulbs, especially hyacinths, to produce a good crop of flowers. The trouble has been felt as much in England as in this country, and in many of the continental journals there are similar expressions of disappointment. Even in Holland and Belgium the same tale is told, and the cause doubtless is to be attributed to the exceptionally unfavorable summer of 1907, which prevented the proper ripening up of the bulbs.

BURT GETS RETRACTION.

When N. J. Burt & Co., Burlington, Ia., received a copy of the circular issued February 15 by the United States Department of Agriculture, they found their name the very first one in the list of those from whom the department's agents had bought meadow fescue, and found that the package contained, in fact, 100 per cent of other seeds. After a little consideration, Mr. Burt wrote to B. T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, as follows:

"I want to say that we never, to my knowledge, sold, or offered for sale, a pound, or any less quantity, of meadow fescue since we have been in the business. We do not carry it in stock and never did. You must have gotten your samples mixed. Please send your sample and evidence to the postmaster here, so that I can have some evidence of the kind of seed you claim we sold you for meadow fescue. I would like to see the bag and writing on it. I am most positive we never sold anyone an ounce of meadow fescue."

Dr. Galloway referred the matter to Edgar Brown, who is in charge of the seed laboratory, and under date of March 14 made the following explanation to Mr. Burt:

"Mr. Brown reports that in May, 1907, he instructed one of our collaborators to secure samples and prices of meadow fescue, or English bluegrass seed, from a number of firms, yours among them. He further states that, in response to this request, a sample of seed was sent in an unlabeled package, which you referred to as 'bluegrass,' and quoted at $2.25 per bushel. This seed was that of Kentucky bluegrass, but on account of its being received in response to our request for meadow fescue, or English bluegrass, was incorrectly classed with these samples. The fact that the seed which you supplied was of greater value than that of meadow fescue shows clearly that there was no intention of misrepresentation on your part.

"The publication of this seed as Canada bluegrass, and as having been offered by you as that of meadow fescue, was a mistake, due, I regret to say, to carelessness on the part of Mr. Brown and others directly charged with this work. It is the first mistake of the kind that has occurred in the investigations carried on in this way, and we regret it exceedingly. There were 2,500 copies of Circular No. 26 issued and distributed, and no more. I have issued instructions that another edition of 2,500 copies be issued and distributed to the same people who received the first lot, and that in this edition a statement be made that the publication of your name was an error, which the Department wishes to have corrected in the fullest possible way."

statement, "The name of N. J. Burt & Co., Burlington, Ia., was published through error, as the seed referred to was properly labeled by them and was not offered as meadow fescue."

THE PURE SEED BILL.

Charles N. Page, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, where they fought a state seed law last year, says of the national pure seed law now before congress:

"We consider the so-called pure seed bill, introduced by Congressman Mann, decidedly objectionable from every point of view, as it would prevent all interstate commerce and also imports from Europe. If it were strictly enforced, it would drive all seed dealers out of business, except those doing simply a small local business, and would prove to be very disastrous to the people of this country. There is certainly no reason why seeds grown in this country should not be sold here, though there should be some restrictions put on the sale of seeds which contain dodder, Canada thistle, or any other noxious weed seeds, and the importation of yellow trefoil and other seeds, which are used only as adulterants, should be absolutely forbidden, or the duty placed so high as to make their importation unprofitable."

Albert McCullough, of J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati, speaking on the same subject, says:

"The bill as it has been presented to congress is detrimental to anyone who is interested in agriculture or horticulture and is not confined to the seedsmen. That we should have a law to regulate or prohibit the bringing into this country of low-grade seed for the purpose of adulteration, I have openly advocated for years, but we want the law so framed as to bring about the proper results."

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending March 21 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto	449	$8503	Millet	2000	$6152
Anise	62	469	Rape	12	50
Cardamom	19	492	Sugar beet	38	289
Clover	1511	57386	Other		2170
Grass	16	195

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $5,175.

FORMOSA LONGIFLORUM.

H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, reports great interest in the Lilium longiflorum bulbs from the Island of Formosa and says:

"Last season we imported a limited quantity of these bulbs as an experiment, and distributed them among some of the largest lily growers in this country. They were all well pleased with it. One party to whom we sold 1,500 had 1,500 good plants when his house was examined about a week ago. They were coming into bud splendidly and showed not the slightest sign of disease.

"The height of this lily, with average culture, is a little taller than the multiflorum, being from three to three and one-half feet. The foliage is of an exceptionally fine green and well shaped. The bulbs average flowers as follows: 6-8-inch bulbs produce about three to four blooms; 7-9-inch bulbs produce about four to six blooms; 9-10-inch bulbs produce about six to eight blooms.

"The variety may be potted about the middle of August or beginning of September, which will allow the grower to handle it in all the different temperatures that he desires, without extreme forcing. The reason these bulbs may be had earlier than the Japanese lily is that they ripen considerably earlier; in fact, earlier than does the Harrisii. BULBS AT BELLINGHAM.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture, as is well known, has for some years been growing Dutch bulbs on the Pacific coast with a view to establishing the industry commercially. The work has now reached a stage where it is proposed to organize an experiment station at one or another of the localities that have been found suitable. Referring to this, Albert F. Woods, of the Department, says:

"Our experiments are now conducted at Spokane, Bellingham and Tacoma. The bulbs at all three places are grown types of soil, we want something fairly close to town, so that it can be easily accessible to people desiring to see the place, and we need about ten acres of land containing the two general types of soil mentioned. The Bellingham people, I believe, are willing to furnish a tract of land such as required if it can be secured within reasonable cost.

"Before going any further with the matter we have thought it best to bring to Washington the man who has been in charge of the work out there and go over the whole question carefully. All the stock which we have at present is left in good condition in the hands of McRae Smith, of Bellingham, who is under contract to grow it for us during the season. Whether we finally conclude to enlarge the work will depend upon our ability to obtain a satisfactory location, and the work for the next fiscal year would be conditioned upon the amount of money available for the purpose.

"In our opinion, the temporary suspension of this work will not have any material effect on the ultimate development of the industry. We are already cooperating with all those who appear to have any desire to grow bulbs in that region, and so far there has been no evidence of any immediate extension of the industry. We desire to have the work move slowly and cautiously and be developed upon a thoroughly safe foundation, knowing as far as possible all the factors involved, so that money will not be invested carelessly."

THE DEATH ROLL.*E. D. Darlington.

E. Dillwyn Darlington, for twenty-five years connected with the firm of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., died at his home in Doylestown, Pa., March 26, after a brief illness with pneumonia. His many friends were much shocked by the entirely unexpected news of his death.

Mr. Darlington was the eldest son of the late Henry T. and Susan Darlington, and was born in Doylestown November 20, 1858. His youth was spent in Doyle-

Alfred Colomb. Carmine.

Anne de Diesbach. Bright carmine.

Ball of Snow. Pure white.

Baron de Bonstetten. Dark crimson shaded.

Baroness Rothschild. Satiny pink; extra.

Captain Christy. Delicate flesh color.

Duke of Edinburgh. Bright vermillion.

Frau Karl Druschki. The finest white in existence.

Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.

General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.

John Hopper. Beautiful rose-pink.

General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.

La France. The finest light pink.

Margaret Dickson. White, pale flesh center.

Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.

Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light, satiny pink.

Mme. Plantier. White.

Mrs. John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.

Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.

Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.

Ulrich Brunner. Cherry-red.

We also carry about 25 other varieties. Write for list and price. Prices on Hardy Hybrid Perpetual Roses, $1.50 for 10; $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000.

ENGLISH MOSS ROSES

Assorted, White, Pink, Red. Large dormant plants, from open ground. 10c each; 85c for 5; $12.00 per 100.

STANDARD, or TREE ROSES

(Grafted on Rosa Canina or Rugosa Stock)

Large, well-grown, selected plants in the best and most serviceable varieties. 35c each; $3.25 for 10; $25.00 per 100.

MANETTI STOCKS FOR GRAFTING

Selected English Stock, best quality, $1.50 per 100; $12.00 per 1000.

BABY RAMBLERS

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER—Grown as a Standard

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free-blooming qualities, etc. 35c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

Mme. Norbert Levavasseur (Baby Rambler).

Strong, field-grown plants: $1.25 for 10; $12.00 per 100.

Catherine Seimeth. A very important novelty. A white Baby Rambler rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. It has the true rose perfume in a high degree. 45c each; $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100; extra strong, 60c each; $6.00 per doz.; $45.00 per 100.

bler class. Color intense crimson, and exceptionally free-flowing. 25c each; $1.00 for 5; $18.00 per 100.

Anny Muller. The pink Baby Rambler, and bound to find favor where the Baby Ramblers are popular. 45c each; $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Baby Dorothy. The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flowers is similar to Dorothy Perkins. This variety has created quite a sensation when exhibited at the English National Rose Society's and other shows. "Baby Dorothy," when planted out, flowers perpetually from spring until autumn. It makes an excellent pot plant for forcing. Price for strong, field-grown plants, 50c each; $2.00 for bundle of 5; $35.00 per 100.

Mrs. Wm. H. Cutbush. A grand acquisition to the Baby Ram-

HYBRID TEA, or EVERBLOOMING ROSES

Hybrid Tea, or Everblooming Roses, are becoming more popular every year. As hardy as the perpetuals, with slight protection in winter, they give a wealth of bloom all through the summer months and late in the fall till frost checks them.

The Grand New Rose Lyon. Originated by the raiser of Etoile de France. Perpetual flowering. Vigorous grower. The blooms are very large with broad petals, full and globular in form; shrimp-pink at the ends of the petals, center coral-red or salmon-pink shaded with chrome-yellow. Very fragrant. $1.25 each; $6.00 for bundle of 5; $12.00 for 10.

Rose, Etoile de France. Flower large, possessing petals of very good substance; magnificent cupped form. Superb crimson-red velvet, the center of the bloom vivid cerise-red. The flowers are very fragrant and last very long. The Queen of the Everblooming Red Roses. The most free-blooming and vigorous Red Rose ever introduced. Strong, 2-year-old plants, field-grown, 25c each; $1.00 for bundle of 5; $18.00 per 100.

The Killarney Rose. This is a grand rose for either indoor or outdoor cultivation; is a strong grower, and the blooms, which are of a beautiful pink, are borne in great profusion. Strong, 2-year-old field-grown stock, 25c each; $1.00 for bundle of 5; $18.00 per 100.

Gruss an Teplitz. No Rose in commerce can compare with Gruss an Teplitz as a bedder. It is a perfect sheet of richest crimson-scarlet all summer. A strong, vigorous grower. Hardy. 20c each; $1.50 for 10; $12.00 for 100.

Maman Cochet Roses. The best of all Roses for summer flowering and cutting.

Pink—Color a clear, rich pink changing to silvery rose; very double and fragrant.

White—A sport from the above, with all its characteristics; color a beautiful snow-white, at times tinted with the faintest suggestion of blush, the same as is often found in the Bride. 25c each; 75c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100.

POPULAR HYBRID TEA ROSES

American Beauty, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Clothilde Soupert, Caroline Testout, Hermosa. 20c each; 75c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100.

RAMBLER ROSES

Dorothy Perkins. Resembles the Crimson Rambler, except in color, which is a lovely shell-pink. 15c ea; 65c for 5; $12.00 per 100.

extra-strong, 2-year-old plants, grown on their own roots, at the following prices: 3 to 4 ft., 15c each; 65c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100; 4 to 5 ft. long, 20c each; $1.00 for 5; $15.00 per 100; 4 to 6 ft. long, 25c each; $1.15 for 5; $18.00 per 100.

Crimson Rambler Rose. American-grown. We can supply

Mme. Plantier, white. Baltimore Belle, pale blush color. Prairie Queen, red, changing to pink. Seven Sisters, clear pink. 15c each; 65c for 5; $12.00 per 100.

ness. He then went to West Chester and learned the nursery and florist business with Hoopes Bros. & Thomas, leaving there in 1877 to conduct greenhouses in Doylestown, furnishing plants for Samuel Wilson, a seed grower of Mechanicsville. It was shortly after this that he became associated with the firm of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. After the Fordhook Farm, in Doylestown township, was started by Burpee & Co., in the spring of 1888, Mr. Darlington acted as manager until his health gave out, when he was succeeded by Howard M. Earle, and became confidential adviser of the firm, taking charge, also, of the trial grounds during the summer. During the busy season in the winter he was engaged in the offices in Philadelphia.

Mr. Darlington had a wide knowledge of plant life and was a recognized authority on many varieties of vegetables and flowers. Besides writing numerous leaflets and books for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., he contributed quite frequently to the different horticultural magazines.

He was married in 1888 to Miss Catharine S. Darlington, of Concordville, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hillborn Darlington, of that place, who survives him with three children: Hillborn, Henry T. and Catharine S. Other survivors are his mother, Mrs. Susan Darlington; two brothers, Walter, of Philadelphia, and Philip S., of Doylestown, and three sisters, Mrs. Frank Faxon, of Kansas City; Mrs. Marshall Pugh, of Wayne, and Mrs. John C. Swartley, of Doylestown.

Samuel Gass.

Samuel Gass, aged 64, for many years a well-known florist in Pittsburg, died recently at his home, Gass and McClure avenues, north side, after a short illness of pneumonia. He was born in the north side and was the son of the man in honor of whom Gass avenue was named. Mr. Gass had a stand in the Pittsburg market for almost forty years. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Mary Gass; two sons, Albert J. and Samuel H. Gass, and a daughter, Miss Hettie Gass.

Wm. F. Gloede.

William F. Gloede, of Evanston, Ill., passed away Sunday, March 29, after an illness of two months, aged 70 years. He was a florist and landscape gardener in Germany, emigrating to the United States in the year 1883, landing at Cleveland, O. A few years later he and his two sons engaged with J. M. Gasser. He helped Mr. Gasser to build his first greenhouses and started the first roses

She loved the flowers with which she worked, and the boxes of flowers, as well as the pieces which she designed, carried the message of the tender care and thought which were put into them. The closing of her life brought grief to the entire neighborhood in which she lived, and the many who knew and loved her felt that she had taken with her some of the fragrance and sweetness of the flowers with which she worked.

Simeon Swindells.

A pioneer florist of the District of Columbia, Simeon Swindells, died March 26. He was buried from the Garden Memorial church, Anacostia, March 8. Years ago Mr. Swindells conducted the Columbia Greenhouses, in Georgetown. He was well known all over the country. When Mr. Grady first had the American Beauty rose, before it was named, Mr. Swindells would visit him quite frequently and admire the rose, and Mr. Grady told him he was going to name it Columbia. Mr. Swindells suggested American Beauty, and it was adopted. He was 59 years old and leaves two sons and a married daughter. O. O.

were murdered by a third person. The fact that both were wounded in the same spot confirms his theory.

Bernthaler was a music teacher and Miss Ziechmann was his pupil. She and her musicmaster had been acquainted for many years. Her father is the florist at 6528 Quincy street. Each left their home Sunday afternoon. They met in Dundas woods. The coroner believes they came to their death early the same evening.

DAHLIA SOCIETY.

Arrangements have just been completed for the New England Dahlia Society for the first independent dahlia exhibition ever given in Boston. It will be at Tremont Temple, September 17, 18 and 19, and it is believed that this will be the most important exhibition of this flower ever held. Lorimer and Gilbert halls have been secured, and an orchestra will give music afternoons and evenings. The autumn exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which comes a week earlier, has classes for dahlias, but it is a general exhibition and the dahlia growers have increased in number so that the Dahlia Society feels confi-

WINNIPEG, MAN.—A meeting of the Winnipeg Florists' Association was held March 26 at the greenhouses of J. T. Riddle. After the usual routine business was attended to Mr. Antenbring read a paper on the objects of the association, which was much enjoyed. During the evening seven new members were accepted.

Vegetable Forcing.

GREENHOUSE VEGETABLES.

CHICAGO, March 31.—Cucumbers, 50c to $1.25 doz.; leaf lettuce, 20c to 22½c case; watercress, 10c to 20c doz.; radishes, 15c to 50c doz. bunches; mushrooms, 35c to 60c lb.

BOSTON, March 30.—Cucumbers, $3 to $7 box; tomatoes, 30c to 35c lb.; parsley, $1 to $1.25 box; lettuce, 50c to 75c box; chicory, $1 doz.; romaine, $1 doz.; escarolle, 75c doz.; rhubarb, 7c to 8c lb.; mint, 75c to $1 doz.; bunch beets, $1.75 to $2 doz. bunches; beet greens, 40c to 60c box; mushrooms, 40c to 50c lb.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Mushrooms continue in light supply and very firm; fancy large white would probably command more than quoted. Beet tops more plenty and lower. Cucumbers steady. Lettuce of irregular quality. Mint slightly higher. Radishes lower. Rhubarb in active demand and firm. Tomatoes in light receipt. Beet tops, 25c bu. box; No. 1 cucumbers, $1 to $1.25 doz.; No. 2 cucumbers, $3 to $4 box; lettuce, 25c to 75c doz.; mushrooms, 25c to 55c lb.; radishes, $2 to $2.75 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, 40c to 50c doz. bunches; tomatoes, 15c to 25c lb.; mint, 25c to 40c doz. bunches.

MODERN IRRIGATION.

The development and growth of a plant is controlled largely by the liberality with which water is furnished it, and the method in which it is applied. The question of irrigation in gardening, both in the field and under glass, has possibly been neglected until recent years, largely because of the fact that its importance was not fully realized and also because the matter of nourishing the soil has claimed the attention of a majority of growers.

During the last few years the irrigation of the west has shown to the world the effect which a proper water supply can produce upon the land which formerly was considered as unproductive. In the more thickly settled parts of the country, where land is still more valuable and where each acre of the soil must, in order to prove profitable, be so cultivated as to yield maximum results, the question of irrigation has been carried to a much higher development.

Several elements enter into the consideration of this question. The first, of course, is the application of water at such times and in such quantities as may be most advantageous to the development of the crop. The second essential is the application of this water with a minimum of labor and the smallest permanent investment in equipment consistent with the results to be secured.

In addition to the above requirements, there enter into the question several problems, and although their failure of solution may not absolutely condemn a given system of watering, yet the successful operation along these lines adds great value to any system of irrigation.

Among these may be mentioned the possibility of preventing the ravages of insects and fungous growth, also the production of an effect upon the plant and in the soil which facilitates the operation of natural laws rather than impedes them. Any system of irrigation which accomplishes this will be most beneficial to a grower.

In the study of irrigation several facts have been learned which before were not fully understood. For instance, it has been learned that a steady, slow, uniform distribution of finely diffused particles of water which will moisten the soil to any degree of dampness, without making it muddy, or, on the other hand, without leaving dry places, will eliminate the formation of a crust upon the surface of the soil and will in this way not interfere with the capillary action of the earth. With some systems which are now in use a whole season of watering thoroughly will leave the soil as loose as when first planted. This fact alone will materially increase the development of the plant, due to the combined causes of a constant moisture supplied from the deeper earth as the result of capillary attraction, and the more liberal supply of oxygen to the roots of the plant because of the looseness of the soil.

It has also been discovered that there has been an erroneous idea as to the application of water to the leaves of a plant. The common belief that such an application of water will injure the plant, either as the result of the rays of the sun, or because of the greater tendency to fungous growth, has been shown to be in error.

While the application of water in some forms to the leaf of a plant would produce these effects, yet water which is applied to the plant in the form of finely diffused particles, which practically resemble a mist, has shown itself to produce the opposite effect. Instead of increasing the fungous growth it diminishes it; and the action of the sun's rays on the plants watered in this manner has produced a luxuriant growth. This explains the cause for the magnificent vegetation in the hot, moisture-laden atmosphere of the torrid zone.

It is also possible, with a proper system of irrigation, to distribute over the plants fungicides and insecticides to prevent ravages which must be combated by artificial means.

It is unwise for any grower to neglect the development of his system of irrigation. One acre of land properly irrigated will produce as much vegetation as will two or three acres which are watered in a makeshift, half-hearted manner. Only by proper irrigation can a uniformity of growth be secured. Not only are these facts true, but a proper system of irrigation furnishes an insurance against a failure of crop because of the gardener's inability to depend on nature for his water supply.

A complete system of irrigation can be installed at a comparatively small expense, and the labor saved thereby in one year will pay for the system. The more luxuriant growth and the perfect development of the crop, accomplished by a modern system of irrigation, will of itself bring sufficient additional returns to repay the investment almost any year. The losses from insects, fungous diseases and similar causes, which can be prevented, add large percentages to the profit side of the ledger. In short, so sure and so liberal are the advantages of a properly designed system of modern irrigation that no phase of garden or greenhouse work yields to the grower more abundant returns.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The weather here during the last week has been ideal, the thermometer standing at 80 degrees through the day.

Outdoor carnations are fairly good. Violets are getting affected by the heat, being sold by the fakers at 5 cents per bunch, and a local department store gave away free to its customers hundreds of bunches in one day. There is a shortage of indoor stuff, but plenty outdoor flowers to supply the demand. There are rumors of several new greenhouses.

Various Notes.

Charles E. Morton, formerly of Chicago, has purchased the store of the Redondo Floral Co., of which he had been lately acting as manager. The business will be continued under the same name as heretofore. This is one of the oldest stands in the city and at one time did the largest business here.

Mr. Suzuki, managing director of the Yokohama Nurseries of Japan, said to be the largest of its kind in that country, is on a tour of the United States. While in Los Angeles a few weeks ago he appointed Jacob Dietrich, nurseryman, general agent of his firm for southern California. C. E. M.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

We are getting our share of sunshine, and beautiful spring weather has favored everybody. Neither is there any falling off in business and all the stores report an exceptionally active season. Funeral work constitutes the greater part of it and some days our efforts are taxed to the limit. Roses are now at the height of perfection and are easily disposed of at prices satisfactory to grower and retailer. Carnations are in excess of everything else, but so far no bargain counter sales have been advertised. The supply of bulbous stock has reached the turning point and two weeks more will see its finish. Violets, too, have seen their best days, but the double ones are still good and will continue to bloom until early in April. The violet growers say the last winter was their banner one.

Various Notes.

During a noon recess we made a hasty call among the seedsmen on Front street and were soon convinced that the florists were not the only busy people in town. The Portland Seed Co., the Pacific Seed Co. and J. J. Butzer all occupy large stores and are doing the greatest business in their history. The last named gentleman was awarded the city contract, which is no small item.

J. B. Pilkington, the prosperous nurseryman, with a salesroom on Front street, also had a good word to say, the sales on trees and shrubbery eclipsing all previous years. Mr. Pilkington was successful in figuring with the Rose Carnival Society and supplied it with several thousand roses.

The firm of Byron & Jansen, who recently built a small range of houses near the Oregon City car line, are picking a grand lot of sweet peas and double violets.

GERANIUMS, 2½-inch pots, all kinds, $2.50 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.
SCOTTII FERNS, 2½-inch pots, $3.00 per 100.
CARNATION CUTTINGS, leading kinds, $2.00 and $3.00 per 100.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS, $1.50 and $2.00 per 100.

H. J. Millatt, for the last six years with Clarke Bros., will leave that firm immediately after Easter to enjoy outdoor life for a few months.

E. R. Chappell, who received a splendid floricultural training with Samuelson, of Chicago, is now in the employ of Clarke Bros., arriving here March 20.

The Irish did not completely own the city March 17. Walter K. Louis, of Dayton, O.; J. R. Fotheringham, of Tarrytown, N. Y., and Arnold Ringier, of Chicago, were all conspicuous on that day. The presence of these energetic young men acted upon us like a spring tonic and we are always glad to see them.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Another week of dry, warm weather, with a few hours each day in which the wind blows rather freely, and everything is assuming a dry aspect. We are greatly in need of a few showers and the farming fraternity is becoming rather anxious. Already the growers of outdoor stock have commenced to irrigate artificially and if we do not soon have rain there will be considerable uneasiness.

We are still in the midst of Lent and business is quiet along all lines connected with the florists. Stock is overplentiful and is getting even lower in price than some of the quotations I gave last week. There was a sporadic effort made at the beginning of the Lenten season, by some of the growers, to keep the prices up, but the avalanche of stock quickly had the effect of lowering everything and now most of the growers are willing to take almost anything that offers.

There is an exception, however, in the matter of Beauties. They are bringing good prices in comparison with other roses. Bride and Maid can be had at from 25 cents per dozen upwards. Really good stock brings about twice that figure, with not over half the available supply sold. Carnations are good and there is apparently no shortage of any variety. Daffodils are on the wane and the dry weather for the last few days has not improved their quality. Violets show signs of getting toward the end of their season and another few weeks will see their end. Valley is scarcer than it has been for some time. It is apparent that the growers are making efforts to have a good batch in at Easter. Easter lilies are in fair supply and move slowly. They cost the stores about $2.50 per dozen stems. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths are being shown in various shapes of baskets and pans, but the public is buying but little in the line of highly colored flowers now.

Funeral work remains fair and is the principal mainstay of the retailers.

Various Notes.

John Vallance, of the plant department of C. C. Morse & Co., reports a heavy trade from out-of-town customers at this time.

The Italian green goods men supplying this city and Oakland have formed a trust on a small scale and divided up certain parts of the territory so that it becomes necessary for the retailers to purchase from whoever has been delegated to supply his district. It has already been noticed that there is a slight stiffening of prices for some kinds of stock and if the compact holds it is probable that more will follow.

Chas. A. Jacobs will leave for an eastern trip in a few days. He intends to be gone for about six weeks. G.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Current Comment.

There has been quite an improvement in the cut flower trade. There is a plentiful supply of flowers coming in, with the demand good. Funeral work is using up large quantities of stock. Carnations remain about the same, 50 cents per dozen retail, while a few are selling at 35 cents per dozen. J. H. Cleary had another bargain day Saturday, March 28, when he advertised 8,000 carnations at 20 cents per dozen.

Violets from indoors are nearly through blooming. Some of the growers will have a few from frames, but this Easter they will not be plentiful. They are now retailing at $1 per hundred, while a few are selling at 50 cents per hundred.

Roses bring $1.50 per dozen retail, a few extra choice ones bringing $2.

Sweet peas are now coming in plentifully and retail at $1 per hundred. There is plenty of bulbous stock in. The general retail price is 50 cents per dozen and some are selling at 35 cents per dozen.

E. Y. Pierce has some of the finest sweet peas ever seen around here. The varieties are Florence Denzer and Christmas Pink. They are one mass of blooms. His young carnation stock is in fine shape. He has a big batch of mum stock. Some 25,000 cuttings are to be taken; some of them are already in the sand.

Lilies will be none too plentiful for Easter.

S. S. Peckham reports the rooted cutting business as good. He is cutting an immense quantity of blooms just now.

Stocks for Memorial day are looking fine.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-Pres., O. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE high bush cranberry is a handsome shrub five to ten feet high, which in autumn is striking by reason of its clusters of fine red berries and the color of its leaves.

THE Phoenix Nursery Co., Bloomington, Ill., is opening offices in various sections of the country for the purpose of handling the agency force. The latest office opened is at Jackson, Miss.

THE Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, O., has issued an attractively printed bulletin entitled "Evergreens, Their Uses and Culture," which will be of interest to nurserymen.

C. F. DALLMAN, of the Missoula Nursery Co., Missoula, Mont., March 24 shipped two carloads of nursery stock to McDonald & Tighe, of Billings. The shipment included a large number of McIntosh Reds and other varieties, which will be planted by the farmers of the Yellowstone valley.

THE philadelphus thrives in almost any well drained soil and often does well in the shade of trees and buildings. Pruning should be done after the shrubs have flowered, as the blossoms appear on the wood of the previous year's growth. By pruning, the shrubs can all be kept within fixed limits of growth.

THE Sunnyside Nursery Co., Sunnyside, Wash., has just finished the delivery of last season's stock, and is planting seedlings and grafts for this season. The shipment of seedlings received from France this spring is 100,000 cherries, 110,000 pears, 10,000 plums. They are lining out 300,000 apple seedlings for budding and planting 600,000 apple grafts. They have sufficient peach pits for budding 100,000 during the summer. This company has nurseries at Sunnyside, Grandview and White Bluffs.

MOST of the early blooming spiræas have dense growing habits and must be thinned out while dormant, but under no circumstances should they be pruned in winter or spring, as the flowers would thereby be destroyed. Remove only congested growths and weak wood in thinning out. The old flower sprays should always be cut when through blooming, as this gives the young wood a full opportunity to develop for the following year. Most of the spiræas are unsatisfactory in shade, or near trees. They do best in the sun and like equally light or heavy soil, provided it is well drained.

REORGANIZATION AT SALEM.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Capital City Nursery Co., Salem, Ore., called for the purpose of canvassing the results of the campaign for subscriptions to the capital stock of the reorganized company, it was found that the company still lacked $8,000 of the required $50,000. It seemed to be the sense of the meeting that another effort should be made to raise the required $8,000 and if success was not met with, to give up the proposition.

"What this means to Salem," says

ing gardens where the seeds and plants so secured may be propagated with a view to their dissemination if found valuable. The principal one of these gardens, located at Chico, Cal., is more than eighty acres in extent and is actively engaged in the testing and distribution of numerous things received through the explorers. A total of 53,270 plants were distributed from this garden during the last year.

Much attention is being given to the introduction and culture of the pistache nut, says Dr. B. T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry. New hardy stocks of this promising dry land nut crop have been secured from Turkestan, China and the driest deserts of the Old World. About 16,000 seedling pistache trees were propagated at the Chico garden last year for distribution throughout California, Texas, Arizona and adjacent localities.

Another promising horticultural crop which is being introduced is the date palm. The palms which have been introduced by the department into southern California and Arizona have borne hundreds of pounds of delicious fruit, indicating that the work on this unique desert culture will pass from the stage of a pure experiment to that of a new industry. We are now conducting extensive life history investigations of the date palm, in order to ascertain its exact soil, climatic and cultural requirements. Similar work is also being applied to the fig, pistache and other crops, with promise of valuable results.

One of the introductions to which particular attention has been given is the Japanese salad plant, udo, which grows well in many sections of this country and is handled and served much like celery. To secure the extensive use of the plant, however, will probably take considerable time, as the taste for it is a cultivated one, like that for the olive, mango, etc. It is a promising introduction, however, and is already being widely disseminated and distributed.

CLEVELAND, O.—The fortune of the late Joseph M. Gasser probably will be divided, according to law, by his widow and daughter. A will said to have been made while he was suffering from mental derangement and now in the hands of J. A. Mathews, of the Guardian Trust Co., who is administrator, will never be probated. It was Mr. Gasser's original intention, it is said, to leave his entire fortune, reported as being something over $250,000, to his wife and daughter. After his commitment to a sanitarium he is said to have become incensed and changed the condition, disinheriting his wife and daughter, and leaving his fortune to a more distant relative. Officers of the Guardian Trust Co. say that it is not at all likely that the later will would be offered for probate. The wife will take her dower interest in the real estate and a like share in the personal property. The daughter will get the rest.

NEW ROSE

MRS. JARDINE

Every Florist who Plants a Rose for Winter Forcing wants at least Six Qualities

A FREE, STRONG GROWTH, WITH GOOD FOLIAGE. A VARIETY THAT CAN BE EASILY GROWN. LARGE FLOWERS ON LONG STEMS. DELICIOUS FRAGRANCE. DISTINCT, PLEASING COLOR THAT WILL SELL AT SIGHT. A ROSE THAT WILL HOLD ITS COLOR IN THE DULL DAYS OF DECEMBER AND JANUARY.

MRS. JARDINE has all these characteristics, and, in addition, is of so perfect a form that it can be used either in the bud or half expanded flower. The color is a bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink, and, even in January, when Bridesmaids and Killarney lose their color, Mrs. Jardine is as bright as in October or March.

We extend a cordial invitation to everyone interested in this New Rose to visit our Nurseries and see it growing.

MRS. JARDINE has been awarded Two Silver Medals, numerous Certificates, and successfully stood the best test which any novelty can possibly have in passing unanimously, in December, the Award Committee of the New York Florists' Club after an exhaustive examination of the growing plants, with a score of 92 points.

Strong Plants on own roots, from 2½-inch pots, $6.00 per doz.; $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000; 5000 for $1125.00; 10,000 for $2125.00.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

I cannot say that there has been any special improvement in the general market conditions in this city. While there is not quite so much stock coming in, this being specially true of carnations, yet the demand is so poor that it is impossible to put the price up a bit. If you attempt to raise the price, the stock simply stays with you and you have to drop again in order to move it to save a total loss. It is discouraging, to say the least, and even at this time it is impossible to tell when better times will be with us again. Of course we are looking forward to a good Easter trade, and with flowers somewhat scarce, as it is predicted that they will be at that time, we ought to be able to make up for this slow time in a degree, at least. That carnations will be scarce then almost goes without saying, as every grower you meet agrees that they will be so. This ought to put them at a good price. Roses will likely be the same way. Then, too, bulbous flowers have been blooming at such a lively pace, owing to the hot weather, that many growers will not be able to hold theirs till Easter. If this will cause a shortage of these flowers, it will make the price hold up well and will be of general benefit. From all appearances, Easter lilies will be in good supply and they ought to be first-class property.

So, taking all things into consideration, we can well be looking forward to a good Easter trade this year, and that ought to help make us forget this slump which we have been going through these last few weeks.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Wire Design Co. reports a heavy demand for hanging baskets, as well as other wire designs.

L. H. Kyrk is receiving some good home-grown violets, which have withstood the hot sun well. They are in good demand.

The Lampert Floral Co., Xenia, O., are sending some of the best sweet peas seen in this market.

The extremely hot weather of last week has been succeeded by colder and more seasonable temperatures, but rain and warmer are predicted.

The Greek fakers are still with us and they seem to come like mushrooms. The city authorities have begun to get after them, but so far nothing has been done.

Robert Schenk, of Columbus, O., was a caller. He reported business as good.

C. J. OHMER.

TOPEKA, KAN.—Said Mrs. James Hayes: "There will be, undoubtedly, a scarcity of flowers for Easter decoration. The lilies are budding and in full bloom, just as they should be a month from now. The same is true of the Dutch hyacinths. There will be only a few of these flowers for April 19."

Dreer's Offer of Select Roses

STRONG TWO-YEAR-OLD PLANTS in 5 and 6-inch pots, specially prepared for outdoor planting.

The Roses which we here offer are field-grown stock, either American grown or plants that have been imported from England and Ireland. We handle no Holland grown Roses.

These plants are all potted up during December and January, and were stored in cold houses; they are now freely breaking into growth and are in prime condition to sell to your retail trade; all are in 5 and 6-inch pots, according to variety.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

A well attended meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held at Good Templars' hall, Friday evening, March 27. President Angus filled the chair and, in the absence of Secretary Neubrand, William Scott was appointed secretary pro tem. Two applications for active membership were received and the executive committee presented the name of Henry Siegel as an honorary member.

Letters were read from donors to our prize fund for the next fall exhibition, and most of the prizes given last year will be duplicated, so the outlook is bright for our next November show. The committee in charge is busy preparing the schedules and they will be sent to all concerned in due time.

The prize for cyclamens, presented by William Scott, was awarded to James Stuart, gardener to Mrs. I. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; also, a cultural certificate. Mr. Stuart brought eight plants in 6-inch and 7-inch pots, which were perfect in every way and were greatly admired and commented on.

The same exhibitor was also awarded a cultural certificate for a large plant of Dendrobium nobile in full bloom. W. H. Waite, gardener at Greystone, Yonkers, N. Y., received honorable mention for a vase of schizanthus.

Mr. Tibbits, White Plains, N. Y., will be on hand at our next meeting and give us an illustrated lecture on "Aquatic Gardens." Mr. Tibbits is a successful amateur with aquatic plants and we anticipate a pleasant evening. A prize is also offered by William J. Smith, White Plains, N. Y., for the best two flowering plants. L. A. M.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

M. E. Rice, manager of the Majestic theater, has purchased from M. Pettit the Nelson farm of about 100 acres, situated four miles east of the city, for $12,000, in order that he may enter extensively into the cultivation of the gladiolus. Associated with Mr. Rice will be A. E. Kundard, of Kendallville. Almost the entire area of the farm will be given over to the cultivation of the flower, and while it will be impossible for the gentlemen to make much of a showing the first year, they expect to launch out largely next season.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—L. E. Marquisee says: "There is no use talking; trade has not been up to the mark, on account of the financial disturbance, and collections are and have been slow. But indications are more favorable and we are preparing and looking for a good spring trade."

(5% off, cash with order)

These are good, strong plants that were potted November and December last.

We need the room and must move them.

Also a fine lot of 6½-inch pots at 75c each, 25 or more at 70c each.

This is the most talked about fern of the lot and has been awarded a great many honors, including a medal by the Royal Horticultural Society of London, and the "Gift Cup," by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, for the most meritorious new plant introduced in 1907.

Equally as good as green for cut flowers or pot culture.

CARNATION CUTTINGS

We are in unusually good position to supply exceptionally well-rooted, healthy stock. We have such a large quantity of flowering plants that we propagate only from heel cuttings from flowering shoots. Our cuttings are rooted in light, sunny, airy houses, and we are sure will satisfy the most critical buyer.

A prominent carnation grower writes: "You seem to be the only firm in the business that knows how to pack stock and have it reach the buyer in good condition, and I have always found your cuttings cheaper than the same varieties from others at much lower figures."

While our prices may not always be the cheapest, we certainly can give, quality considered, as good value as, if not better than, is obtainable anywhere.

We offer also BEACON and RED CHIEF, from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. From soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000. Also VICTORY, MELODY, WHITE PERFECTION, from sand, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. From soil, $6.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000. VARIEGATED LAWSON, WHITE LAWSON and RED LAWSON, from sand, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000. From soil, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. We can also supply WINONA and AFTERGLOW, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Buyers will find transplanted stock offered from soil well worth the difference in price.

WINSOR, which we introduced last year, has proved to be the finest novelty introduced in years. We think it is the most profitable variety grown today, considering its fine color, splendid keeping qualities, and productiveness. When properly grown, it leaves little to be desired, and almost everyone succeeds with it.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS, the best all-carnation on account of its large size, long stem, earliness, and productiveness. Our White Enchantress, exhibited at the Carnation Convention at Washington, was the only White Enchantress exhibited that received an award.

WASHINGTON.

Business Slow.

Other than funeral work, business is slow. Stock is abundant and bulbous stuff hardly moves at all. Jonquils have sold at $1.50 per thousand. Some of the larger growers will cut their bulb orders in two this year.

Various Notes.

Joseph Hardy, formerly of Fourteenth street, will open a landscape office on F street next week. He has just returned from a trip to Philadelphia, New York, and down in Virginia, buying stock. He has already booked some nice orders.

Mayberry & Hoover have the opening decoration for the Boston house, one of our largest department stores.

Frank Sly, of the Center market, has the decoration for the Locomotive Firemen's convention next week.

A. J. Phillips, of the Fourteenth street flower store, has returned after a two weeks' sojourn in Toledo, O. Mrs. Phillips had everything in shape for his return and a good report of business.

On account of ill health, the Rosary, on Eighteenth street, is closed for the season. This firm did a cash business.

George Shaffer is in Philadelphia, looking for novelties for Easter.

A note on the death of Simeon Swindells appears in the obituary column this week. O. O.

MONTREAL.

Business has been rather slow lately, and consequently there is a large amount of waste. There are no new plants or flowers on the market. The quality and quantity of all kinds is good.

The store windows are kept a mass of color and bloom. Special mention should be made of Miss Cairn's, Miss Murray's and Campbell's. Some good roses were seen in the Canadian Floral Co.'s place, the interior of which has been altered.

Hall & Robinson report plenty of orders for all things and they are looking forward to a splendid trade at Easter.

J. Bennett reports that things will be late, if anything, this year. Most of his stock for the holidays will be sold in town. He has at present a fine show in his American Beauty house. TOMMY.

MALDEN, MASS.—E. D. Kaulbach & Son have 15,000 pots of giganteum lilies that promise to be in fine shape for Easter.

ROBERT CRAIG COMPANY, 49th and Market Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

State of Business.

The condition of business changed only a little the whole of last week. Stock is plentiful and from all indications there will be an abundance at Easter. Low prices prevail on everything and any flower can be procured on a minute's notice. Plants are none too plentiful, but, from all reports, we expect to see the town overstocked at Easter. Business will have to increase in tremendous strides for everybody to say more was done than last year. With the depression in all other lines, we cannot expect ours to be booming. However, this does not help the situation any.

Various Notes.

Peter Crowe stopped at Buffalo on his return trip from Chicago to Utica. Another season will see Mr. Crowe growing roses again. He is to grow two varieties, Rhea Reid and Killarney. Mr. Crowe has been in the business forty-three years, starting in Orange, N. J.

We have heard of the destructiveness of rats, but the last to come to our notice was the case of S. A. Anderson. He has lost many a pan and flat of tulips and daffodils by the rats eating the center of the bulbs. Naturally, they like the most expensive, for they eat the Murillo tulips sooner than any other.

R. A. S.

CHATHAM, N. Y.—R. E. Shuphelt is expected home in a few days from Fruitland Park, Fla., where he spends his winters.

LEETSDALE, PA.—Wm. Rosenbauer built this spring two up-to-date houses, each 18x112. He intends to grow nothing but bedding stock this season. The houses were erected and stocked under the direction of H. C. Bucheler, of Sewickley.

HASTINGS, NEB.—C. Wm. Sidles is building three more houses, each 20x132 feet. The sashbars and gutters are of galvanized iron, and he thinks that the material and the whole type of construction are such as to make the houses particularly strong, durable and satisfactory. Trade, he says, is good, with an especially active demand for the higher grade of stock.

NEW CANNAS —1908—

ROSEA GIGANTEA. This beautiful variety has extra large flowers, which are borne in such abundance that the mass of color on each plant is amazing. Single petals are 2½ inches across; color, a deep, rich rose, almost a coral carmine. Plants make a vigorous growth, producing unusually fine clumps of green foliage. Height, 4 feet. (A great favorite with visitors to our trial grounds.) Strong plants, $2.00 each, prepaid; $18.00 per doz. by express, not prepaid.

GLADIO-FLORA. Remarkable for the unusual shape of the flowers, which look like large Gladioli. Petals are not long, but short and rounded and so wide they overlap each other, thus giving a very attractive appearance to the flowers. Color is crimson, changing to carmine rose with an uneven edge of gold to each petal. Height, 3½ feet. Price, strong plants, $2.00 each, prepaid; $18.00 per doz. by express, not prepaid.

METEOR. Meteor is a vigorous grower with healthy green foliage. It is highly valued because of its magnificent flowers, fully four inches across, and abundance of bloom. Color is a deep crimson; very rich; each plant usually throws up five to six trusses of buds, which continue blooming luxuriantly all summer through. Price, plants or dormant roots, 75c each, postpaid; $6.00 per doz. by express, not prepaid.

WILLIAM SAUNDERS—(1907). The flowers are large, of splendid form and are borne very freely in immense clusters. The color is a deep, rich, shining scarlet, lightly dappled with crimson. Foliage is a rich bronze. Height, 3½ to 4 feet. We believe that Wm. Saunders is decidedly the most perfect canna of this type that has been introduced. Those who tried Wm. Saunders in 1907 say it cannot be excelled. We offer plants only: 60c ea. postpaid; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100 by express, not prepaid.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The market last week showed a decided improvement, stock of all kinds being well cleaned up at all times. Carnations, which have been a drug in the past, were picked up clean every day.

The cut of roses has increased, but there were none too many for the demand, as there have been quantities of funeral work. Sweet peas, pansies, valley and callas have all sold well. Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus are received in quantity and are cleaned up every day.

Various Notes.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is sending in a fine cut of Harrisii lilies, as well as some fine smilax.

The F. P. Williams Co. has started erecting its new range of eight houses and expects to have them finished by June 1.

Harry Jones, of the Gasser Co., has returned from the south, having enjoyed a most interesting time and gained about fifteen pounds in weight, which, by the way, will do him no harm.

The florists out Quincy avenue way are feeling happy these days; they expect street cars in operation before Decoration day, which means increased trade to all in that locality.

Visitors: William P. Craig and B. Eschner, Philadelphia. B.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co., the new firm whose organization and plans have already been outlined in the REVIEW, has fixed its capital stock, according to the articles of incorporation, at $500,000, of which $200,000 is preferred stock and $300,000 is common. The names of the officers of the company were given in last week's REVIEW.

Frank J. Cook and Samuel J. Perry, of the new firm, visited Chicago recently, inspected several of the large greenhouses there and closed a contract with the A. Dietsch Co. for the construction of the framework of their new range of houses. The material will be Washington red cedar. The contract for the ventilating system has been let to the Quaker City Machine Co., of Richmond, Ind. The hot water system of forced circulation will be used. An automatic sprinkler system will also be installed. The new range will adjoin Mr. Perry's greenhouses on Madison avenue, just outside the city limits, and will consist of ten connected houses, each 15¾x500 feet. These houses will cover about three acres of ground, and this area, added to the space already occupied, will give the company a total of about eight acres under glass. A considerable part of this space will be devoted to the growing of vegetables, and it is expected that the houses will be completed so that the first crop of cucumbers can be planted by May 15.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

Have lilies to burn, the best in the land, the best in the land, the best in the land;
Azaleas in finest colors, to beat the band, to beat the band, to beat the band.

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see,
Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.
Why! Ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show
Of all the best that florists need found in one place to grow.
The lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter day,
Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.
The Araucarias matchless are, so are the ferns all green,
With bulbs, and plumed Spiraea, the best you've ever seen.
And Aschmann gives a challenge, let every florist bear,
For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear.
If you wish to gather dollars like violets in the spring,
Then send your largest order, his plants the cash will bring.

No dull times at Aschmann's. Come and see our activity and the big rush in shipping Azalea Indica, etc. Why not? Remember our Azaleas are of first-class, No. 1 stock.

Azalea Indica. We make a specialty in importing every year an immense stock of this so well-favored Easter plant. Only special American, well-tested varieties are imported, grown under contract for us by an azalea specialist of Ghent, Belgium. If you need Azalea Plants, don't look in vain around the country for bargains, but come or write direct to us. We will be able to supply, with the best obtainable in the American market at moderate prices, plants covered with buds, in good, healthy condition, right for Easter, planted in October and November, in 6 to 7-in. pots.

Please take notice. In justice to our customers we do not sell azaleas in the fall, disposing of the best and leaving the residue for Easter, but we carry them along, thus having for our customers the finest azaleas for Easter. Next, we take great care to select only the ones with plenty of buds. Mme. Vander Cruyssen (have 2500 of them) is the best well-known pink variety, so that nothing further need be said about it. Plants are covered with buds and are round as an apple. Simon Mardner (pink), Vervaekeana (variegated rose); Bernard Andre Alba (dbl. white), no smaller sizes than $1.00 and up; Niobe (dbl. white), Deutsche Perle (dbl. white), Empress of India (variegated), Prof. Wolters and about six more fine varieties, 60c to 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each. Apollo, beautiful red, 60c and 75c.

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week or earlier if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come or mail your order direct to headquarters. Our reputation over the entire country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in growing Easter stock for the wholesale market for the fifteen years past ought to be sufficient guarantee as to the truth of what we say and advertise. Be wise. Never mind about the nonsense hard time talk. Look for a big Easter trade, which is sure to come. Book your order in time, while we have stock to spare and plenty of it. All our houses are full to their utmost capacity with the choicest plants, in bud and bloom, just right for Easter or earlier if wanted.

We print no catalogue. This is our lowest cash price for the busy season.
No references can be investigated. Cash with order, please.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta and Glauca, a perfect marvel and wonder of nature. We are one of the heaviest importers and cultivators of this beautiful decorative plant, and plants are about the same in width as in height. Robusta Compacta, 7-in. pots, specimen plants, 6 years old, 5 tiers, 25 to 30 inches high, $2.00 to $3.00 each.

Excelsa Glauca, specimens, 7-in. pots, 30 to 40 inches high, 4, 5, 6 tiers, 6 years old; the fine bluish-green color of this variety gives it the most striking appearance; sells at sight; $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 6-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 20 to 25 inches high, 4, 5, 6 tiers, 75c to $1.00 each; 5½-in. pots, 3 years old, 3 to 4 tiers, 7, 8, 10 to 14 inches high, 50c each.

Choice Nephrolepis, pot-grown. Boston Ferns, 8-in., as big as a bushel basket or wash tub, $1.25 to $1.50; 7-in., $1.00; 6-in., 50c; 5 to 5½-in., 35c to 40c. Whitmani, 4-in. pots, 25c. Scottii, 7-in., $1.00 to $1.25; 6-in., 50c; 5½-in., 40c. N. Amerpohlii, the new lace fern, 5½ in. pots, 50c to 60c. Piersoni, 5, 5½ and 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c.

Begonia New Improved Erfordii, always in bloom, summer and winter; 4-in. pots, very strong, $2.00 per doz.; 5½-in., in bloom and bud, 25c; $3.00 per doz.

Hybrid Roses (budded), best varieties, 2 to 3½ ft. high, and Hermosa, 5½ to 6-in. pots, in bud, 50c.

White Daisies, Marguerites; 5½-in. pots, 25c.

Primula Obconica, 5½-in. pots, in bloom, $2.00 to $2.50 per doz.

Ferns for dishes, 3-in. pots, 7c.

Have some white Azaleas Deutsche Perle and Vervaekeana now in bloom if wanted, at 60c, 75c and $1.00 each.

Hyacinths, raised from first-class bulbs of our own importation. These hyacinths cannot be compared with ordinary stuff raised from cheap bulbs floating the market. King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (lavender blue), Gertrude (pink), and La Grandisse (white), 4-in. pots, $12.00 per 100.

Touresol Tulips, red or yellow variegated. This is the best selling double tulip in the market. Will stay in bloom in good condition ten days. Three bulbs in one 4-in. pot, $1.50 dozen pots or $12.00 per 100 pots.

Double Von Slon Narcissus, the best yellow narcissus in the market, sells at sight, three double-nosed bulbs planted in one 5-in., 5½-in. to 6-in. pots. Price, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 per dozen pots.

Ipomoea Noctiflora. Best pure white moon-vine in market, very fragrant and as big as a saucer. On this variety we have a world-wide reputation as growers and shippers for the last twenty years. Price, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100. 10,000 are now ready.

Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora, 5-in., 20c; 6-in., $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per doz. Right for Easter.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3-in., 15c.

Begonia Flambeau, sells at sight, 4-in. pots, 20c; 5½-in. pots, 25c.

Kentia Belmoreana and Forsteriana, 4-in. pots, 18 to 20 inches high, 35c; 5½ to 6-in. pots, European stock, 20 to 25 inches high, 75c; 5 to 5½-in. pots, bushy plants, 50c, 60c.

Dracaena Brnanti, from Belgium, 6-in., 22 to 25 inches high, full of leaves from bottom to top, 40c each.

Ficus Elastica or Rubber Plant, home-grown and Belgium stock, 5, 5½, 6, 7-in. pots, 20, 25, 30, 35 and 40 inches high, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c each.

Cyclamen, 4-in. pots, in bud and bloom, 20c.

Latania Borbonica, 5-in. pots, 30c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, already forced, in buds, just right for Easter, 6 to 7-in. pots, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00 each.

Easter Lilies. Japan Multiflorum, of our own importation, raised from special 10-in. bulbs, 6-in. pots, right for Easter. This year I can say we have the finest lot, 15 to 40 inches in height, free of disease, we have had for years past. The large demand for lilies exceeds the supply every year; we, therefore, ask that you order early. Price, plants with five buds and upwards, 10 cents per bud; plants with under five buds, 12 cents per bud. We can satisfy all wants if ordered soon.

Owing to the small profit in the growing of Easter lilies, an order for a reasonable amount of other stock should accompany all orders for lilies.

Spiraea Gladstone, 6 to 7-in. pots, large stuff, 50c to 75c each.

Please mention if in or out of pots. All goods must travel at owner's risk.

DETROIT.

The Market.

There has been no real change in the market since last report. Business remains about the same. A number of fakers are doing all in their power to relieve the carnation glut, by selling them as low as two dozen for 25 cents. Roses clean up well and are bringing good prices. Even though we are in Lent, there seems to be a good demand for violets. Some fine ones are coming from Mt. Clemens.

Various Notes.

Fred Pautke, of Grosse Pointe, has two new seedlings that may prove of much value to florists. One is a sweet pea of delicate shade. The other is a seedling from a cross of two of his own seedling carnations. The color is of the Enchantress shade, but just a little more decided. The flower comes of a good commercial size, on a good, wiry stem.

The Kenneth Anderson Co. reports a heavy demand for Revere hose. This firm is preparing for more business than ever before in pipe, fittings, etc., for the coming season.

The suit between Louis Knauss and George Leadly has finally been settled in favor of the former. Leadly still has ninety days in which to decide whether he will carry the case to a higher court. In the meantime the business will be carried on by Mrs. A. P. Cox, a daughter of Mr. Knauss. The building at 233 Woodward avenue, where the store is at present located, is to be torn down, so Mrs. Cox is compelled to move this week. New quarters have been taken up in the new Healy building, corner of Broadway and Wilcox.

William E. Hielscher is just mailing several thousand copies of a handsome new illustrated catalogue of wire work, wire supplies, tinfoil, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Maynard were among the visitors at the rose show in Chicago last week. Mrs. Maynard is delighted with the way the membership list of the S. A. F. Ladies' Auxiliary is swelling.

Adolph Epding, formerly gardener for Bernard Stroh, at Grosse Pointe Farms, has accepted a position as gardener for E. C. Walker, in Walkerville, Ontario.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange is doing a rushing business in lily plants.

PENTSTEMONS.

The value of pentstemons for a long-continued display of bright flowers is becoming more and more appreciated, though still not so fully as their merits deserve. Good forms raised from seed can be selected and propagated annually in the same way as calceolarias, but where distinct colors are at once desired now is a good time to order named varieties. Numerous charming shades are procurable, and a few good varieties are Crimson Gem, George Horne, Phryne, General White, Ninon de l'Enclos, Talma, Daphne, Edwin Beckett, John Jennings, Lord Lister, and others. Newbury Gem and White Newbury Gem, says an English gardening magazine, though not bearing such large flowers, are even more continuous bloomers, and so extremely elegant that they should be included.

THE GERMINATION OF SEEDS.

Darkness and definite amounts of heat, moisture and oxygen are required to accomplish the germination of seeds, says the National Council of Horticulture. While the Council's press matter is elemental and intended for the general public, there is much in it that beginners in the trade would profit by. Seeds, it is said, are stored with enough energy to enable them to develop a certain length of shoot and root, so it is not necessary to have the soil in which to sow them rich, provided it is intended to transplant the seedlings. It is important to have good drainage, and at the same time the soil should not dry out too quickly.

The amount of oxygen supplied to seeds regulates itself, if they are planted in soil that will readily admit air. Heat and moisture should be carefully regulated. A mixture containing equal parts of loam, leaf-soil or peat, with a good sprinkling of sand, will give best results except for seeds of aquatic plants, orchids, etc., which require special and expert treatment.

In preparing soil in which to plant seeds it should be passed through a coarse screen to remove lumps. If the seeds are to be sown in pots, the latter should be cleaned and a few pieces of broken pots or pebbles placed in the bottom of the pot for drainage. Fill the pots with the soil, raking the surface firm and level. If the seeds are very small, sift fine soil on top and immerse the pots in water, allowing them to soak well before sowing the seed. The latter should be scattered over the surface if they are small, not covered. Place over them a pane of glass.

HARDY PHLOXES.

The hardy perennial phloxes of the P. paniculata and P. maculata groups have rapidly grown in favor, and are now numbered among the most popular of herbaceous flowering plants, says W. Van Fleet, in the Rural New Yorker. Breeders have been active, and the old varieties have been replaced by new kinds of stocky growth, producing dense rounded panicles, often nearly a foot broad, of large, richly colored blooms, in great variety of tints and shadings, ranging from the purest of white through every shade of rose and purple to flaming crimson, almost scarlet in its brilliant effect. Habit and foliage are also much improved, the newer kinds growing from one to nearly three feet high, and the blooming season is extended from midsummer until frost.

Perennial phloxes are easily grown in any fairly moist soil, but thrive best in deep, well-manured loam. They are hardy, needing little or no protection, but the crowns are likely to be injured by standing water in winter. They should be planted in full sun and need little care after establishing, coming up every season and blooming profusely for many weeks. In damp and shady situations there is sometimes trouble from leaf mildew, but with ample sunlight and good air drainage they are among the most satisfactory of plants. Best results are had by dividing the clumps every third or fourth season, taking vigorous sprouts with roots attached from the outer parts of the mass to form the new plants. This is best done soon after growth starts in spring. Propagation is also effected by cuttings of the flowering shoots in summer, rooted in sand under glass or in partial shade. These make neat little plants by fall, but are best wintered under frames, as the short roots render them liable to heaving by frost if planted out.

In the newer varieties the blooms have been greatly improved in texture and lasting quality, as well as in size and purity of coloring. Certain of the more compact ones can well be used for cutting, as the florets no longer drop at a touch as in many of the older kinds, and the panicles do not so readily droop when placed in water.

Some of the best ones are: Mme. P. Langier, bright carmine, older florets do not change color, lasting and showy; Semiramis, peach color, white center; Edmond Rostand, deep violet red, shading to white at edge, very large; Eiffel Tower, tall, upright grower, soft, clear rose, darker edge, very fine; La Nuit, dwarf, rich dark red; Independence, pure white, early blooming; F. G. Von Lanburg, the largest flowering white variety in cultivation; Coquelicot, the brightest red, almost pure scarlet with darker eye, very brilliant.

The Market.

Business last week was good, chiefly owing to three large funerals, which used up all the blooms that could be cut and kept all the storemen busy. The weather during the week was more like summer than spring, though at the last it changed and got a good deal cooler, much to the relief of the growers, who have a large quantity of bulbous stock to dispose of.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the State Florists' Association will be held April 7, at the state house. A full attendance is desired, as business of importance will be brought before the meeting.

The City Florists' Club will meet at Baur & Smith's greenhouses April 8. This gathering is purely social.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE article on "Refrigeration for the Florist" on page 6 of this issue of the REVIEW also contains much of interest with regard to the heating system of the Pochlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.

HOT WATER FOR ONE HOUSE.

Will your greenhouse heating expert kindly advise me how to pipe for hot water, in this Illinois climate, a greenhouse 27½x60 feet, twelve feet to the ridge, running north and south, with side walls five feet high? I contemplate using either a Wilks or a Tobasco boiler. This house is to be used for growing violets. E. E.

With the amount of radiation necessary in this house, I judge your best plan will be to run a single 3-inch flow from the boiler to the far end of the house and there divide by 2-inch pipes to supply thirteen 2-inch returns, three under each bench, except the side bench on the coldest side, where there should be four. The boiler should have a rated capacity for 800 to 1,000 square feet of radiation. L. C. C.

BOILER TOO LARGE.

I have four greenhouses to heat, of the following sizes: One 12x75 feet, two 21x75 feet each, and one 27x65 feet. These houses I expect to heat from one boiler, using hot water. Since, in this section of South Carolina, I am so far away from the manufacturers who make a specialty of greenhouse boilers, the freight would necessarily be very high on them, so I decided to look around for a good second-hand tubular boiler, and having found one rated at forty horse-power, I am anxious to know whether it will pay me better to get one rated at about twenty horse-power, even though the cost is more. Can

If a breakage occurs the half section can be removed, the openings plugged, the broken section replaced to form the firepot; and the boiler keeps right on working. This change can be made before the general temperature of the greenhouse is reduced more than a few degrees.

The florist will realize what this means. Let us send illustrated catalog, describing the strong advantages of Capitol Boilers for Florists. Just know for yourself. We will leave the rest to your own business judgment.

the fire-box be made narrower and, if the boiler is well incased with brick, will the cost of fuel be more by using this large boiler? What is your advice? J. N. H.

I doubt if it would be advisable to install a forty horse-power boiler for heating the present range of houses. A twenty horse-power boiler, or one having about 290 square feet of heating surface, should be ample for your present needs. The larger quantity of water to be raised to the temperature desired in the system is the handicap of the large boiler. If, however, you contemplate adding to the present glass area, it may be wise to install the larger boiler. L. C. C.

FROM BOILER TO GRATES.

In the quotation from "How to Burn Illinois Coal Without Smoke," found in the REVIEW of March 12, page 80, it is stated: "Having in mind the horizontal fire tube boiler, the distance from the boiler to the grates should be from thirty to thirty-four inches. At this distance the flame from Illinois coal will sweep along the bottom of the boiler and much smoke will result. Still it must be borne in mind that a large part of the heat to be obtained from the burning of the fixed carbon part of these coals is transferred to the shell in the form of radiant heat and for this purpose the grate should be near the boiler."

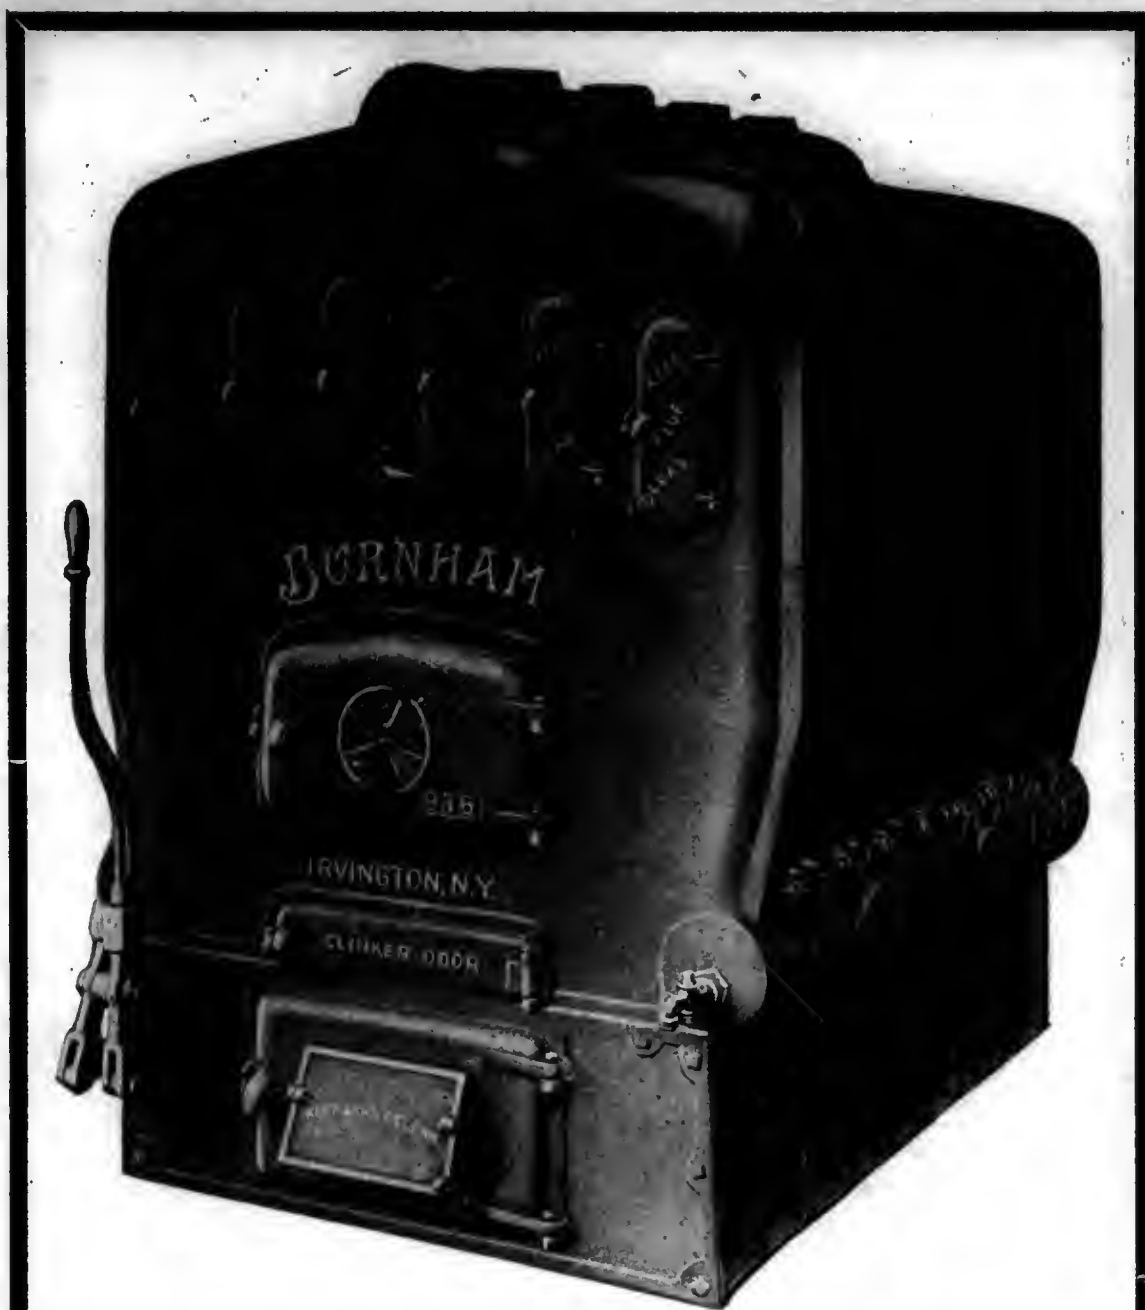

It is difficult to understand the above and I would be glad of an explanation, as I am about to install a horizontal fire tube boiler in part of my plant and would like to know how high to set the boiler above the grates. There is no "front," so the height the maker intended is not obtainable. The boiler was in use last year, but on account of lack of head room was set fourteen inches above the grates. It did not work well, taking a long time to heat. Now, what is the best height to set the boiler for hot water, using washed nut Illinois coal? There is an indefinable distance between thirty to thirty-four inches and "near the boiler." J. Y. L.

For many of the western coals a distance of about thirty-four inches between the grate and boiler appears to give the best satisfaction in a horizontal return tubular boiler setting. Increasing the distance from, say, fourteen inches or sixteen inches to about thirty-four inches, makes the operation of the furnace more satisfactory, especially with respect to smoke control. Simply lowering the grates, however, will not make a setting of this kind operate without smoke, and lowering the grates a distance much greater than about three feet probably results in a loss due to heat not being transferred to the shell from the fire bed in the form of radiant heat.

I believe that a careful reading of the paragraphs "Smoke Prevention with the Horizontal Fire Tube Boiler" and "The Distance Between the Boiler and the Grates," in Bulletin No. 15 of the Engineering Experiment Station, will be of service in this connection. Parties interested can obtain a copy of this bulletin by addressing the Engineering Experiment Station, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. L. P. BRECKENRIDGE.

HEATING TABLES.

The later-day catalogues of the boiler manufacturers are veritable encyclopedias of heating data; aside from the arguments for that particular make of boiler, they contain many pages of tables and directions necessary to consider in installing any heating plant. For instance, the general catalogue of the United States Heater Co., manufacturer of the Capital boiler, contains a table showing the minimum size of main to be used in supplying direct radiation at different distances from the boiler. Too many florists who do their own piping fail to consider that the distance the hot water or steam travels from boiler to coils is an important factor in determining the size of the flow, second only to the amount of radiation to be supplied. The catalogue also supplies tables showing the number of square feet of radiation in pipes of various sizes, the size of flow necessary to care for any given number of smaller radiating pipes, the velocity of flow of water, the amount of expansion of wrought iron pipe at several different temperatures, and much other matter that has to be considered in every greenhouse installation.

PRESSURE REGULATION.

It has been found, by experience, that in heating large ranges of greenhouses by steam, it is more economical and more efficient to use steam at a pressure between thirty and fifty pounds and reduce to ten pounds or lower. This requires a regulating valve that will automatically control the pressure. The Eclipse valve has been installed by a large number of the leading growers in the vicinity of Chicago and does the work satisfactorily. The boiler pressure may vary, but the valve maintains an even pressure on the radiating pipes. In many cases the foremen use the pressure valve, instead of the globe valves, as a means of regulating the heat in the houses: when the day is warm they check down the valve to reduce the pressure on the coils, and when the outside temperature falls they simply increase the pressure a half pound at a time. This keeps the temperature of the houses more uniform than would be the case if part of the pipes were cut out, and with less work. The more variable the outside temperature is, the more valuable this method of heating is found. On page 10 of this issue are shown two 8-inch pressure regulating valves, placed

From now to replanting time you will need some of these. Our prices can't be beat if you insist on having the pure article. (There are lots of "cheap" offers to be had—but an impure fertilizer is not only valueless, but harmful, as growers all know, and not to be used, even if it costs nothing.) We guarantee the absolute purity of our fertilizers, as follows:

The above fertilizers are so well known to all growers of flowers that further comment is unnecessary. Write for prices on larger quantities.

This we believe to be the coming fertilizer. Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Illinois, after using two cars for trial, ordered three hundred tons, and say: "It is fully three to four times as strong as rough manure, and being put up in bags, not a pound is wasted, which makes it cheaper in our opinion than rough manure which we got for freight and cost of loading." Not only should cut flower growers give this a trial, but florists who do bedding and other planting will find it a good seller to put on lawns. Clean—no odor. Write for prices on car lots.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

A weekly report of trade is not the most spicy reading just at present; the best one can say is that there is no change in the general condition. Stock has been coming in more plentifully every day and the commission men have been kept on the jump trying to take care of it. Saturday is the only day they come anywhere near cleaning up, and I have not yet become hardened enough to quote the prices at which it is done. One commission man says he carries a card in his hand, and when he quotes prices to anyone he writes it on the card, as he is ashamed to hear himself speak it aloud.

The retailers do not complain much, however. As they examine the general situation, they say our business is holding up as well as can be expected under the circumstances. But the growers are just as game and I have not heard them make much complaint. They seem to be satisfied with what they are getting.

DENISON, TEX.—E. Farley, proprietor of the Denison Greenhouses, has had a large trade during the winter, and has had difficulty in attending to it on account of illness at his home. The demand, in fact, was greater than he could supply, though he bought all the available stock in his neighborhood in the effort to fill his orders. He will soon add about 1,500 feet of glass to his plant, and already has part of the material ordered.

Great Grates.

As fast as old grate bars are burned out many growers are putting in the Martin rocking grate. The call for this grate is largely increased by the fact that the growers who have used it for one or more seasons are almost without exception equipping other boilers with it. The grate costs considerably more than the stationary bars, but is figured to make a decided saving in fuel, and that is what all the growers are after.

PREPARATIONS FOR EASTER.

Make a Good Show.

A flower store should at all times be a model of neatness and good order, but at Easter it is especially necessary that effort be made to have an attractive display. If your store is not as attractive as that of your neighbor you cannot expect to get an equal share of the public attention; you cannot make your share of the sales, nor can you get as good prices. Bear in mind the advice once given by William Scott to a young florist just starting in business: "Hang out all your wash, and wash all you got." It fits everybody's case when holiday business is the object sought.

It is not every flower store that has the space for so good a display as is shown in the accompanying illustration, but practically every store gives room for a number of made-up baskets, and plant arrangements of various kinds, to serve not only the purpose of decoration but as samples of the stock for the sale.

Filling Orders.

Some retailers make it a practice to make actual sales from a stock display, marking the pieces for delivery and putting them away as fast as the customers make their selections, and bringing in from the greenhouses or reserve stock new arrangements to take the place of those sold from the display. But not many have the facilities for handling the Easter rush in that manner. With most of us it is necessary to book the orders as early as possible and postpone the making up until the night before Easter, when all hands work as late as may be necessary, and it frequently is all night, filling the orders for early morning delivery.

The Requisites.

Get your stock of supplies ready right away; there is danger in letting this go until the last minute. See that you have all the baskets you will need, and crepe paper, and ribbon, and the dozens of requisites that you need for the Easter orders. See that you get a specimen of each kind of pot cover, hamper, basket, etc., into the display. It often happens that the basket sells the plant, although we would wish it to be otherwise.

Get your cut flower boxes made up and stored in a convenient place; get a fresh roll of paper where you can get at it quickly when the one on the reel runs out. Attention to the small details of preparation will do much toward making everything go smoothly when the high pressure is on.

Easter Deliveries.

Figure out your delivery plans. Remember that a mistake in delivery often means the loss of a customer, and see to it that you have a system which will reduce the friction and worry to a minimum.

In one of the large cities at Christmas a leading retailer had several hundred pieces to deliver Christmas morning. He arranged for extra wagons and he hired from the plantmen, whose rush was over, several extra skilled men to do the wrapping. In his shipping room he set aside a place for each route and as fast as the orders were put up the package was passed to a wrapper and then placed on that part of the floor designated for that particular route. The clerk who was responsible for the routing also checked the order to see that attached to it were the cards showing the name and address of the recipient and the card of the person who sent the gift; also the receipt blank for signature to prove correct delivery. When Christmas morning came the nearest routes were sent out first, and when the wagons came back from the first round they were sent to the farther ones, distant orders having been left and not put up until the nearby ones had gone. In this case only one error in delivery was reported; and that was a case where the order clerk had put up the wrong article.

A Well-Appointed Flower Store in Its Easter Attire.

Two Quick Sellers Among Easter Plant Arrangements.

Such a system can be modified to meet the needs of any retail store—but the time to figure out the plan is right now, not Saturday night before Easter.

EASTER ARRANGEMENTS.

Moderate Priced Articles.

No matter how high class trade a florist has, the larger part of his Easter sales, as at any other time, will be on the things he can offer at moderate prices. It is so at the store of the E. Wienhoeber Co., Chicago, and no store in that city has a more favorable location for holiday business, or a wealthier class of customers. "Where we sell one plant arrangement at $15," said Mr. Wienhoeber, "we sell a dozen at $3 each."

In any first-class flower store the great majority of the customers will come with the idea of spending from $2.50 to $5, and, of course, in many places such prices will be right up to the limit of what any customer will spend. It may be all right to have a few big baskets, well filled hampers, and expensive plants about the store, but the display that will really bring the money will be a good assortment of things that are well within the means of the class of customers you cater to. It always is so, and this year it will be more so than ever. It pays to teach your patrons to appreciate better and better stock, but the way to do it is to offer a selection at a range of prices, not by effort to induce a customer to spend more than was intended. No matter what the class of trade you handle, have a few things for the person with the slender purse. To let such a one go out with the idea that everything in the store is beyond the means of ordinary people is to not only keep that person away in future, but that person's friends.

Odd Receptacles.

On pages 24 and 25 of this issue are illustrations of some of the best selling things shown at Wienhoeber's. They will serve as examples of good arrangement, for in each case the colors were in perfect harmony and added a great deal to the salability of the stock. As the Wienhoeber trade is of the kind that knows good ware at sight, the receptacles are of the best grade and the selling price consequently higher than it would have been had cheaper ware been used.

The details of color combination are given too little consideration in the average flower store; it really is the point which marks the artist and sets his productions apart from those who merely work at the trade. Appreciation of color values is the most difficult thing to teach the young people beginning life in flower stores, for an eye for color is like an ear for music—natural to some and almost impossible of attainment for others. For the one who possesses the painter's perception as to color values, great variety of plant arrangement is possible, while the work of the one who is without that faculty is either commonplace or else unfortunate combinations give a frequent note of discord—indeed, color-blindness has been charged against some retailers as a result of disregard of the canons of art in the use of colors.

But there is just one little touch in the Wienhoeber pieces illustrated that anybody can accomplish and few can fail to appreciate. It will be noted that in each case the soil is covered with live sphagnum moss. It gives a finish that would not be possible in any other way.

BIRCH BARK.

In all the long list of aids which the supply houses afford the retail florists in disposing of their Easter stock, nothing is more serviceable than birch bark ware. In the early days of birch bark, the plant receptacles made of this material were rough and not at all artistic, but the bark is so well fitted to combination with plants and flowers that ingenious gentlemen have developed the line until now it has all the artistic merits of more expensive ware. The shapes are innumerable and something adapted to every purpose may be had, whether it be as a receptacle for a bunch of violets or for planting as a window-box, with all the range between.

One page 27 of this issue there is a reproduction from a photograph of a handled basket containing azaleas, Souper roses, primulas, a Japanese maple, adiantum, Asparagus Sprengeri and other material. There is hardly any plant which does not look well in birch bark.

Where the sale of Easter lilies is by the single plant, birch bark boxes make a pleasing variation from the ordinary pot covered with paper or mats. Take a short lily or two, with several half opened buds, plant the lily in a birch bark box and tie a big bow of pale green ribbon or chiffon a few inches above the box, cover the soil with some live sphagnum and you have an arrangement that will be found quickly salable.

A birch bark box, lichen covered, the length being about four times the width, planted with good primulas, perhaps with a few small ferns between the primulas if they show the soil, makes an arrangement you can sell at a first rate profit.

Every retailer ought to have in stock a variety of birch bark pieces. All the supply houses afford a range of selection, most of the pieces at moderate prices. You can send them $5 or $10 for an "assortment" and they will send you one piece of each pattern or size; no two alike in the assortment. Then, each piece being numbered and priced, you can re-order by number as you sell out.

THE PRIMULA.

It isn't every florist who has a sale for the big Crimson Ramblers, the fifteen-dollar azaleas and the big plant combinations that mean a high class trade, but there is no retail florist who does not have a place for the primula at Easter. You can use it in a hundred different ways, either by itself or in the combination with other plants.

On page 28 of this issue there is an illustration from a photograph of a straw basket of primulas. The handles of the basket in this case are one on each side and not attached in the center. They were drawn together with a big bow of chiffon of pale green and the arrangement sold like hot cakes last Easter in a first-class store at $2 to $2.50 apiece. There was good money in them at that. Of course, the receptacle was metal lined to hold moisture.

It is interesting to note how popular chiffon has become. The light, airy grace of this material has caused it to be used, the last year or so, much more freely than ribbon is used. The range of colors is wide and there is hardly a plant arrangement to which chiffon may not be added with good effect.

TWIG BASKETS.

Twig baskets are no longer to be classed among the novelties, but they are so specially useful and salable at Easter that every retail store should have a stock of them. On page 31 of this issue a bird's nest twig basket is shown, planted with valley. It is so much more salable than the ordinary pot of valley with crepe paper covering that the difference will surprise retailers who have not tried this line.

The twig ware may be had in a great variety of shapes and sizes. You can plant almost anything in it with good effect. They are metal lined, so that the moisture does no harm, and some shapes may be used for cut flowers with good effect.

GREEN AND GOLD.

The illustration on page 29 of this issue is reproduced from a photograph of an Easter arrangement which was truly described as a symphony in green and gold. It is an arrangement which may be varied in cost by the simple process of choosing a hamper of appropriate size and using a requisite number of narcissi. The beauty of the basket lay in the color harmony. The basket was dark green, with the edges lightly gilded. The adiantum carried the color scheme to the lighter green of the narcissi foliage, and the golden yellow trumpets. A metal pan for the basket is, of course, a necessity, for the recipient of such an Easter gift will water it and enjoy its lasting qualities.

BASKET OF LILIES.

The ways of arranging lilies for sale are as variable as the date of Easter itself. By far the greater number are sold with a simple pot cover and no other embellishment, but in the better class of stores arrangements more elaborate are required.

A tasteful affair is the basket of lilies shown in the illustration on page 26. The braided basket of green and white is lined with a metal pan and the lilies are taken from their pots and planted in the basket with a considerable quantity of soil. The lasting qualities of such an arrangement are excellent and the size may be brought within the requirements of any customer simply by using a basket to contain the designated number of blooms at the usual selling price per flower and bud. The ribbon in this case was a darker green than the foliage of lilies—one bow on the handle of the basket and the other on one corner. Bare spaces around the edge of the basket may be filled by planting with asparagus or small ferns.

This method of arrangement calls for short lilies, the same as are used in making up large pans, and it is a good improvement on that method of using this stock.

WITH LONDON RETAILERS.

In funeral designs foliage is now extensively used as a groundwork, but a London florist remarked the other day that maidenhair fern to stand above the flowers was quite out of fashion, though a few customers still like wreaths, etc., made up in the old orthodox style. The chaplets, crosses and other designs made of bronze foliage with a cluster of flowers on one portion only are much appreciated. In one of the leading shops a writer in the Horticultural Trade Journal recently noted a large chaplet; on the left side were seven or eight calla blooms, worked in among foliage, and on the opposite side lilies of the valley, the flowers reaching only about half way from the base and the narrow part composed of foliage only. On inquiring the price of some well-finished designs he was surprised to find how low they were quoted. A really beautiful wreath was quoted at $2.50, a price which in the ordinary way could not more than cover the cost of the flowers, but he was told that for casual trade there is now so much competition that to clear up surplus flowers they must put prices low, and it is only when special orders come in that reasonable prices can be made.

has been much overdone of late years by many so-called first-class stores. Well grown plants require little of this ornamentation. It detracts from rather than adds to their beauty. In the case of those only moderately well grown, the judicious use of decorative materials will frequently enhance their value and assist in selling them.

In taking orders from your customers, do not promise to deliver them at any particular time, unless you intend to do so. Nothing will so exasperate a person as to be guaranteed delivery at the hour wanted and then maybe not receive the purchase until the following day. Try to deliver your orders as promptly as possible and you will find that not only do your customers appreciate it, but that it will eventually swell your volume of trade.

Easter Lilies.

We hope the lilies are now right for Easter. There are always many laggards and much moving around is necessary to get any considerable batch in bloom at the same time. It must be remembered that the sale for lilies after Easter is small and that prices are lower. It behooves us, therefore, to get all we can into flower before the great floral festival.

If buds are of good size, it is possible to do considerable with them in a week. Give the backward plants a sunny house. Keep it as warm as 75 degrees at night. Syringe the plants several times a day. Close the house early in the afternoon and let it run up to 90 to 100 degrees in the shade. Keep a constantly moist atmosphere and you will probably land a good proportion of your flowers. These lilies will lack the substance of cooler grown ones, but customers fight shy of plants with buds only, and if you have only one flower open, you will be able to sell your plants.

Primulas.

The seedlings from the earliest sowings of Primula obconica and P. Sinensis should now be of sufficient size to prick out into flats of light compost. Use about half leaf-mold and do not add any manure at this stage of growth. Keep the flats on a light bench or shelf.

SEASONABLE

Preparations for Easter.

Only one more week to Easter, the most strenuous of all the commercial florists' harvests. We hope that in spite of considerable pessimistic talk, especially in the Eastern wholesale markets, the volume of business will equal that of a year ago, and that prices, while they can hardly be expected to soar to any new heights with business under something of a cloud, will still be satisfactory to the growers.

It would really seem that each succeeding Easter more and more people prefer plants to cut flowers and the trade in pot plants increases in a much heavier ratio than that for cut flowers in all the large markets.

Flowering plants, we presume, will be in a cool house, well shaded. Give them all the air possible in favorable weather. See that all dead and decaying leaves are removed, that neat supports be given any lilies or other plants requiring them and, most important of all, scrub the pots or pans thoroughly clean. The need for this last advice may seem superfluous, but every year we see plants, often well grown, being marketed in dirty pots. A plant of only moderate quality looks presentable if in a clean pot, but even the best of them look uninviting in a dirty receptacle.

Necessity for Wrapping.

It is never safe to predict what Easter weather will be. It can be anything from the elements from the tropics to the condition of the arctics. If, perchance, the preceding days are balmy and free from boisterous winds, it means much to the growers and retailers, who can then send in their plants unprotected, but when March changes places with April, we must be on the alert or we will have the usual quota of murmurings from disappointed customers because of frozen plants.

Perhaps Easter weather may make wrapping-paper around the plants unnecessary, but, on the other hand, we are liable to have biting winds even as late as April 19, in which case every care must be taken to paper them over securely. Some plants will stand considerable cold without apparently resenting it; others, which have been subjected to hard forcing and may not have been properly hardened, will be ruined by a temperature several degrees above freezing.

Make sure that all plants you send out are moist at the root. A quite common practice among retailers now is to fasten a tag on each plant, requesting the purchaser to water it every day. Even this will not suffice for astilbes, hydrangeas, marguerites and rambler roses in a warm room. Tell your customers about how frequently to water plants bought, for there is a lamentable ignorance of their needs in nine-tenths of the cases.

Decoration and Delivery.

The adornment of plants with ribbons

An Easter Basket of Lilies.

Birch Bark is Among the Best Ware for Making Up Easter Plant Arrangements.

Owing to the increasing power of the sun, the glass will now require a little shade. A temperature of 50 degrees at night is sufficient.

There is still time to make a final sowing of these primroses and get nice plants in 5-inch pots for winter. Place the flats or pans in a warm, moist house and keep them shaded.

Lorraine Begonias.

The old plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, kept over and kept on the dry side for a time, are now furnishing a good crop of cuttings, which will root readily in a good bottom heat. Do not keep the cutting bench for these so moist as you would for chrysanthemums or carnations, or the cuttings will rot. Neither must they be heavily shaded; merely break the direct rays of the sun from shining on them.

The little plants propagated from leaf cuttings will grow well in a night temperature of 55 to 58 degrees. Growth is not rapid with this begonia at present. From August they make quick headway.

Hydrangeas.

While there will be a larger sale than usual for hydrangeas for Easter this year, on account of its coming so late in the season, Memorial day always calls for an immense number of them for piazza boxes, cemetery vases and other purposes. It is difficult to find greenhouse space for these until the Easter rush is over, but it must not be forgotten that the space between Easter and Memorial day is this year only six weeks, and any plants of hydrangeas to be in bloom at that time must now be growing freely and should show their flower heads by Easter.

There is a probability of the little cuttings potted off a short time ago becoming potbound. It will be better to give them a shift, as under the most favorable circumstances they cannot be planted out before the middle of May.

Rambler Roses.

The late date of Easter makes it quite easy to have rambler roses in season. In removing plants in bloom to a cooler house, be careful that it is not too cold and draughty or you may get a dose of mildew, which will ruin their appearance.

From pieces of half ripened wood you can now secure plenty of wood for propagating purposes. Cuttings with two eyes are sufficiently large and will root quite freely at this season in such a cutting bench as you have been using for carnations. Started now and grown along you can get nice plants with strong canes in 5-inch and 6-inch pots before fall. Keep them under glass, however, and do not attempt to grow them outdoors until late in the summer.

Dutch Bulbous Stock.

If your pans and pots of bulbous stock can be grown and flowered in cold-frames, they will be much stockier than when subjected to fire heat. Only use the latter treatment if you feel they are going to be a trifle late. The tulips and narcissi should require no supports, but it will be better to put short supports to each hyacinth stalk, as they snap off so easily.

Brief Reminders.

Zinnias, annual sunflowers, and other rapid-growing annuals should now be sown.

Be careful to protect the roots of trees and shrubs from drying winds and sunshine.

Keep transplanting seedlings as fast as they are large enough. A little neglect in Easter week may spoil many of them.

Do not forget to pot up a good batch of dormant ramblers to grow through the summer under glass for use at Easter, 1909.

Plant out any perennials and biennials carried over in frames.

Water pansies in frames freely. Remove the sashes during the daytime and on warm nights. To keep them stocky, take away the last of the mulching from outdoor plants.

Grow Jerusalem cherry seedlings cool. Place in a coldframe after the middle of April.

Have you remembered the stevia cuttings? There is still ample time to root these.

It is yet too early to propagate poinsettias, unless you intend to grow in benches with ample head room.

Keep spreading out the bedding geraniums, as you can afford them more bench space.

NO ORCHID SOCIETY.

There was a meeting at Bronx park, New York, April 4, of some of those responsible for the movement to organize an orchid society. Among those present were: Dr. J. W. M. Kitchen, Orange, N. J.; Clement Moore, Hackensack, N. J.; E. O. Orpet, South Lancaster, Mass.; H. H. Negley, Pittsburg; John E. Lager, Summit, N. J.; C. J. Bond, Philadelphia; Thomas Jones, Shorthills, N. J.; E. E. Schmitt, Philadelphia; Alphonse Pericat, Collingwood, Pa.; J. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; Edouard Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; George Baldwin, Secaucus, N. J.; H. Siebrecht, Sr., New Rochelle, N. Y.; Edgar Knight, Hackensack, N. J.; M. Wallace, Palisade Park, N. J.; M. Ordonez, Madison, N. J.; M. J. Pope, Naugatuck, Conn.; L. V. Nash, New York Botanical Gardens; J. B. Davis, Orange, N. J.; T. Melstrom, St. Albans, England, and Leonard Barson, New York. E. O. Orpet was elected temporary chairman.

Reports of two preliminary meetings were read by Mr. Nash, at which it had been determined that under present conditions, it is inadvisable to create new societies, there not being a large enough membership materialized to make the society self-supporting. Affiliation was therefore suggested with the Horticultural Society of New York.

After discussion the report was adopted and the committee continued with instructions to consummate the projected union. An interesting address was delivered by Mr. Orpet, detailing early experiences and the enthusiasm of twenty years' culture. He referred to the intention of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to hold a grand orchid exhibition in Boston in 1910, at which prizes of $1,000 and gold medal and $500 and silver medal would be given the winners making the best display.

Mr. Negley spoke strongly in favor of affiliation and gave details as to the Royal Horticultural Society of London and its popular orchid section. He advised the selection of competent orchidists as judges and the elimination of cash premiums. Interesting remarks and comparisons were made by Dr. Kitchen and Mr. Manda on the New York, Boston and Philadelphia horticultural societies and the wisdom of affiliation because there were too few orchid growers in this country yet to run successfully an independent society.

The exhibits were varied and interesting.

The museum in Bronx park is an ideal meeting place. The Rose Society will realize this in June. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

THE GHENT QUINQUENNIAL.

The great international horticultural exhibition held every fifth year under the auspices of the Societe Royale D'Agriculture et de Botanique de Gand will be held in Ghent, Belgium, April 25 to May 3, inclusive. On this occasion the society celebrates its centenary. This is undoubtedly the event of 1908 in European horticultural circles and will attract visitors from all corners of the globe. His Majesty, the King of the Belgians, will perform the opening ceremony, and it is fully anticipated that the present exhibition will eclipse all previous records, as the active committee is leaving no stone unturned to accomplish this object.

The exhibition will be held in the Casino, a fine permanent building for exhibitions, concerts, etc., and temporary structures adjoining same, covering about two and a half acres. Prizes amounting to $10,000 are offered in 760 classes and 247 jurymen will be called in to make the awards. A spacious temporary building, covering 6,000 square yards, will contain the exhibits of azaleas and rhododendrons, in the cultivation of which the Belgians excel. The hall for the reception of orchids is 33x375 feet and within its beautifully decorated walls the cream of all the leading European collections will find a home during the exhibition, and connoisseurs from all continents will assemble and admire and discuss their merits.

The first exhibition of the society occupied about seventy square yards of space and from this small beginning the present gigantic proportions have been attained. It was held in Frascati's cafe, a rendezvous for gardeners of that day, and it stood not very far from the site of the Casino. The cafe and the original exhibition will be reproduced life-size as near the original as possible, with the old-fashioned plants then cultivated and in the styles of growing them then in vogue. What a contrast there will be between the old and the new!

The jury of 247 eminent horticulturists is composed of representatives from America, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Denmark, England, Egypt, France, Germany, Italy, Russia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, etc. The American representatives are P. J. Berckmans and Julius Rochrs. I may also mention a few others well-known in the world of horticulture: F. Benary, Erfurt; J. Lambert, Treves; W. Pfitzer, Stuttgart; J.

Backhouse, York; Thos. Rochford, London; F. Sander, St. Albans; H. J. Veitch, London; Stuart H. Low, London; R. Findlay, Glasgow; Eugene Draps, Brussels; L. Gentil, Brussels; Lucien Linden, Brussels; A. A. Peeters, Brussels; L. Pynaert, Ghent; P. M. Binot, Brazil; J. Barbier, Orleans; Maurice L. de Vilmorin and Phillipe de Vilmorin, Paris; E. Lemoine, Nancy; A. Truffant, Versailles; J. B. Blaauw, Boskoop; E. H. Krelage, Haarlem; B. Ruys, Dedemsvaart; Jean Soupert, Luxembourg. #### Free Beauty Spots.

In a recent issue of the REVIEW I noticed an item regarding an offer by the florists of Springfield, O., to donate plants to beautify the city's streets. This calls to mind the pretty little town of Garrettsville, O., thirty-five miles southeast of Cleveland. Two years ago S. C. Templin started in business there, and, being of generous make-up, offered to plant, free of charge, any and all beds the village might prepare at intersections of streets and other available places. The offer was accepted and as a result there were prepared about fifteen beds of various sizes and shapes.

When I first saw them, in 1906, these beds were planted in cannas, coleus, salvias, geraniums, etc., in all, I should judge, upward of 1,000 plants. The effect was most striking and beautiful. To me the idea was new. It spoke much to the stranger. It showed a pride in the town that was most commendable. Indeed, I could not help wishing that I lived in Garrettsville. These beds were the pride of the town. Visitors were driven about town to see "the beauty spots," a name given them by some admirer. The beds were cared for by those living near, and they vied with each other to see whose bed would be the nicest. Woe be to the careless driver who would run over a plant! Every citizen took as much pride in the "beauty spots" as though they were his own property.

I am an allied-trades man, and a florist in sentiment only, but an admirer of all things for the betterment of society, and these "beauty spots" seem to me to be a long step forward—a step hundreds of small towns might take to their advantage. This is a practical, cheap park system, within the reach of the smallest villages. All such villages may not be as fortunate as Garrettsville, in having a Mr. Templin, but a united effort in any town will work wonders. A small amount of money will purchase a lot of suitable plants and the effect of such "beauty spots" is truly wonderful.

In this connection I want to say that many florists, in fact any florist, can get some free and very desirable advertising by following Mr. Templin's idea. All will agree that the more flowers planted this year the more there will be planted next. This is one way of educating the people in floriculture.

As I understand the Garrettsville idea, Mr. Templin reserved all plants for stock. Certainly not all were used for stock; but why not, Mr. Florist, put your stock plants in conspicuous public places, as well as in your back lot or yard? The citizens of any town will give them as good care as you can. Then you might make use of some surplus, or even grow something for that purpose.

I believe the Garrettsville idea a good one and I have no doubt but that Mr. Templin, or some of his fellow citizens, would gladly give any additional information desired by any reader of the REVIEW.

NAME OF BULB.

Accompanying this letter I mail today a small package containing a bulb for identification, if possible. Below is a description of its growth during last summer.

Last year in June I received three bulbs, which looked exactly like a white-skinned onion, under the name of Monarch of the East. A slip came with them saying that if those bulbs were laid on a shelf or tied to a board, they would grow and bloom without any other attention. I did not lay them on a shelf, nor did I fasten them to a block like some orchids, but I put them in orchid baskets filled with sphagnum, gave them a good watering and hung them up in the full light, but not in the sun. In about ten days they sent up stalks sixteen to eighteen inches high and three-fourths of an inch in diameter at the base. The stems forked out in two leaf-stalks, each with from four to six leaves about two inches broad at the center and between five and six inches long, of a rather dark green color and with smooth edges, but they did not bloom. As a whole, it is a rather good looking plant, but there is nothing fine about it. In less than two months the plants died and the bulbs have rested ever since, until now. You will notice they are making a start to grow. I will say, however, the bulbs were twice the size and weight they are now. A week ago I laid them on sand in a shady propagating bed and since then they have shown life again.

I would like to know to what class of plants they belong. I never believed that they belonged to the orchid class; they are too short-lived, in my opinion.
C. G. A.

The bulb is that of Sauromatum guttatum, belonging to the family araceæ.

It has no connection whatever with the orchidæ family. S. guttatum is a native of the Himalayas. It meets with a considerable sale at florists' stores of late years, and has quite a number of fanciful popular names. Except as a curiosity, the plant has no value.

SMILES.

It was at the Rose Show banquet that H. V. Hunkel left the third course untouched.

"Why is Hunkel like Harriman?" asked a voice down the table.

Silence. Then the reporter bit.

"Because he doesn't like Fish."

Secretary Benjamin Hammond told it on himself:

There was a home talent minstrel show at his town of Fishkill, N. Y., the other night. It was early in the evening that the tenor sang "The Rose of Fair Dundee" and then the interlocutor made the following announcement:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the next number on the program will be an address by Benjamin Hammond, of the school trustees, and then we'll adjourn for breakfast!"

And then the chorus chanted.

SINGLE CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Popular Last Season.

I was pleased to see F. B. endorse Linton chrysanthemums as a useful cut flower subject, in the REVIEW of March 19. It makes a long, graceful spray of flowers that sells on sight. His remarks on the great future ahead of the single varieties are also entirely to the point.

It is a source of great pleasure to me that the singles have "caught on," to use a popular term. I have been talking singles since I imported the first lot of varieties, three years ago, and now it seems as though the singles were coming into their own, for growers who, at my recommendation, bought an odd dozen last year, have this season placed orders for hundreds.

New York has been a good market for some years for pot plants of good kinds of pompons and such kinds as Polly Rose and Pacific. Last fall the singles, while they lasted, entirely displaced the other varieties, and the few growers fortunate enough to have pot singles reaped a golden harvest.

Being a novelty accounted in a measure for this, for the flower buyer loves a change, but the intrinsic merit of the singles causes them to make their own way when once seen. While I expect, in a few years, to see the thing overdone, as almost everything eventually gets overdone in the large centers, still, in the meantime, there will be good money in the single varieties.

While the singles have been known for many years, they have never before been properly placed before the public, and the public also is becoming educated to the fact that a chrysanthemum need not necessarily be the biggest in creation to be artistic and beautiful.

The varieties we have today are also great improvements over the kinds of ten years or more ago. It is singular to note that France and Germany, as well as England, are just now praising the single varieties to the skies as market pot plants, so that practically the eastern hemisphere is engaged in the revival of this type of chrysanthemum. The ease with which new varieties can be raised will mean that we shall possibly be swamped, in a year or two, with new forms and colors in this class, for several American hybridizers have already been busy in this line.

Varieties for Cutting.

There are some varieties that are valuable as cut flower kinds, but are rather too straggly in growth for good pot plants. Among these I would include the following, which, while they can be used nicely for pots, if kept pinched closely till about the middle of July, really show at their best when planted out and cut with sprays two feet long covered with dozens of flowers:

Whites—Harold Bishop, M. J. Carlisle, Linton, Miss T. C. Warden, Wyndham, Gertrude.

Pink—Marvel, Miss E. Partridge, Nellie Coppard, J. T. Angus.

Yellow—Hilda Robbins, Lily Beer, Kathleen Bunyard, Earlswood Beauty.

Bronze—Mary Richardson, Lily Valentine.

Of these, Earlswood Beauty, while I class it as a yellow, because it is nearer that color than any other, is a pale primrose and shows white at night in artificial light.

The kind that shows most brilliantly under artificial light is Mary Richardson. This is a salmon underlaid with red and a powerful light brings out the color to almost scarlet. It was noted more than any other variety at the fall shows.

Varieties for Pots.

Dwarfer growing kinds that make splendid pot plants are:

Whites—Gretchen, Anna Spangle, Irene Craff, Rob Roy.

Yellow—Miss A. Holden, Kitty Bourne, Pretoria, Golden Star.

Pink—Mrs. Untermyer, Alice Crate, Helen Totty, Ladysmith, Mrs. G. Roberts, H. Henderson.

Bronze—Mrs. Baillie, Hilda, Crown Jewel.

I note F. B. does not consider chestnut or bronze desirable tints. There is one variety in this shade that he would like, and that is Crown Jewel. In my opinion, when it first opens this is the finest kind we have. The flower is large, perfectly flat, clear yellow in color, with a distinct ring of deep bronze almost an inch wide round the eye. This color gradually fades away, but, as before remarked, when it first opens the flower is very beautiful. The supply of this and several others of the kinds noted is at present inadequate for the demand, but another year will see stock more plentiful.

Culture of Singles.

Several inquiries reached me last week as to culture, and I can only say that culturally the single chrysanthemum is one of the easiest subjects to handle. Don't be afraid to keep the shoots pinched down, till July, of the looser growing kinds previously noted, and give the plants reasonably generous treatment as regards feeding.

A central stake and strands of matting or green thread to tie the main shoots up to the stake is all the support necessary. Some of the kinds produce buds so profusely that a little disbudding gives the flowers a better chance to open, but generally speaking forget all about disbudding. Rob Roy, Gretchen, Belle of Weybridge, J. T. Angus and Gertrude may be disbudded a little with advantage.

Plants rooted in June and flowered in 6-inch pots without any stopping or disbudding are a beautiful sight, and I believe will turn in more money per square foot for the three months or so that they occupy the space than anything else a florist can grow.

The singles will not displace the big fellows by any means, but they are creating a place for themselves in the hearts of the flower lovers.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

CONCRETE BENCHES.

An Important Subject.

I was greatly interested in the notes on concrete benches in the REVIEW of March 19. While the scheme is still in the development stage, to a certain extent, it is far enough advanced to show that the cement bench is the bench of the future. Lumber will soon be out of the question, owing to its ever increasing cost, and the concrete bench once erected is good for a lifetime. We should give every credit to the pioneers who, as Mr. Wittbold says, have spent time and money working out the problem.

The most practical ideas I have seen so far were illustrated to me the other day by John Wilson, of Short Hills, N. J. I gathered from his remarks that a company is now in course of promotion to erect greenhouse benches of concrete, and he showed me a model that I considered left little to be desired. I trust if these notes reach his eye that he will favor REVIEW readers with a detailed report of his experiences in experimenting with concrete till he got the details worked out.

Another One-piece Mold.

Mr. Wilson's strong point is the mold which he and his partner have patented. Like Mr. Wittbold, he says that the sectional bench is too crude; it is expensive to make, too, owing to the heavier construction using much more material, and makes a heavy and unwieldy structure, its only good point being that it can be taken down and moved at any time.

A wooden mold can be used in winter, but it is impossible to use lumber for a mold in the hot sun of July, as it warps badly and a neat job is impossible with a 200-foot stretch. The mold used is of thin sheet iron and a 6-foot length is erected and held in place by two thumb-screws, so that with a sufficient number of lengths a mold of any dimensions can be erected in a short time.

Drainage.

The question of drainage is cleverly taken care of by upraise in the mold every six inches. This upraise comes to the level of the thickness of the concrete, so that the bench, when the molds are taken off, has a continuous line of drainage precisely as though the bench were built of 6-inch lumber. This would seem a much better and more workmanlike way than Mr. Wittbold's corks.

Mr. Wilson uses the iron rods to reinforce the bottom and sides. The cross bars on the bottom lock in the sides. These iron rods are the kind in general use in buildings made of reinforced concrete.

I note Mr. Wittbold says these are not necessary, so that item of expense may possibly be eliminated. I confess I did not think the rods were necessary, when I looked the bench over, though my experience in this line is limited.

The fact that the molds can be so easily erected seems to point to the one-piece bench being the bench of the future, as once the mold is properly in place the filling is easy and there is no hauling around of heavy sections of concrete.

The sectional bench may be useful to a florist who handles a variety of crops in a year, necessitating some change in the benching; a man, for instance, who uses a house for storing bay trees or large palms, in winter, and can grow a summer crop by putting in a movable bench.

Question of Cost.

Mr. Wilson, if I recall correctly, said that the cost of erecting a one-piece bench is almost a third less than making and placing a sectional bench, with the added advantage of perfect alignment, making a handsome, neat, permanent job. I hope more REVIEW readers who have been experimenting will give us the benefit of their results.

SOWING LAWN SEED.

Will you kindly tell us the best way to sow grass seed for a new lawn, where the ground has been filled in from bottom soil of a new house, without using manure, as it would be too inconvenient for me to use it here? Please let me know what fertilizer is most suitable to use, and how, etc.

H. K.

If it is inconvenient to use rotten barnyard manure, purchase a regular lawn fertilizer. One containing bone and wood ashes is made and sold under the name of bone-ash fertilizer. Mix this thoroughly with four or five times its bulk of fine earth. Scatter evenly over the surface and harrow into the ground. If space is too small to harrow, use a long-toothed iron rake. The fertilizer should not be put on heavier than at the rate of 2,000 pounds per acre. Keep your ground well stirred up until you seed, in order to kill as many weeds as possible.

Choose a calm day for sowing the seed. Experience is needed to scatter grass seed properly. Sow, however, as evenly as possible. Four bushels will seed an acre. A gallon will suffice for 1,200 square feet. A good mixture for your location (New Jersey) will be one of Kentucky bluegrass and Red Top with the addition of a little Rhode Island bent. Over half the seed should be of the first named grass. After seeding, use an iron rake to scratch the ground over thoroughly. Then use a roller, either stone or iron, the heavier the better.

The better you prepare your land, the finer lawn you will have. The disadvantage of using farmyard manure is that it brings such multitudes of weed seeds into the ground. By using fertilizer you overcome this trouble. You will still have an abundance of weeds, and these must be pulled out carefully from time to time. Use a scythe for the first cutting and not a lawn mower, and by occasional rollings, you will get a nice, firm surface.

MAXIMUM NUMBER OF CUTTINGS.

In his reply to Mr. Osborn, in the REVIEW of March 19, Mr. Baur touched on a subject which I have been intending to ask his opinion of for a long time, but postponed it from time to time, simply to give someone else the chance to ask the question and thus I might derive the information at another's expense. The question I am so much interested in is as to the number of carnation cuttings which we may take from a plant and at the same time get a fair quantity and a good quality of flowers. We used to figure on about ten to fifteen to a plant on the old-timers, like Joost, Crocker, Louise, etc., but how about the two Imperials, Aristocrat, White Perfection, Enchantress and Pink Enchantress?

We bought last fall, from the field, 250 Aristocrat, 250 Pink Imperial, 100 Imperial and 600 Pink Enchantress, and while they all produced a fair quantity of bloom from about December 1 on, the cuttings on all of them were not abundant by any means, and we had to resort to what Mr. Skidelsky styles a massacre, to get enough for our own planting. Next year, or rather next season, we simply dug down and pulled the plants all to pieces, using every bit of available wood, and we only got about eight cuttings to a plant. All are just about rooting nicely now, and almost ready to take out of the sand. Of course, the plants were planted rather late, from September 3 to September 15, and, as usual, new varieties are not any too large, but they all seemed to take hold of the soil and go right ahead and we certainly have no kick coming.

As to quality of bloom, Aristocrat and Pink Imperial are especially good with us, and I would have liked to have more young stuff. Pink Enchantress and Enchantress are both shy in producing cuttings. In a cut, say, of 100 Pink Enchantress, we would not get more than about six cuttings and the plants were very strong when benched. The only fault we have to find with it is a rather weak stem during winter, but now the stems are much stronger and the flowers are fine.

You may consider this epistle a kind of "butting in," as it were, but I believe a paper on the foregoing subject would interest many other readers of the REVIEW.

L. G.

This is a problem which confronts every grower from time to time in handling varieties of which there is only a limited stock and which are desirable enough to make him want a large quantity for future planting.

To begin with, I will say that we have learned that you cannot get a maximum quantity of both blooms and cuttings from the same plants. You must choose between the two. In the case of standard varieties, when the cuttings sell at $20 per thousand, there is little, if any, difference between the value of the blooms a plant will produce and that of the cuttings it would produce if cut back and worked for cuttings. If your trade will use all the blooms you can cut, it will be just as cheap for you to buy what extra cuttings you need from some reliable grower. When the cuttings sell for $50 per thousand, however, the story reads differently.

I can answer your question best, perhaps, by describing our method in handling new varieties which we want to test and at the same time propagate in quantity. Conducting a rooted cutting business as we do, we naturally must propagate as rapidly as we can of all such varieties as prove desirable, both for our own stock and for orders. As most varieties meet with a good sale the second year, the cuttings are of greater value to us than the blooms, except that we want to see the quality of the blooms through the season as far as possible. We always try to get our stock of new varieties on the place during January and February, so that we can get good, strong plants, even if a variety is not a very vigorous grower. If we have good plants to house early in August, we can usually tell by the middle of December how free a variety will be during the middle of the season; also, whether it comes into bloom early and is continuous or not. In fact, we can get a pretty good line on its general behavior by that time.

By January 1 we usually find a nice lot of young breaks from the stubs where blooms were cut during October and November, and these we take off and put in sand. As fast as such breaks appear we take them off, when of proper size, and we find that every few weeks we can take off a batch. All the blooming shoots which the plant carries January 1 are allowed to come into bloom—not only those which have run up some, but all the short ones, too. We take only breaks which come after the bloom is cut. This serves a double purpose. It gives us an opportunity to see the blooms through most of the season and we get every bloom the plant would produce up to late in March or early in April, as it will take the last of the blooming shoots until that time to bloom. Then, too, when we take off a batch of cuttings it is not such a severe check to the plant as it would be if it carried little or no blooming growth at the time.

The term massaging can hardly be applied to this method. We do not get quite as many cuttings this way as we would if we kept the plants cut down for cuttings from the beginning, but with varieties which we are trying and which we want to get acquainted with we find it the best way. And then, too, if a variety does happen not to meet with a ready sale, we at least have the cut of blooms up to April 1, and the bench space is not wholly wasted.

Just how many cuttings the plants should average cannot be stated offhand. Varieties differ considerably, and what would be a good average for one variety would fall away short for another and be too high for still another. Last year, I am sure, we averaged twenty cuttings to the plant of White Perfection, besides the blooms, though a considerable portion of the cuttings came out of the sand late in April. Rose-pink Enchantress averaged about the same. Victory did not average nearly so well.

Your plants were housed late and came into bloom late; therefore your breaks came late also. If you had planted in during early August, you would have begun cutting in October and you could have taken off lots of nice cuttings early in January. A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

I am forwarding a photograph of one of the new carnation houses of Hugh Low & Son, Bush Hill Park, near London, England, taken in January. The house is 35x250 feet, with a long span to the south. It has proved to be a style of house well adapted to the dull British climate, and has produced a high grade of flower during the entire winter, which has been one of the foggiest we have ever experienced.

Another addition which has been made to the carnation department this season is a ridge and furrow house, 56x250 feet. This is a fine house, yet we prefer the former style of the two.

I also forward a photograph of a side bench in one of our even-spanned carnation houses, 250 feet long, filled with 80,000 young carnations in 2-inch pots. This was the first propagation and photographed in December. Last season we rooted over half a million young carnations, selling them all in small pots, this being the most satisfactory method of selling the young stock. At the end of the season we found we had run ourselves rather short of first-class stock in keeping our customers supplied. This season we are trying to get ahead of our sales, yet find it no easy matter to do so.

The trade in carnations throughout Great Britain generally is good, both from a cut flower and plant sales standpoint. Yet the ambition of a few growers is to sell at American prices. This is all well in talk, but in practice it is hardly practical, because the two climates are so different. The stock cannot be handled in Britain nearly so cheaply.

It is a fact yet to be proved, that carnations in England can be planted outside during the summer and lifted, so as to produce a high grade of bloom during the winter. Pot cultivation, as we all know, is an expensive practice, while entire greenhouse cultivation means an early end to the flowering stock. The season in Britain runs much later than that of America and the plants should have time to make up for the lighter winter crop of bloom.

The primary reason why young carnations cannot be sold in Britain at American prices is because of the difference in the two climates. Over here it is March before cuttings are produced with the same freedom that they are during December in America, while often the antumn growing season is shortened owing to indifferent weather.

Coupled with all this is the fact that owing to the peculiar British method of government, tons of cheap flowers, carnations included, are placed upon the market, which are produced in the more favorable climate of southern Europe. This has the tendency to lower the price of carnation blooms generally, while it causes the second and lower grades to be a drug upon the market.

When all these points are weighed up by a business man, he will see that it cannot be done, and the men who are priding themselves upon selling young carnations at American prices would be doing the flower more good and widening its market by selling a higher grade of stock. MONTAGUE C. ALLWOOD.

BUYING NEW VARIETIES.

Mr. Osborn to Mr. Baur.

Although familiar for some time with Mr. Baur's method of buying new varieties, I was pleased to read his views again in the REVIEW of March 19.

Strange as it may appear, our experiences have been similar with each other's method. In short, we have swapped, and while it is possible to point out the shortcomings of any method, I do not propose to criticise Mr. Baur's at this time, except in so far as it may become necessary in order to support the claims of my own.

Taking into account the small as well as the large grower, the up-to-date enthusiast, the average general florist and numerous others, each working under widely different circumstances, it will be apparent that no one method will apply to all.

Room for Different Systems.

I believe there is a necessity for both methods and, having operated under his and other growers' visits to different establishments, it will be seen that these visits differ materially from those I had reference to in my first reply. There is a vast difference between a trip over the plant of the originator or the disseminator of a certain variety and one a season later through the establishment of an up-to-date, unbiased grower, who has invested in the variety and whose returns come through sale of blooms instead of cuttings, and the same might be said of reports which may be circulated previous to a variety's introduction.

Another Way of Improving Stock.

The idea of not replacing varieties until they show deterioration might not be considered progressive from the standpoint of the enthusiast or specialist, but in the case of a small grower or the average general florist who has but limited space in which to grow carnations, it would hardly be just to regard him as retrogressive because he did not buy six or eight new varieties every year. I may be a crank on propagation, but it is my firm belief that the way is open to materially improve our stock by careful selection in propagating, and that the grower who embraces the opportunity shows as great a degree of progression as does he who is constantly buying new introductions.

When we bought in small trial lots there were too few from which we cared to take cuttings. There being more or less loss in the field and in housing, and among the number left only a certain percentage proving desirable to increase, we were on the whole seriously handicapped.

General Florists and Small Growers.

The general florist does not, as a rule, care to take upon himself the extra detail which the trial of several new varieties each year would entail, and the small ized as plunging, and I do not take it that Mr. Baur intended to so call it.

His illustration of a man growing obsolete varieties today is obviously overdrawn, as reference to my former reply will show.

The idea of letting someone else try varieties for you did not originate with me, however close its relation to my method may seem. In making the statement that such a disposition prevailed, I merely made note of an existing condition. Whether it is practical or not is largely a matter of opinion.

For fear the discussion will grow wearisome, I will not, at this time, go into history, much as could be told to further substantiate my claims. By all means let us hear from others; we both extend a cordial invitation to take a hand. GEO. S. OSBORN.

BEGONIA FOR NAME.

I enclose some leaves of a begonia and shall be pleased to have you state the name of the variety. J. C.

The begonia is a form of semperflorens, probably the red-flowered variety, Begonia semperflorens gigantea rosea. C. W.

BURNED BONE.

Will you please advise me by return mail whether or not burned ground bone that has been used for steel hardening purposes has any or a reasonable amount of fertilizing qualities contained therein, and if so, to what extent?

A. G. M.

Prof. I. O. Haskins, of the fertilizer branch of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., reports as follows on the value of this bone for fertilizer:

Regarding the value of burned bone, which has been used for steel hardening, for fertilizing purposes, would say that it possesses little or no value in the untreated state. It furnishes a valuable source of phosphoric acid, when treated with sulphuric acid, which renders the phosphoric acid available.

The phosphoric acid in this class of materials is in tricalcic form, and being unassociated with organic compounds, which were destroyed in the process of burning, it becomes quite as insoluble as South Carolina rock phosphate. This material (bone) has as high as thirty-seven per cent total phosphoric acid.

SMILAX IN RAISED BENCHES.

Our smilax is grown in raised benches with heating pipes running below, although at this time of the year we have practically no artificial heat. The ends of the leaves are turning white. It cannot be on account of dryness, as the soil is never really dry. It did this once before this winter, but it was when the pipes were hot, and we blamed it to the soil drying out too much at the bottom.

F. P. F. C.

I have not grown smilax in raised benches for many years and cannot recommend its culture in this way. A bench with heating pipes below it is about the worst condition for smilax. You will never get as fine strings, nor so many of them, under the raised bench plan as in solid beds. I think it probable that the soil was dry, even although it may have looked moist on the surface. I think dryness may be responsible for plan, I can see where in some cases Mr. Baur's method might work to good advantage. Consequently I am disposed to be more indulgent with his views than he appears to be with mine. However, for me to say that his method is by far the better would be to declare against my convictions.

In reading Mr. Baur's story of his grower would have a great variety of everything, but not much of anything in particular.

Manifestly the purchase of 250 cuttings each of two or three sorts, under my plan—namely, one of the current year's introduction, the balance from those sent out one year or perhaps two years previously—cannot be character-the withering of the edges of the leaves. Fumigation will also cause it. Smilax foliage is easily burned unless well matured. I would certainly advise you to plant in solid beds in future. This will give you far better returns than you can ever hope to get on benches.

OTHER YEARS.

A correspondent, who says he is not certain just how recently James Russell Lowell penned the following lines, writes to inquire if the first few lines have reference to the recent state of the market:

Violet! Sweet Violet!
Thine eyes are full of tears,
Are they wet
Even yet
With the thoughts of other years?
Violet! Dear Violet!
Thy blue eyes are only wet
With joy and love of Him who Sent thee.
And for the fulfilling sense
Of that glad obedience
Which made thee all that Nature meant thee.

SHORT-STEMMED VIOLETS.

Will you kindly inform me what I can do for double English violets to get longer stems? They are now two to three inches long. I have them in cold-frames on the south side of the houses, where they get all the sun. I gave them plenty of fertilizer last fall when I planted them.

J. H. S.

You do not state whether or not your plants are free of disease. If spot attacks and destroys the foliage, short stems will follow as a natural consequence. If the compost was composed of loam and cow manure, it should be all right. Violets in a frame facing due south require a lot of water. Are you quite certain you have given yours an abundant supply? In propagating, if you tear the old plants to pieces, as is often done, you will get much shorter stems than if you rooted runners during the late winter or early spring. Without knowing more about cultural conditions, I feel unable to advise you further than as above.

C. W.

VIOLETS AND SWEET PEAS.

William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., is the largest and most noted grower of sweet peas and single violets in America. His well kept establishment is a Mecca for all flower lovers who may chance to be in the vicinity of Boston while his specialties are in season. Reference to the remarkable quality of his sweet peas and violets has frequently been made in the columns of the REVIEW and little can be added to what has already been said. This season his sweet peas are of magnificent quality. Probably no finer blooms were ever staged in this country than those which won for him the Zvolanek cup at the recent Park Street market show in Boston, February 29. A sight of his big houses of these in full bloom is indeed an inspiration. The varieties chiefly grown are Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer, but quite a few of Mr. Zvolanek's other varieties are to be seen in smaller quantities.

One of the accompanying illustrations shows a house 63x200, built on the ridge and furrow plan, of Princess of Wales violets. As many as 117,000 flowers were picked out of this one house for Easter two years ago. Quite a number of other large structures are devoted to this same violet. Another illustration shows a house of the new Boston violet, being introduced this year by Mr. Sim. It is quite distinct from Princess of Wales, carrying a larger, rounder and better formed flower, a trifle paler in color. This novelty is meeting with a big demand from all parts of the United States and some orders have arrived from Europe. It has all the good qualities of Princess, from which it is a sport, and promises to become a standard variety.

VIOLETS WITH CARNATIONS.

Would you advise me to grow violets and carnations in the same house? This house is of modern construction, running east and west, with glass on the sides. I would like to grow violets in solid beds on the sides, and, if possible, have the center devoted to carnations on raised benches. I have never grown any carnations and would like to try them, but cannot as yet build a separate house. Also, since single violets are housed so late (the middle of October), what can I have in the violet beds for an early fall crop? Would not some varieties of chrysanthemums bloom before time for planting in the violets? I would expect to change the soil.

E. H.

The temperatures required by violets and carnations are so different that I do not think you should attempt to grow them in the same house. Violets succeed best in a night temperature of 40 degrees during winter. Carnations require from 48 to 54 degrees, according to the varieties grown. If you tried both and ran a sort of intermediate heat, say, 45 or 46 degrees, you would succeed well with neither.

You can grow some early varieties of chrysanthemums to precede the single violets. Such sorts as Mme. Bergman, Lady Fitzwygram, Glory of Pacific, Polly Rose, Monrovia, Robert Halliday, Mrs. Coombs, Clementine Tousey, Comoleta and others would be out of the way in season for the single violets.

I would advise you to stick to violets and chrysanthemums and not experiment with carnations until able to give them a separate house. It will be better to grow only one or two varieties of chrysanthemums, say, one good sort each of white, yellow and pink. You will grow better violets in solid beds than in raised benches. Carnations in winter succeed better on benches, as do chrysanthemums.

From May to October (if you did not grow any carnations or chrysanthemums) you could have tomatoes in your house. They make a profitable summer crop. Cucumbers can also be grown, but need more heat and closer attention. It is now late to sow seeds of tomatoes, but if your violet crop is now over and you can get plants of a good forcing tomato, why not grow them and let chrysanthemums alone for a year? C. W.

phur fumes will prevent the ravages of mildew. Stock grown under proper conditions is almost immune from the trouble, and if it does suffer from a slight attack, twenty-four hours of the sulphur treatment will most certainly banish it from the premises. RIBES.

MAY BEETLES ON ROSES.

Will you please tell me what the enclosed bugs are and what I can do to exterminate them or drive them off my rose bushes? They appear every spring about this time by the thousands, and during the nights they eat and destroy all the first crop of outdoor rosebuds and damage the bushes quite a little. Some nights I go out with a light and they are attracted by the light and I kill hundreds of them, but there is a better and quicker way than this and I thought you could and would give it to me. J. M.

These specimens are known by the common name of May beetles, or Lachnosterna fusca. These insects are the parents of the mischievous white grubs that are so frequently destructive to pasture lands. The May beetles feed at night and sometimes appear in large numbers and do considerable damage to fruit trees, rose bushes, etc., before their presence is discovered. To spray the bushes with the arsenites, Paris green or London purple, is the surest way of destroying them by poison. Spraying with arsenate of lead will quickly destroy them without injuring the most tender foliage. Jarring the bushes early in the morning or late at night, after spreading a white cloth under the bushes, will result in a good capture. RIBES.

THE THOUSAND BEAUTIES.

It is seldom that a rose has come to this country with so many strong recommendations as have accompanied Tausendschon, the German hardy climber illustrated in this issue. That it will have wide popularity for uses similar to that shown in the illustration is without a question, for it is said to be absolutely hardy, and this year it is being grown in quite a number of greenhouse establishments as an Easter pot-plant. This came about largely through the fact that the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, last year forced about 100 plants received from the Dingee & Conard Co., of West Grove, Pa. They were so successful that this year 1,000 large plants are being prepared for Easter trade and give every indication of fully as good results as were obtained last season. Others are equally successful, but are growing smaller plants. It will be a standard Easter sort next year.

The German name means Thousand Beauties. Whether this refers to the floriferousness of the variety or to the variation in the color of its flowers, is not apparent. Either characteristic justifies the name. The plant blooms profusely in the garden from the beginning of June until the latter part of July. The flowers, appearing in large clusters, often ten to fifteen flowers in a cluster, are of good size and quite double. The colors run from tender rose through the intermediate shades of bright rose and carmine, with white, yellow and various other delicate tints showing on the same plant. The wood is almost thornless and the foliage strong and impervious to mildew.

While Tausendschon is not listed in many catalogues this year, it will be in them all next season.

"ANTS" ON ROSE PLANTS.

Under separate cover we are mailing you a sample rose plant, and some soil in which same are planted. You will notice that the soil is filled with a sort of small white ant. These ants seem to eat the plants off at the base, and cause them to die. We have just planted a house with these for fall flowering and the ants already take about one-fourth of them. Can you suggest any means by which we can kill them? L.

The insects had all escaped when the box reached me, but I surmise these are the small white termite which often proves destructive to young rose plants, their vocation in life being the disintegrating, destruction and removal of decaying wood, but they frequently attack live wood also. The first essential to a successful fight with these pests is to find the location of their nests. If they can be reached it is easy to destroy them by means of benzine, gasoline, bisulphide of carbon or even hot water. RIBES.

MOTHS IN ROSE HOUSES.

I am troubled greatly by moths in the rose houses. Have tried kerosene emulsion, nicotine and Paris green in spraying. I am wondering if cyanide of potassium would not destroy them and how strong it should be used. L. G. G.

If these moths are the common gray moth or saw-fly they can be quickly thinned and eventually destroyed by using pyrethrum powder with a blower. Continue this for a week or so and watch the result.

If they are white flies, the only remedy is cyanide. The formula for this is: One quart of sulphuric acid; five ounces of cyanide. This is sufficient in ordinary eases for a house of 4,000 cubic feet of space. It depends a good deal, however, on the quality of the cyanide. The commercial article varies in strength from thirty per cent to sixty per cent, while the chemically pure can be obtained as high as ninety-eight per cent. Of course, a much smaller quantity of the ninety-eight per cent would be required for the same space than if the weaker grade is used. It is wise to use a weak dose at first and watch results. RIBES.

MILDEW ON ROSES.

Will you oblige me by giving some advice as to how to prevent mildew on roses? I have used sulphur, both for dusting and on hot pipes, but this does not seem to do much good. Would ammoniacal carbonate or Bordeaux mixture be more effective? If so, please tell me how to use it. Would keeping the roses in a drier state prevent the mildew from gaining a foothold? J. S. .

The most effective, and I may say the only remedy for mildew that can be indulged in with safety, is sulphur. While firing is being practiced, painting the pipes with a mixture of two parts of sulphur to one of air-slaked lime or any other material which will give plasticity to the sulphur, is a sure remedy if followed up in an intelligent manner. When firing ceases, the blower will effect the same purpose. By mixing the sulphur with one-third finely sifted air-slaked lime the distribution will be more easily effected.

There are on the market many devices for releasing the fumes from sulphur in a safe and effective way. The best of these are rather expensive, but they do the work.

I have frequently pointed out in these columns that prevention is much better than cure, and also that where ventilation has been neglected to the extent of creating soft foliage, soft wood, and stock of low vitality, no amount of sul-

HARDY OUTDOOR ROSES.

[Synopsis of a paper by David McFarlane, of Tarrytown, N. Y., read before the Tarrytown Horticultural Society.]

"Hardy Outdoor Roses," the theme you have assigned to me, interests to some extent most men in the profession and I am safe to say more of the flower-loving public than any other flower under cultivation, but the so-called hardy outdoor roses, with few exceptions, possess extremely poor qualities for the embellishment of the landscape from an artistic point of view; consequently, we cultivate the majority because of their excellence for house decoration as a cut flower, and their unique colors, fragrance, purity and individuality. So many are the varieties of roses now in commerce that to make a selection is no easy task, and as the most have been hybridized in France, Germany and Great Britain, many that carry the highest honors in the lands of their birth are a sad disappointment when grown under our more extreme climate. But if a collection of well selected varieties were once established on a place, the chances are that not one of them would ever be discarded; for we might say especially of hybrid perpetual roses that the color and form of one variety is so near in resemblance to another, and yet different, that we decide to keep both because each possesses a characteristic individuality.

The grandest of all rose blooms are found in the class generally designated as hybrid perpetuals; but the word perpetual applied to the blooming of these roses, I regret to say, is much in error, at least in our climate. While a bloom or so may be found later in the season, we have to console ourselves with the fact that the flowering season for these roses is during three weeks in June. If this fact alone were judiciously taken into consideration it would eliminate many a rose garden from a too prominent position in the landscape, and at the same time, detract nothing from the general interest displayed in roses.

Place and Time to Plant.

The best place for a rose garden is one that cannot be seen from any distant point, but one where a host or hostess can guide his or her guests and land them by surprise among the rose beds or under the arbor in the season of bloom; and while the plants are at work preparing for next June they will not be critically commented upon for their rustic looks.

The rose is a strong feeder and is best suited in a heavy, moist, but well drained soil. If they can be planted with a shade from the east, but by no means an overhead one, that the dews will hang on until 9 or 10 a. m., so much the better.

The best time to plant hardy roses is in the fall, about the first or second week in November. In planting, be sure that the graft is well buried in strong growing varieties—I recommend a depth of seven or eight inches—and the weakest growers should not be any less than four inches below the normal surface of the soil. Roses planted at this time should be laid down at once and covered over with three or four inches of soil. In that way they will keep over the winter and turn out plump and fresh in spring.

If it is desired to plant roses in spring, have it done just as early as the ground will permit; for there is no plant that I know of that suffers from late planting as much as does the rose. Should your plants show the least sign of shriveling when received in spring, dig a trench and cover them entirely with about eight inches of soil for three or four days and, unless they have been all the more dried out, you will generally find the wood and buds quite plump when you lift them from the trench. If any wrinkles remain on the bark the chances are that these plants will die, and should they survive the growth will be extremely poor for the first season.

Culture and Feeding.

The last of March or first of April, in this section, is generally the best time to prune hybrid perpetual roses. At this time all danger from damaging frosts is past and we can spread what covering has been used for winter protection. After the pruning is done, a good loosening up of the soil with a spading fork and they are ready to start work. Few gardeners prune their rose bushes closely enough. With but few exceptions, I prune down to from one to four inches of the soil, and these exceptions are only such roses as Margaret Dickson, General Jacqueminot and Prince Camille de Rohan, which are apt to run blind on the extra strong shoots from the bottom. Even with these varieties care should be taken to cut out all two-year-old wood close to the soil.

If the manure used for protecting during the winter is dug in in spring, no additional fertilizer need be applied until May 20, when a liberal application of some stimulant, such as pure bone meal, a good grade of commercial fertilizer, or liquid manure from the barnyard, whichever is convenient, is of great benefit. Should the weather be dry from this time until the flowering period is well over, the ground should be well saturated with water. Where the soil is light, a mulch of from four to six inches of litter or cut grass is good to retain moisture and also to keep the roots cool, although it adds nothing to the beauty of the beds. I would prefer litter instead of the grass as a mulch, as I have seen the grass during a dull spell create a bad dose of mildew. If a mulch has been used up to and through the flowering period, it should be removed early in July and the beds kept well cultivated from then until October.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The general run of business has been quiet all through Lent. Only two weeks more, and then business should take a jump and make up for lost time. It is said among some of the oldest florists that they have never before felt Lent as this year. Had funerals come under the same ban as the social affairs, regarding flowers, some of us would have to close up shop, especially this year. In fact, every industry is still curtailed and collections are slow.

The wholesalers still have plenty of stock in all varieties and grades, although carnations were not nearly so plentiful last week as they were the week previous and prices stiffened up to $3 per hundred for fancies. White has had a steady call.

In roses, there are plenty of the colored sorts, while of whites there are enough. The demand is better for American Beauties. There are enough in all grades.

Callas were a sort of glut for a while, but there were not enough of Harrisii. In other bulbous stock the market is well supplied. Valley is especially fine. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths, too, are fine. In green goods, everything is in good supply.

Various Notes.

During the last week we had a number of visitors in the shape of popular traveling salesmen who represent well-known Philadelphia firms. The first in the field was E. J. Fancourt, of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., followed by S. S. Skidelsky. Then came J. J. Karins, representing H. A. Dreer. He in turn was followed by Martin Reukauf, who sells for H. Bayersdorfer & Co. Among those coming this week is Col. Eschner, also from Philadelphia, representing M. Rice & Co.

Monday, April 6, the Engelmann Botanical Club held its regular monthly meeting in its rooms in the Central high school. Dr. W. J. King read a paper on "Perfume and Perfume Plants," and exhibited plants from which perfumes are extracted. President Thompson presided and the meeting was well attended.

The cold weather of Thursday, April 3, played havoc with the early blooming plants in the different parks and at Shaw's Garden, where tulips and hyacinths are just beginning to bloom. Fruit trees were also nipped by the white frost of Thursday night.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, reports that he cut 40,000 California violets last month from 1,500 plants, when his nearby neighbors were nearly all off crop. He is also cutting a fine crop of early sweet peas in all colors and is looking forward to a big cut for Easter.

The forestry committee of the St. Louis federation of women's clubs voted that April 10 be celebrated as Arbor day. The children will plant trees in the school yards this day and Governor Folk is down for a talk on "Nature Creed." One thousand programs have been sent to each of the public schools.

Mrs. Wm. Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., visited Chicago recently and also paid a visit to her son, Arthur, who is at present employed at Western Springs, Ill.

The Bentzen Floral Co. had a number of pretty floral designs to make up on Saturday for the opening of the baseball season at Sportsman's park, the designs being presented by the different players. Mr. Bentzen's store is almost opposite the park.

Chas. Beyer is well supplied with fine blooming plants for the Easter trade; so also are Wm. Schray & Sons, C. C. Sanders and G. B. Windler. C. Young & Sons Co. has a grand stock just right for Easter.

George Kessler, the landscape gardener, who is the director of restoration for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co., stated in his reply to Park Commissioner Scanlan's complaint that, "while the Exposition Co. believes that it has done a great deal more than the ordinance required, it was ready to carry out the recommendations suggested by the park commissioner and will begin work at once to complete the restoration this summer."

The trustees of the Florists' Club will meet next week to make preparations for the club's annual picnic. Messrs. Schoenle, Smith and Beyer, who are the trustees, say there will be new features this year. The usual baseball game will take place. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The near approach of Easter has not yet galvanized much life into the cut flower business, which keeps on the even tenor of its way. In spite of prevailing dullness, every one expects an excellent Easter trade, but with somewhat lower prices than in preceding years. Roses continue to sell slowly. Many fine Beauties are arriving. Those with stems four feet long make $3 to $4 per dozen. Some extra fine Richmond and Killarney bring $2.50 to $3 per dozen. Bride and Maid are too abundant and sell at low prices. As one salesman remarked, "No reasonable offer is refused." Carnations keep about the same prices, clearing, if anything, a little better. A hardening tendency is likely towards the end of the week. Some growers report their plants as very much off crop, but sufficient are likely to be on hand for all requirements.

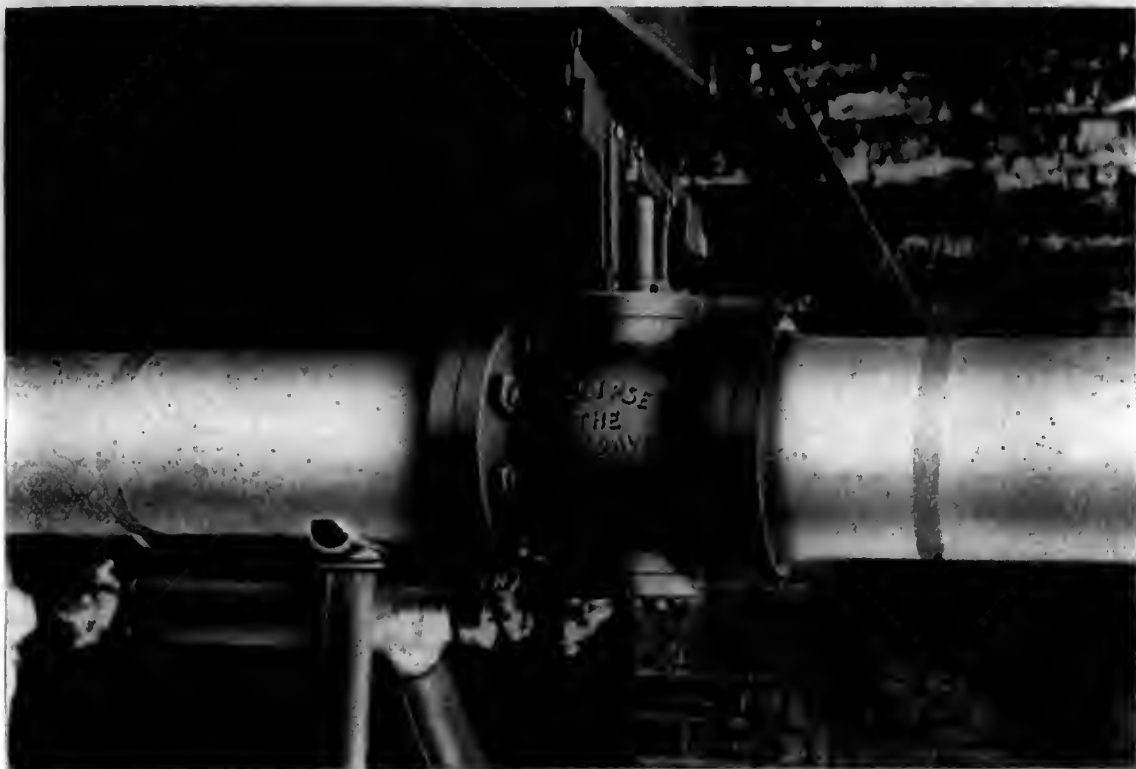

Sweet peas sell well and the best grades are slightly higher. Violets hold on well and 75 cents per hundred is now asked for both singles and doubles of good quality. Many undersized ones sell cheaper. Lilies are bringing 10 cents per bud, a few growers getting 12½ cents. The lower figure promises to be the predominant one, however. Dutch bulbous stock continues in heavy supply and is only cleared at low prices. Valley is only in moderate request, as are antirrhinums, mignonette and other seasonable flowers.

Plant trade shows more activity. Lilies have first call. Rambler roses are good, as are spiræas, hydrangeas, genistas, Dutch bulbous stock, acacias, marguerites and azaleas.

Club Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, briefly referred to in the last issue of the REVIEW, was a pronounced success, being called "the best ever" by all who attended. The tables were attractive, with a profusion of Richmond, Killarney and other roses, carnations, antirrhinums, schizanthus and other flowers. The stage was arranged with an assortment of foliage and flowering plants, while standard bays were used in the alcoves. Edward MacMullin, who was at the head of the decorating committee, did his work well. The ladies each received a handsome bunch of violets, the gift of William Sim; the gentlemen donned gardenias.

Edward Hatch made, as usual, an ideal toastmaster. He called on Messrs. T. H. Westwood, W. N. Craig, J. K. M. L. Farquhar and William Downs for remarks. The singing of Miss Hanagan brought down the house. Mrs. C. Whittet also did nobly. Nearly every one stayed for the dance, and in the grand march practically the entire company joined. A pleasant incident during the evening was the sending of a quantity of the choicest flowers to Governor Curtis Guild, who was critically ill at the time.

Various Notes.

Members and friends of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club are asked to please remember that the train for Lynn leaves North Station at 12:30 p. m., April 11. The field day with Thomas Roland, at Nahant, will attract an attendance greater than on any similar preceding occasion.

Yellow marguerites from Messrs. Horgan, of Foxboro, and Nicholson, of Framingham, are of extra fine quality and will, as usual, be in demand at Easter.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are anticipating a heavy Easter trade. Their new consignments of southern smilax, boxwood and other greenery is extra fine.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Elliott left for a three weeks' trip to Bermuda April 7. Mr. Elliott's health has not of late been good, he having had a strenuous season. A rest in the West Indies will prove a good tonic for him.

A. Leuthy & Co. have, among other plants, a fine lot of gardenias for Easter. Azaleas are good, as are genistas, lilies and other seasonable stock.

H. H. Barrows & Son have a new sport from Nephrolepis Whitmani, as yet unnamed, which they think is the most graceful of the whole family. The cut fronds bring treble the price of those of Whitmani. Plants will be exhibited at a number of the shows the coming autumn.

April has so far given us some genuine March weather. Had Saturday, April 4, happened the day before Easter, florists would have been kept busy wrapping up plants. A maximum temperature of 34 degrees and a 40-knot breeze made the day one of the most biting of the winter.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, have, as usual, a splendid stock of rambler roses, lilies, rhododendrons, azaleas and other Easter plants, and their four stands at Park street market are kept busy.

Welch Bros. are looking for a heavy Easter trade and are optimistic as to business generally. They are having a heavy call for lilies in pots.

W. W. Edgar & Co. have a fine lot of Easter lilies in prime condition, also large stocks of azaleas, rambler roses and their usual varied line for Easter trade.

The next prize exhibition at Horticultural hall occurs May 9 and 10. Calceolarias, pelargoniums, narcissi, tulips and pansies will be special features.

John McKenzie, of North Cambridge, reports prospects for bedding plant trade as good. He expects to dispose of 50,000 geraniums this season.

William Sim has been kept busy the last week shipping heavy orders for his new violet, Boston.

McCarthy's weekly auction sales of trees and shrubs are now being held. Trade so far has been quiet.

W. N. CRAIG.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Meeting of the Executive Board.

The executive board met at the Prospect house, Niagara Falls, March 23 and 24. President Traendly and Messrs. McClure, Hallock, Wirth, Farquhar, Asmus, Young, Stewart and Rudd were present. Messrs. Kasting and Cowell were appointed to fill the vacancies caused by the absence of Mr. Murray and Mr. Beatty. The usual routine business was transacted.

The program for the August convention was discussed and the main features decided upon, the details being left, as usual, to the president and secretary.

As the charter provides that the main office of the society shall be in the city of Washington, the president was instructed to appoint an official representative of the society in the city of Washington who should maintain such an office.

Mr. Hallock was appointed a committee to revise parts of the proceedings relative to school gardens, to make such additions thereto as seemed advisable and put them in shape for publication for general distribution, carrying out recommendations made by the society.

It was resolved that the president of the society be authorized to offer the silver and bronze medals of the society at the horticultural exhibitions in this country for new and meritorious plants or flowers of American origin, provided that he is convinced that the exhibition at which they are proposed to be offered shall be more than local in scope and of sufficient extent to warrant recognition by this society. No more than one medal to be awarded to the same plant or flower.

Chas. H. Keitsch, of Buffalo, having been nominated by the Buffalo florists, was elected superintendent of the trade exhibition.

The secretary was instructed to correspond with the Census Bureau with a view to having the method of obtaining the census statistics, in so far as they relate to floriculture, more carefully considered, and that certain changes be made which will render the results more reliable and more valuable.

Considerable attention was given the action of the society regarding the nomenclature committee and registration, and it was the sense of the board that the following out of the proposed course would entail an indefinite but large expense on the society in the future and therefore the board could not concur, and the matter was referred back to the society for further consideration. It was the sense of the executive board that it was neither feasible nor desirable for this society to attempt to fix the commercial value of any plant or flower under present conditions.

In view of the fact that it would soon be necessary to republish the by-laws, the committee discussed them in detail and recommended certain amendments to be submitted to vote at the next convention, most of them being merely verbal corrections.

An examination of the treasurer's report showed that the society now has in its permanent fund about $5,300, and nearly $4,000 in its general fund. This showing was very gratifying to the members of the board and it was believed it would also be pleasing to the members in general.

The members were more than pleased with the hearty and cordial manner in which the local people assisted them in their work and especially with the manner in which Mr. Cutler more than redeemed all the promises made at Philadelphia.

Practically the entire lower floor of the Cataract house has been placed at the disposal of the society, as well as the grounds adjoining. This will give ample space for the trade exhibitions and the meetings under one roof and on one floor, and will also give room for the planting of flower beds for the exhibition of plant novelties. Mr. Isaacs, the proprietor of the Cataract house and the International hotel, assured the committee that he would be glad to have any such planting done and would furnish without charge a competent gardener to care for the plants up to exhibition time. As these accommodations are all furnished without expense to the society, it would seem that the financial results of the convention at Niagara Falls must necessarily be better than ever before.

Following the custom of some years past, the accrued interest on both the permanent and general funds was ordered added to the reserve fund.

George W. McClure was appointed chairman of the committee on sports, and J. R. Clondsley was appointed as a member of that committee, the third member to be announced later. Mr. Ewing and Mr. Philpott, of the Canadian Horticultural Association, met with the committee on the last day and arrangements were partially completed for joint sessions of the S. A. F. and the Canadian Horticultural Society, details being left to be settled at a later date. The question of international games was left to the sports committee. It was decided that the bowling games should be held at Buffalo during the last day and evening.

The final resolutions, which were adopted with enthusiasm, expressed the appreciation of the board for the "many courtesies shown us by everybody we came in contact with during our visit." Ex-Mayor Cutler; Mr. Isaacs, of the International Hotel Co.; Major Butler, of the Natural Food Co., and President and Mrs. Kasting were personally thanked in the final resolutions, both for assistance offered and hospitalities extended, and the board adjourned more than pleased with the kindness and courtesies shown and with the highest anticipations for a successful and enjoyable convention.

It should be noted by the members of the S. A. F. that Mr. Isaacs offered, in case enough early reservations of rooms were made at the Cataract house, to reserve the entire hotel accommodations of

THE MOSBAEK ESTABLISHMENT.

Onarga is situated on the main line of the Illinois Central railroad, eighty-five miles south of Chicago, and is in the heart of the best farming land in the state of Illinois. The season there is some two weeks earlier than in Chicago. Here is located the Iroquois Canning Co., operating one of the largest corn canneries in the world, where the product of 3,500 acres of sweet corn is canned annually. The Mosbaek Greenhouse Co. is one of the branches of this immense business.

Begun in a small way, the company now has eight greenhouses, seven of which measure 26x100 feet, and one 14x100 feet, which were constructed by the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago. The Boston fern and its sports are a specialty, being grown in such quantity that carload shipments are not unknown. Boston, Piersoni, Anna Foster, Scottii, Whitmani and Elegantissima from runners to plants in 14-inch pots are seen. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are in such good demand that Axel Aggerholm says it is hard to keep up the supply.

In bedding plants, geraniums naturally take the lead, with such old favorites as S. A. Nutt, Jean Viaud, La Favorite, Trego, Alphonse Ricard and Beaute Poitevine, yet such plants as alyssum, alternanthera, ageratum, dracæna, salvia and vinca are grown in immense quantities, the houses being filled to their utmost capacity.

Outdoors there are 15,000 square feet of sash used for bedding stock and ferns also, while as much more is used for starting hardy perennials, of which fifteen acres are grown. The soil here is especially adapted to the raising of cannas and the company devotes twenty acres to them. Among the best varieties are King Humbert, Black Beauty, Chas.

to pieplant, asparagus and horseradish, for which they find a ready market in Chicago.

The company occupies fine offices downtown, as the business is almost entirely through the mails. Started in a small way to supply a local trade, the business has developed, through systematic organization, advertising and careful attention to details, to be a large and prosperous one, with wholesale dealings from Maine to California and from Canada to distant Texas points.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Laurence J. Stuppy.

Suffering a stroke of paralysis at his home in St. Joseph, Mo., March 30, just one week after he had returned from a trip to the Pacific coast, Laurence J. Stuppy died at 8:30 o'clock in the evening of the same day.

Mr. Stuppy had been visiting in Los Angeles and other towns on the coast until a week previously, when he returned home. When stricken with paralysis, fatal results were feared, and all the children who were in the city were at his bedside when the end came.

Born in Ste. Genevieve, Mo., in 1850, Mr. Stuppy moved to St. Joseph with his parents one year later, and had been a resident there since that time. In 1873 he started a flower shop, which has been in existence since. He is survived by a widow and six children. The sons are Frank X. and John, of St. Joseph. The daughters are Mrs. B. W. Murphy and Miss Dorothy Stuppy of St. Joseph; Miss Helen Stuppy, of Albany, N. Y., and Miss Marie, of Seattle, Wash.

Warren S. Ewell.

In the death of Warren S. Ewell, April 2, after a long illness, Boston lost one who a decade ago was well known as a grower and exhibitor of Dutch bulbous stock. Born in Roxbury in 1851, the deceased succeeded to the florists' business of his father and carried on the same until his death, his specialty always being bulbous stock. Of this he was for many years the best grower around Boston and he won many prizes for his products at the shows of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. He early became identified with the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, serving on the executive committee in 1895 and being elected to the office of president for the year 1907. He was a life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

Funeral services were held from his late residence, 218 Quincy street, Dorchester, April 5, when many of his old conferees attended to pay their last tribute of respect. W. N. CRAIG.

John Cleary.

The death is announced of John Cleary, New York, father of John P. Cleary and Ambrose Cleary, both of whom are widely known in the trade, having been connected with the plant sales at auction in New York for many years.

Charles Ingram.

Charles Ingram, gardener for W. J. Dana, at Wellesley, Mass., died suddenly, Sunday, April 5. He was 50 years of age and a native of Scotland. He arrived at Boston twenty-five years ago and in the early part of his career in New England floriculture was with S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., and also with Welch Bros., the Boston wholesale florists. At one time he was in business for himself at Wakefield, under the name of Ingram & Lyons. Later he was in charge of a large commercial establishment in Kentucky. Returning to the Boston district, he was with Wilson, of Wellesley, until he took his position with Mr. Dana. He was a good grower and much respected in the community.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

John McKenzie, of North Cambridge, Mass., has a fine lot of Dorothy and Lady Gay in his collection of roses for Easter. He finds quite a similarity between these two, the former being rather the more satisfactory to handle. Lady Gay opens bud very quickly and must be disposed of early. He has about 40,000 square feet of glass on the new place and has opened up an attractive store in the center of town.

A. H. Hews & Co., of North Cambridge, have pretty well caught up on orders for pots. They are adding a depot in New Orleans to assist them in handling the big southern trade.

Dan Murphy, of Doyle's, at North Cambridge, has a nice lot of Easter stock. He is an expert grower of Adiantum Farleyense, having the finest lot in this section.

W. W. Edgar & Co., of Waverley, Mass., have a grand batch of lilies at the farm place. Hermann, the foreman, says the reason the foliage is so green is because the plants are grown on solid beds. His experience is that the plants dry out much more quickly when on benches. At the home plant bedding stock is being grown in large numbers, especially geraniums in 4-inch pots. Vincent's varieties are all being tried. California, an intense orange scarlet, is a leader, with Paul Crampbel, a fine single, a good second. Tiffin is a favorite. A house of Baby Ramblers in 6-inch pots were a sight for Easter. A fine batch of hydrangeas will be in shape for Decoration day. Robert Edgar, who has charge of this end, does not believe in forcing the plants for Easter, when a soft growth would be the result. Frank Edgar has charge of the selling end at the market.

A. Leuthy, at Roslindale, Mass., was packing some azaleas for shipment to Havana at the time of my visit. He does a heavy business in decorative stock.

The Quidnick Greenhouses, at Anthony, R. I., have a pink sport from the carnation Queen, of which they think highly. "It has the free-flowering qualities, and quantity counts for much," remarked J. H. Cushing, who has named it Victoria.

E. W. Pearson, Newburyport, Mass., runs his houses to tomatoes and cucumbers as soon as chrysanthemums are over. This season, owing to the low prices carnations were bringing, he threw out one house and increased the area of vegetables. From one house 30x250 feet he picked four tons of tomatoes last season. The varieties are Comet and Lorillard. Rawson's Arlington White Spine is the favorite cucumber. The method usually followed here is to plant the tomato plants in rows between carnations, which are thrown out in May, by which time the tomatoes are well established. An early crop is secured and the house cleaned out in time for fall planting. Mr. Pearson makes a specialty of bedding plants, having about 15,000 geraniums, in addition to other stock. M.

UTICA, N. Y.

The Utica Florists' Club held its regular meeting at the greenhouses of W. A. Rowlands, in Whitesboro, April 3. There were about forty members present and all succeeded in making the evening one of pleasure. At the business meeting the present officers were renominated.

Following the meeting, the annual winter clambake was enjoyed. All of the good things that go to make up a real "bake" were conspicuous in plenty and the affair was a great success. A paper entitled "Culture of Carnations" was read by A. J. Watkins and during the evening an orchestra rendered popular airs of the day.

SEYMOUR, IND.

Just before noon of April 1 this section of country was swept by one of the most destructive hail storms ever known. Our loss was nearly complete. The houses were full of a general line of bedding stock, and one house of carnations with a fine crop coming in for Easter. After the storm the scene was something fearful. The hard freeze which followed did great damage; although every precaution was taken to cover well, the fierce wind found all the tender plants. We have cause to remember our neighbor florists for their prompt assistance in helping us to get back in shape for business. Of course our glass was insured, and trust that every one depending on a glass house for a living, that is not already insured, will apply at once, for none of us knows who will be the next victim.

M. A. BARICK.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The one-story office and work room at the greenhouses of Clark Bros., 185 Tockwotten street, at the corner of East street, was badly damaged by a fire which started in the vicinity of the stove in the office at 2:15 a. m. April 4. The flames did not communicate with the big greenhouses of the florists, but made thorough the destruction of the office structure.

Patrolman T. D. Welch of the Third Police Precinct discovered the blaze while making his rounds and sent in an alarm from box 6 at East street and Armstrong avenue. The flames, after breaking through the roof, were fanned by the wind, and for a few moments things assumed a dangerous aspect. The firemen, however, succeeded in keeping the fire confined to the office portion of the establishment. The blaze is believed to have been caused by the stove in some way, although the exact origin cannot be determined.

care for the plants up to exhibition time. As these accommodations are all furnished without expense to the society, it would seem that the financial results of the convention at Niagara Falls must necessarily be better than ever before.

Following the custom of some years past, the accrued interest on both the permanent and general funds was ordered added to the reserve fund.

George W. McClure was appointed chairman of the committee on sports, and J. R. Cloudsley was appointed as a member of that committee, the third member to be announced later. Mr. Ewing and Mr. Philpott, of the Canadian Horticultural Association, met with the committee on the last day and arrangements were partially completed for joint sessions of the S. A. F. and the Canadian Horticultural Society, details being left to be settled at a later date. The question of international games was left to the sports committee. It was decided that the bowling games should be held at Buffalo during the last day and evening.

The final resolutions, which were adopted with enthusiasm, expressed the appreciation of the board for the "many courtesies shown us by everybody we came in contact with during our visit." Ex-Mayor Cutler; Mr. Isaacs, of the International Hotel Co.; Major Butler, of the Natural Food Co.; and President and Mrs. Kasting were personally thanked in the final resolutions, both for assistance offered and hospitalities extended, and the board adjourned more than pleased with the kindness and courtesies shown and with the highest anticipations for a successful and enjoyable convention.

It should be noted by the members of the S. A. F. that Mr. Isaacs offered, in case enough early reservations of rooms were made at the Cataract house, to reserve the entire hotel accommodations of

THE MOSBAEK ESTABLISHMENT.

Onarga is situated on the main line of the Illinois Central railroad, eighty-five miles south of Chicago, and is in the heart of the best farming land in the state of Illinois. The season there is some two weeks earlier than in Chicago. Here is located the Iroquois Canning Co., operating one of the largest corn canneries in the world, where the product of 3,500 acres of sweet corn is canned annually. The Mosbaek Greenhouse Co. is one of the branches of this immense business.

Begun in a small way, the company now has eight greenhouses, seven of which measure 26x100 feet, and one 14x100 feet, which were constructed by the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago. The Boston fern and its sports are a specialty, being grown in such quantity that car-load shipments are not unknown. Boston, Pieroni, Anna Foster, Scottii, Whitmani and Elegantissima from runners to plants in 14-inch pots are seen. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are in such good demand that Axel Aggerholm says it is hard to keep up the supply.

In bedding plants, geraniums naturally take the lead, with such old favorites as S. A. Nutt, Jean Viand, La Favorite, Trego, Alphonse Ricard and Beante Poitevine, yet such plants as alyssum, alternanthera, ageratum, dracena, salvia and vinca are grown in immense quantities, the houses being filled to their utmost capacity.

Outdoors there are 15,000 square feet of sash used for bedding stock and ferns also, while as much more is used for starting hardy perennials, of which fifty acres are grown. The soil here is especially adapted to the raising of cannas and the company devotes twenty acres to them. Among the best varieties are King Humbert, Black Beauty, Chas.

to pieplant, asparagus and horseradish, for which they find a ready market in Chicago.

The company occupies fine offices downtown, as the business is almost entirely through the mails. Started in a small way to supply a local trade, the business has developed, through systematic organization, advertising and careful attention to details, to be a large and prosperous one, with wholesale dealings from Maine to California and from Canada to distant Texas points.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Laurence J. Stuppy.

Suffering a stroke of paralysis at his home in St. Joseph, Mo., March 30, just one week after he had returned from a trip to the Pacific coast, Laurence J. Stuppy died at 8:30 o'clock in the evening of the same day.

Mr. Stuppy had been visiting in Los Angeles and other towns on the coast until a week previously, when he returned home. When stricken with paralysis, fatal results were feared, and all the children who were in the city were at his bedside when the end came.

Born in Ste. Genevieve, Mo., in 1850, Mr. Stuppy moved to St. Joseph with his parents one year later, and had been a resident there since that time. In 1873 he started a flower shop, which has been in existence since. He is survived by a widow and six children. The sons are Frank X. and John, of St. Joseph. The daughters are Mrs. B. W. Murphy and Miss Dorothy Stuppy of St. Joseph; Miss Helen Stuppy, of Albany, N. Y., and Miss Marie, of Seattle, Wash.

Warren S. Ewell.

In the death of Warren S. Ewell, April 2, after a long illness, Boston lost one who a decade ago was well known as a grower and exhibitor of Dutch bulbous stock. Born in Roxbury in 1851, the deceased succeeded to the florists' business of his father and carried on the same until his death, his specialty always being bulbous stock. Of this he was for many years the best grower around Boston and he won many prizes for his products at the shows of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. He early became identified with the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, serving on the executive committee in 1895 and being elected to the office of president for the year 1907. He was a life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Funeral services were held from his late residence, 218 Quincy street, Dorchester, April 5, when many of his old confreres attended to pay their last tribute of respect. W. N. CRAIG.

John Cleary.

The death is announced of John Cleary, New York, father of John P. Cleary and Ambrose Cleary, both of whom are widely known in the trade, having been connected with the plant sales at auction in New York for many years.

Charles Ingram.

Charles Ingram, gardener for W. J. Dana, at Wellesley, Mass., died suddenly, Sunday, April 5. He was 50 years of age and a native of Scotland. He arrived at Boston twenty five years ago and in the early part of his career in New England floriculture was with S. J. Reuter, of Westerlo, R. I., and also with Welch Bros., the Boston wholesale florists. At one time he was in business

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

GEORGE NICHOLSON, known internationally as the author of the horticultural dictionary, is reported seriously ill at his English home.

THE orchidists have decided that the time is not ripe for the organization of a separate society and will, instead, affiliate with the Horticultural Society of New York.

THE Quinquennial Exhibition at Ghent, Belgium, opens April 25 and will attract a number of American visitors as well as a large attendance of those in the trade in European countries.

A GERMAN has invented a rosentstachelapararat, which is only his way of saying an "apparatus for removing thorns from roses." It is said to do the work of ten men in clearing briar and Manetti stocks of prickles.

It is an excellent thing to have some piece of advertising matter to put in every letter that goes out, but don't let the parties addressed lose sight of the main issue because you fill your envelopes with the circulars provided gratis by manufacturers.

F. H. TRAENDLY, president of the S. A. F. and of the New York firm Traendly & Schenck, says that in his opinion the florists have had much cause to be satisfied with the business of the last few months, for they have had their full share of what business has been done, and things might have been much worse.

At a recent meeting of the council of the Société Royale de Flore it was decided to offer to the committee of the international exhibition to be held at Brussels, Belgium, in 1910, the assistance of this society in organizing the flower shows. This offer is made in conjunction with the Société Royale Linnéenne. It has further been decided to form floricultural, orchid, fruit, chrysanthemum, scientific, rose and garden architecture sub-committees.

THEY all read the REVIEW.

EASTER, 1909, falls on April 11, eight days earlier than this year.

RETAIL florists are doing considerably more advertising than usual in their local daily papers—and it all will have its effect in increasing the Easter business.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Window Gardening, by Herman B. Dorner, the Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.

One of the latest books to reach the editor's table is written by Herman B. Dorner and bears the dedication, "To my Father," who is the venerable Fred Dorner, of Lafayette, Ind. The volume consists of 150 pages, freely illustrated with halftones of our ordinary house plants, and in his preface Mr. Dorner states that it has been his aim to give such cultural directions as will enable the inexperienced to overcome most of the difficulties which arise in the growing of plants in the window garden. The cultural directions given are equally applicable to the window garden and to small conservatories and it is hoped that the book will commend itself to school teachers and owners of small conservatories as well as to the growers of plants in the windows.

Prof. Stanley Coulter, of Purdue University, says: "The author, Mr. Dorner, has special fitness for the work assigned him, not only because of a thorough scientific training, but also because of years of practical experience in the handling of plants in an establishment of wide reputation for its successful methods of plant breeding and culture. The book is to be commended with confidence as of high practical value."

Where so many owners of house plants still insist upon dosing them with castor oil, or watering them with boiling water, or using various chemical nostrums, florists will do well to assist in placing Mr. Dorner's volume in the hands of the people. It might well be done not only by recommending, but by offering it for sale. A choice collection of gardening books would be a salable side line for any florist dealing with those who have the love of gardening.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There is a large movement of stock, but the supply is so heavy that the market gives no special indication of the strength of the demand. While the regular buyers are calling for moderate quantities of stock, mostly of the best grade, the bulk of each day's receipts goes to those who are more exacting in the matter of price than of quality or the method by which stock is handled. Several wholesalers note that the market has again reached the point, as in the spring of previous years, where Friday, Saturday and Monday are busy days and the middle of the week decidedly quiet by contrast. Friday is the day of the big shipments to the out-of-town people who run special Saturday flower sales. Saturday is the day of largest local demand, and Monday the day when the best shipping orders go out and when the local stores must replenish their stocks.

Roses are of exceptionally good quality with nearly all growers and cuts are so large that it is not easy to make all the stock realize what it should. Killarney is the best rose in the market, but there are some splendid Maid and Bride, while Richmond is up to its usual form. Chatenay is not a good rose in spring. The demand for funeral work is not so strong as it has been and it has caused a weakening in the market for short roses.

Those who thought there would be a scarcity of carnations following the glut of March now realize that they did not take into consideration the effect of the vernal season upon the blooming qualities of carnations. It would take a long period of dark weather to check the crops enough to bring about a shortage. Quality is excellent and the supply so abundant that the special sales throughout a wide stretch of country are being fed from this market.

The calla lily affords a problem for the wholesalers. One often can find from 200 to 500 lilies on hand in any one of half a dozen wholesale houses and the growers are not realizing enough to make the crop profitable. Easter lilies also are overabundant, considerable stock that was intended for Easter coming in too early. All bulbous stock continues overplentiful. The southern narcissi dominate the market, much of the stock being of specially good quality. Violets are too plentiful and prices continue at the lowest level.

Sweet peas, if of good quality, are among the most salable items. Stocks and snapdragons are offered of splendid quality and sell fairly well.

Considering the conditions affecting other lines, green goods are selling well, but there is a prospect of a break-up in boxwood, several houses being overstocked.

Easter Prospects.

The advance orders for Easter are being booked at concessions of about twenty per cent from the prices which prevailed ten days before Easter last year, and there is enough confidence in the success of the holiday so that all the wholesalers feel satisfied they will clean up on roses and carnations. The trouble will be to realize on the supplies of bulb stock and miscellaneous items.

The point in greatest doubt is as to the supply of lilies. Some of the largest growers say that not more than one-fourth of the stock will be such as can be cut and shipped to customers with assurances of satisfaction, and as a result some wholesalers look for stiff prices on really first-class lilies. At the same time, there will be enough short and weak-flowered stock so that some wholesalers look for this grade to depress the value of better stock.

Inquiries received indicate that the out-of-town buyers will, most of them, stock up fully as heavily as they ever did before, which means that the city buyers will have to insure themselves by placing advance orders for what good stock they know they will need.

It is in order to give the growers the customary caution: the best market will be April 16 and 17, not the day before Easter.

Club Meeting.

The second meeting of the Florists' Club at the Union restaurant, April 2, brought out an increased attendance, there being nearly thirty present. President Kill's campaign duties prevented his remaining throughout the evening and J. S. Wilson occupied the chair for a portion of the evening. A financial statement of the outcome of the rose show was presented and other financial affairs of the club were up for discussion. The following new members were elected: A. Aggerholm, Onarga; Emil Pielke, Geneva; H. C. Blewitt, Des Plaines; R. Schiller, Charles Peterson, John Michelson and H. P. Prescott. Several applications were received, among them that of J. A. Valentine, of Denver. One of the club's other suburban members was present, H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg.

Most of the evening was given to the enjoyment of the entertainment provided by the committee on the good of the club and the social feature promises to largely increase the attendance. Every one voted the meeting a great improvement over the old order of things.

The Weather in March.

The mean temperature in March was 2 degrees less than in 1907, but 6 degrees above the average for the last thirty-eight years. The highest temperature was 63 degrees March 27 as against 80 degrees maximum in March last year. The rainfall was three and a half inches, or nearly an inch more than normal. There were only eight clear days, seven partly cloudy and sixteen on which no sun shone.

business in western hardy cut ferns. A great many people are anxious to try them and one buyer, April 6, took 100,000.

April 7 Peter Reinberg was elected to a third term in the city council, receiving 4,208 votes to 3,247 for his nearest competitor. It is a republican ward, but Mr. Reinberg has scored a good plurality for three successive elections, this time 961. Leonard Kill was campaign manager, and attention will now be given to the Easter cut flower business.

John Sinner, of Sinner Bros., keeps a daily record of sales of both roses and carnations, so that at the end of the season he can tell just how much money each crop has brought in. They have practically the same amount of bench space in carnations as in roses. There have been years when the carnations brought more money than the rose crop did, but this year the roses are giving $1.25 for each $1 the carnations bring in.

C. W. McKellar handled two wagon-loads of southern narcissi April 3.

G. S. Crego, the grower who supplied E. C. Amling with the Crego aster last summer, and for several years, is removing from Maywood to Portland, Ore., where he will grow seeds for the trade. His departure will not, however, take the Crego aster out of this market, as he has sold the seeds to a large number of growers in the last three months.

April 3 Mrs. Pieser, wife of E. E. Pieser, treasurer of the Kennicott Bros. Co., received word of the death of her mother and left immediately for the family home in Canada, north of Montreal.

F. A. Thompson, of Detroit, who is the manufacturer of To-bak-ine products, made his headquarters at E. H. Hunt's last week. He says he is more than pleased with the sales of his insecticide, but regards it as curious that the large growers use it more freely than do the smaller ones. C. L. Washburn says that Bassett & Washburn have used as much as ten gallons in a single week, and other large growers use it extensively. Mr. Thompson says many growers who could do a thorough fumigation with a pint or quart, still seem content to use tobacco stems.

Sam Pearce says that not more than a quarter of his lilies are what one would call good, tall stock, but that the short ones are more heavily flowered than usual and will bring profitable returns. They will not do for cutting and shipping, but the retailers want them for making up baskets and are buying at good prices, that is, 8 cents to 10 cents per bud.

J. W. Breakey, who has the old H. & R. Hilmers stand at 3915 Cottage Grove avenue, is preparing to move about May 1 to a new store a few doors north, at 3909, where he will have as good facilities as almost any retailer on the south side.

John Mangel has been making advertising capital this week through the display of the Crane cup in his show window. It is the hundred-dollar trophy for the best hundred Beauties at the rose show and was won by Bassett & Washburn, from whom Mangel gets a large part of his supply. The cup is one of the handsomest trophies ever offered for a flower show prize, and Bassett & Washburn feel well repaid for their effort through its possession.

Brant & Noe, at Forest Glen, will shortly have their own private system of water works, having contracted with the United Pump & Power Co. to equip the plant with what is known as the Perry pneumatic system.

Vaughan & Sperry say that single violets are practically finished, but that advices from Rhinebeck indicate a large supply from that source for Easter. Other wholesalers concur.

Weiland & Risch are making preparations for early building. Their addition is entirely for roses.

George Reinberg will add several new houses to his plant this spring, as well as rebuilding a number of his oldest houses.

Scheiden & Schoor have propagated a big stock of their seedling carnation. It is their intention to introduce it next season.

At J. A. Budlong's they report an exceptionally successful season with the rose grafts. They are now growing little else than grafted stock.

August Poehlmann says that the many recent visitors to their plant have seemed more interested in the mechanical features than in anything else, the means of handling coal and manure and the apparatus by which compressed air can be used for syringing seeming to especially hold the attention of the growers.

Charles Hammer, of Memphis, made his headquarters with the Benthley-Coatsworth Co. for several days recently. He says business is good in Memphis and the amount of shipping which is being done to that town corroborates his statement.

John J. Kruchten says the Bowmanville growers will have no shortage of carnations for some time to come.

Wietor Bros. have already replanted quite a number of Beauties.

Zech & Mann say Matt Mann's annual crop of red gladioli will be coming along in a few days now.

WASHINGTON.

State of Trade.

The cold weather of the last three days has shortened up the supply considerably, especially the Beauties. All the growers are guessing for the Easter crop. The magnolia trees in the parks, and early blooming shrubs, are in full bloom. Business improved last week. A big opening for Monday was postponed on account of the death of S. Kann, of S. Kann, Son & Co. This will be one of the largest decorations in the way of an opening ever seen in this city. Some nice orders have been booked for the Stevens funeral.

Various Notes.

J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, was in town this week with his usual line of samples of ferns and blooming plants. Mr. Goudy, of Dreer's, was also a visitor.

Dan Blackistone, who was located in Chicago, is back in town. He is now a benedict.

The Market.

Business is quite brisk in this city. This probably sounds a little fishy to some, but nevertheless it is a fact. Stock remains well cleaned up, the only exceptions being some varieties of bulbous stock and the poorer grade of carnations. Speaking of carnations, they can now be bought on every street corner at from 15 cents to 25 cents per dozen. This illegitimate competition is commencing to be keenly felt by some of the florists on the main street. J. F. Sullivan is probably the worst sufferer. He has been forced, much against his will, to sell some carnations at the same ridiculously low figure.

Roses meet with a steady demand. About the best roses on this market at present are La Detroit. These can be bought at prices ranging from 3 cents to 6 cents and 8 cents, and every flower is perfect.

From present indications, there will be an exceptionally fine lot of blooming stuff on sale this Easter. Many of the stores have advertised openings for next week and the majority of florists are more enthusiastic than ever about Easter

Club Meeting.

The large, roomy tables at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange were completely covered with a fine assortment of blooming plants and cut stock on the evening of Wednesday, April 1, that being the regular meeting night of the Detroit Florists' Club. The main feature of the evening was an exhibition of Easter stock. For some reason, probably owing to the strenuous efforts of our show committee, the florists took an unusual degree of interest in this exhibit. Those who showed plants were Beard Bros., Mr. Dinser, Charles Plumb, Breitmeyer's Sons, J. F. Sullivan, Fred Miesel and Gus Taepke. There was also a nice exhibit of plants from the greenhouses at Belle Isle. Robert Klagge, James Taylor and F. Kolbe showed a fine lot of cut flowers. In all there was a great variety of all the popular Easter plants, as well as some novelties.

Philip Breitmeyer, who recently returned from a visit to Florida and other parts of the south, gave an interesting talk on his trip. He also interested the members with a short talk on the rose show at Chicago. Mr. Breitmeyer said that the paper read before the Rose Society by Mr. Sullivan, of Detroit, elicited much favorable comment.

George Browne, who long ago was styled the Greenfield poet, recited a piece of poetry at the request of the president. It was called "The Echo," and made a decided hit with the members.

The name of M. Bloy was handed in for membership in the club. Mr. Bloy has just purchased the greenhouses and house of George Rackham, and will no doubt prove a valuable member of the club, as he is a man of wide experience.

A vase of Afterglow carnation was shown at the meeting and caused much favorable comment. The flowers had been picked Sunday, March 29, and appeared perfectly fresh, showing their fine keeping qualities.

After the meeting the members and visitors were treated to a light repast by the entertainment committee.

Various Notes.

"Professional weeper" is a new title which the police of Detroit have awarded to a man claiming to be George Muckey, of Denver, Colo. This gentleman was arrested Friday evening, April 3, soon after trying to pass a worthless check on B. Schroeter. Muckey has a way of sobbing that will arouse the sympathy of even the most hard-hearted. He admits being the man who ordered funeral flowers from Maurice Wolf and later from Charles Tuson, of Windsor, Ont. These flowers were to be for a dead sister, and in payment for them Mr. Muckey tendered a worthless check, receiving $5 or $6 in change. About 5 o'clock Friday evening Muckey placed an order for funeral flowers with Miss May Wright, of Schroeter's, and, as before, tendered a check. Hugo Schroeter refused the check and Mr. Muckey went out, saying he would come back soon with the cash, as he wanted the flowers. Mr. Schroeter followed him about town for about thirty minutes, until he met an officer, to whom he told his suspicions, and the tear-stained Mr. Muckey was given a berth at headquarters.

There is much talk of Philip Breitmeyer being the republican candidate for mayor.

William Dilger, as assistant park commissioner, is giving the public some first lessons in the gentle art of raising plants and improving the back yards. The newspapers are taking much interest in the matter.

H. S.

PHILADELPHIA.*The Rising Eastern Market.

Business conditions are not nearly so satisfactory as was expected for the week preceding the week before Easter. There have been good days, with fair local and shipping business, but the enormous quantity of flowers coming into the market is too great a burden to be borne. Great quantities go to the street at absurd prices, and more are wasted than I like to tell about.

Despite these unfortunate conditions, there are some bright spots, with good prospects for an excellent Easter. The carnation market has improved considerably, insofar as the colored varieties are concerned. On Monday, particularly, choice deep pink carnations were scarce. White lags. Sweet peas have been selling better than for some time past. The best grade, of which there are only a few, has been in demand. Most of the flowers coming into the market belong to the medium grade. Southern daffodils appear to have been affected by the frost in some instances. The stock coming in from some places is, however, extremely fine, Emperor, as received by John McIntyre April 6, being of excellent quality. Callas are really superb now. It is a pity there is no special demand for them, as such fine stock ought to bring good prices. Easter lilies are increasing in number, as the great church festival approaches. Single violets are practically over, those now coming into the market being hardly worth noticing. There are a good many double violets, both from the Hudson river and locally grown. Indications point to their continuance for a couple of weeks at least. American Beauties are fine and plentiful. All the other roses are in good form for this season of the year. Kaiserin is now plentiful and of excellent quality. Greens are abundant.

Eleventh and Westmoreland.

Christian Eisele is one of the old-time florists who might be described in the words of a girl I used to know, who, when she spoke of anyone she particularly liked, said he was a scholar and a gentleman. Mr. Eisele knows his plants, loves them dearly, and can talk about them intelligently. At his place you can find plants that you can find nowhere else, varieties of merit that have been dropped by seekers after gold mines because, perchance, they could not grow fast enough or bloom freely enough; yet they are varieties of sterling merit that have places in the hearts of our truest flower lovers. I will not tire you with a list of them, just go to Eleventh and Westmoreland and see for yourself; but if you must have a taste of what is in store I will say you will find peppermint geranium there, a plant I cannot recall having seen anywhere else, certainly not in many moons. a favorite because of its fragrance, its early blooming quality and its grace. It can be had in bloom from August to October, when other dainty flowers are scarce. This variety Mr. Eisele has propagated in quantity. Clematis, too, are strong factors with him.

As mentioned in the REVIEW last week, Mr. Eisele will rebuild his range of glass, built in 1885, and repaired a couple of times since, putting an entirely new range in its place, with a show house in front.

Club Meeting.

Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, delivered a brilliant address before the Florists' Club April 7, discussing the advertising feature of the mail order business. There was a general talk on advertising, in which many participated.

A. Roper, Tewksbury, Mass., exhibited Carnation Bay State in fine form. Edward A. Stroud, of Overbrook, exhibited a new lupinus shown for the first time, flowers soft pink, a fine thing.

Wyncote.

The Joseph Heacock Co. has as pretty a lot of young Beauties as one could wish to see. There are thousands of them in small pots, even in height, clean in foliage and full of vigor. Other objects of especial interest are a fine lot of Cypripedium insigne. The stock has doubled during the last few months. A house of Cocos Weddelliana in thumb pots is the picture of health. A house full of Arcaea lutescens is an attractive sight. The Boston and Whitmani ferns and Cibotium Schiedeii are favorites here. These are side lines, but side lines of great excellence.

The main feature of the place, aside from the Beauties, is the kentias, of which there are many fine houses of both leading varieties of this popular palm, in every size from the seed-bed and boxes to the superb made-up specimens in 12-inch tubs. Mr. Heacock prides himself especially on these specimens, of which a number are made up each year, always from absolutely perfect plants. Inferior stock is never allowed to be used in this way. The making-up is done with one large plant surrounded by three or four of a smaller size. The result is an exceptionally choice specimen.

Two large houses of carnations are grown. The feature of the carnation stock today is Seedling No. 100, described in this column some months ago. It is a cross between the most aristocratic types. Evidence of the high blood is shown in flower, foliage and stem. Mr. Heacock has not decided whether to send out Seedling No. 100 or not, believing that one must be careful in sending out anything that is not a little better than existing types. But his confidence in this seedling is shown by the fact that he intends to plant it largely for his own use next season.

The Spring Show.

Quality was evidenced everywhere in the exhibits at the spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, which opened on March 31, continuing through the two following days. It was not an especially large show, but it made up in general effectiveness for any lack of quantity. The center of the hall was occupied by the Wm. Graham Co., which arranged a sort of arbor decoration with smilax, both wild and tame, and daffodils. About this central group masses of color were ranged on all sides, all the spring flowering plants and bulbs being represented in choice specimens.

There were three excellent exhibits of orchids from Alphonse Perieat, Collingdale, Pa.; Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., and Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J. The latter also exhibited the new rose, Newport Fairy. Other roses shown in good form were Anny Muller and Catherine Zeimet, the white Baby Rambler. There were choice exhibits of specimen azaleas of immense size grown in tubs. The hardy Azalea mollis formed another showy feature. An old-time yet novel exhibit consisted of a group of specimen calla lilies averaging ten or twelve large blooms to each plant, from Wm. Robinson, gardener to J. W. Pepper.

Lilium Harrisii was shown in fine form and heavily flowered. Spiraea Gladstone and the pink variety, Queen Alexandra, were well done. The bulbs, shown for the most part in large pans of twenty-five blooms each, included all the best tulips and all the leading varieties of hyacinths. These were for the Michell, Waterer and Dreer prizes.

A feature of the exhibition was fifteen vases of Amaryllis hybrida from C. G. Roebling, Trenton, N. J., J. Goodwin gardener, which attracted much favorable comment.

For the Waterer premium, lilacs were exhibited in six varieties. The Dreer premium brought out six fine plants of wallflower. The geraniums in 10-inch pots were wonderfully well grown. Primula obconica was also shown in good form. Wm. Robinson exhibited one of the plants of Nephrolepis Amerpohlii with which he won the Craig prize last August. It was in a 10-inch pan and beautifully grown. Nephrolepis Todeaoides in a 16-inch pan was a splendid specimen. John MacCleary, gardener to Mrs. F. C. Penfield, made a liberty bell of blue hyacinths, with outlines of white and red tulips, which was exceedingly striking. Louis A. Couche exhibited two varieties of watereress grown from Michell's Erfurt seed. Both Henry A. Dreer Co. and Henry F. Michell Co. had exhibits of grass seed, lawn mowers, etc., the latter display being in charge of Israel Roznowsky. Joseph Hurley, gardener to J. W. Paul, Jr., exhibited three fine specimens of rhododendrons in as many varieties.

Edward A. Stroud, Strafford, Pa., showed five vases of his fine carnations.

Greenery at Craig's.

Everyone fully recognizes the truth of the old adage that "Enough is as good as a feast," so in describing the Easter plants of the Robt. Craig Co. two weeks ago, Phil deemed it best to say nothing about the greenery until today. The feature of this department is a splendid stock of Ficus pandurata. They are grown, and well grown, in different sizes, from medium single-stem plants to immense branching specimens in quaint cedar tubs that prove so useful to the decorator. Nephrolepis Amerpohlii is strongly in evidence, the plants being nicely grown in good commercial sizes. Robert A. Craig asserts that Nephrolepis Todeaoides will surely become one of the most popular varieties in its class when better known. This assertion is backed by a goodly stock of the fern in question. Dracena Massangeana, D. terminalis and D. fragrans are largely grown for decorative purposes. Two new varieties of this family have strong prospects of coming to the front in the near future. Pandanus Veitchii is a favorite here, also crotons in many varieties, for which the #### Bowling.

The bowling competition for prizes has been in progress in the Florists' Club alleys during the last ten weeks. Eight matches of three games each were rolled; play days Monday and Tuesday evenings of each week. Following is a list of the teams and totals: Moore, Adelberger, Rowley, G. Craig, Conner, 19,805; Dunham, Graham, Shook, Harvey, Gobel, 19,516; Robertson, Eimerman, Batchelor, W. Wescott, Manley, 19,262; Holmes, Metroter, Dodds, Dungan, Griffin, 18,609; Kift, Falek, Hahman, Anderson, J. Burton, 18,434.

Various Notes.

Visitors in town reported by the S. S. Pennoek-Meehan Co. were F. G. Berger and Mrs. Berger, Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. Mary Johnson and Mr. Johnson, Baltimore, Md., and W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.

It is rumored that M. Rice & Co. are looking for an additional building that they will use as a storehouse, as their present large quarters have proved too small for their constantly increasing business.

Visitors in town reported by H. Bayersdorfer & Co. were George Shaffer, Washington, D. C., and John Coombs, Hartford, Conn.

Desire Corbin, violet grower, has opened a store at Fortieth and Market streets for the sale of cut flowers and Easter plants. Charles Thomas is with him.

Edward Reid says that his success with Easter plants is due to the fact that he sends out only the best stock, and does not bother with anything inferior. "Life is too short for that," says Mr. Reid.

At a fashionable luncheon recently the ice cream was served in flower pots, the kind selected being chocolate in order to look like soil. In the center of the chocolate ice cream flower pot a daffodil bloom was inserted. Novel, but is this good taste?

taining their flowers was unfortunately delayed in transit until too late to be judged in the regular classes.

M. Rice, of M. Rice & Co., has joined the list of suburbanites, and will shortly move to Oak Lane, where he has bought a handsome home.

The Century Flower Shop has been having special sales each Saturday at attractive prices. Last week daisies were offered. The week before it was Carnation Mrs. T. W. Lawson, 3,000 being sold at 45 cents a dozen.

J. Murray Bassett, of Hammonton, N. J., who has earned an enviable reputation as a grower of fine dahlias and hardy perennials, is also a collector of native plants.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious spring. The week opens with delightful weather. The grass is green, the trees are budding and Easter is so near we can see the spring bonnets and the floral display without any stretch of the imagination. Over at Will Siebrecht's, in Astoria, the tree peonies are far advanced and the magnolias showing color, but, like all the bulb forcers, Mr. Siebrecht gives the season closing some hard knocks and declares raising and selling valley at $1 that costs $1.25 is neither profitable nor amusing.

There is little to say of the cut flower market this week that has not been said of its condition during the last forty days. Talk about Lent! It has been Lent all winter in the New York wholesale district, but the patient is convalescent. Next week he will sit up and take notice, and the week before Easter, as Charles Millang sings, "Sunshine will come again." You can enter, as the one best bet, that there will be a big Easter, excelling all past records in the quantity of stock sold. Why not, with wholesale prices most reasonable, cut flowers abundant, the plant supply perfect and enormous, business looking up all over the land and even in scared New York, where the millionaires are as thick as Jersey mosquitoes, all the busted banks reopening their doors?

Everything looks good from the floricultural viewpoint. The seedsmen are working night and day. The nurserymen are swamped with orders, many of them reaching into the thousands. The auctions are crowded with eager suburbanites and these embryo gardeners are paying good prices and paying cash. The florists' supply men have not a word of fault to find with business and most of them are working nights. So are the ribbon men. The men who build greenhouses have more than they can do. Guess there isn't anything that can stop this country in its upward progress.

What of the cut flower growers, the wholesalers and the retailers of their products? That seems to be the only serious consideration. The growers have certainly had a discouraging season. Often it seemed an utter impossibility to close out the enormous supplies at any figure. Wholesalers faithfully toiled, schemed and planned to meet the abnormal condition, often without avail. The retailer suffered least of all, for with values so low the margin of profit on the business done was satisfactory. The low range of prices means much to both grower and wholesaler and creates uneasiness, distrust and impatience. Some growers come and see for themselves. Lots of them have this year, and return to their labors realizing it is an off year and that we must take the bitter with the sweet. Others are considering concentration systems and plans of distribution out of the beaten track. Growers of carnations and violets have been especially afflicted.

I note that in 1906 Beauties sold at 50 cents each and violets at $1 per hundred for Easter, but for this particular week the general average was close to the current quotations. Lilies were 10 cents and Beauties 20 cents. You see one sometimes can get solace by comparisons. In 1907, conditions were about the same. For the corresponding week to this the record was the lowest of the year. Lilies had been booked at 12 cents and late orders were filled at 15 cents. Beauties and violets were abundant, and of bulbous stock there was no end. But carnations were scarce and prices stiff. If this warm, sunny weather continues, there will be some shortages by Easter that will make present quotations blush.

The plantsmen are about sold out. Everything at medium prices, and perfect, is gone. The greenhouses were full of buyers last week, local and out-of-town florists. I saw them everywhere. They all are expecting a good Easter and buying accordingly.

Various Notes.

The Van Praag Co., of West Fortieth street, bought the fixtures of the Van Praag store on Broadway at the auction last week at a considerable reduction from their original cost.

Ford Bros., like many of the wholesale cut flower men, handle a large number of blooming plants in pots. Their specialties in this line are lilies and violets.

In addition to the exhibits already announced for the New York Florists' Club meeting Monday evening, April 13, W. A. Manda will show the Cherokee rose and other interesting plants, and other local artists will exhibit novelties, so that a great show and a record crowd is assured at the club's homecoming to the rooms in the Grand Opera House building.

T. Melstrom, of Sander & Sons, is in the city to remain until after Easter.

April 1 was the thirty-second anniversary at W. H. Siebrecht's at Astoria.

Harry Hoffmeyer made some heavy purchases for his new store at Atlantic City. He has several big orders for Easter decorations there, one of over $1,000, at one of the swell hotels of the great resort.

Suzuki & Satow, at Woodside, have fine lilies. R. Dreyer's new plant is full of fine hydrangeas, azaleas and roses, all sold, he says. The big range of Anton Schultheis is bursting with roses, lilies and azaleas and about every variety of Easter plant. His record covers over twenty years of Long Island floriculture. Anton, Jr., is now bookkeeper for the firm. Mr. Schultheis seems very optimistic and predicts a complete clean-up for Easter. The plantsmen at Whitestone, and also those at Flatbush and in Jersey, speak in the same cheerful tone as to the holiday outlook, and after the Easter rush, if there be any surplus, the auction outlet was never in better working order, and in addition to the regular Tuesday and Friday sales at Cleary's and Elliott's, there are sales every morning at 9 o'clock in the rooms of the Fruit Auction Co., on Franklin street, where the crowd and interest are growing daily. The outlook is especially bright for the future of plant growers in and around New York.

Arbutus, that certain harbinger of the vernal season, is already in the retail windows.

Samuel Woodrow is back from his New England trip, with a well-filled order book which will call for day and night shipping.

to-date floral department under its present management. Some great decorations are planned for the near future, the Jefferson dinner the crowning democratic feature of them all.

M. A. Bowe does more business in less space than possibly any other retailer in the country, and yet his location is as desirable as any in the United States.

John King Duer will have a fine Easter exhibit in the big area under his care in the rear of his fine store on Madison avenue. J. J. Coan, the manager, says it will be a splendid Easter.

At Bloomingdale's, Wallace Burnham has a flower show that ought to crowd the great roof conservatories. He says everything points to the best Easter ever known.

Bobbink & Atkins and the Julius Roehrs Co. report that the houses at Rutherford have been crowded with buyers for weeks and before April 15 about everything will be away.

Donohoe's new store on Twenty-eighth street gives him the best facilities for Easter he ever has enjoyed. There are few handsomer stores in the metropolis.

David Clarke's Sons have made greater preparations for Easter than in any of the sixty years they have been in business.

This is Alex. McConnell's second Easter in his Arcade store, where results have demonstrated the wisdom of his move. For Easter the overflow will have branch stores as usual.

Young & Nugent maintain their reputation for artistic window decoration in the heart of the wholesale district. John B. Nugent's hand has not lost its cunning.

G. Myer, on Madison avenue, has a handsome window display at all times, but it is particularly beautiful this week, with Easter suggestions and novelties.

Siebrecht & Son were fortunate in the move for Easter, and permanently, to their new store on Fifth avenue, in the Siebrecht building. The height and depth of the window make decorative work here particularly effective.

Fred Smythe is back from Europe in time to welcome the usual Easter display of Walsh's rambler roses.

Thomas Young, Jr., will enjoy this Easter beyond any of the last decade. He has concentrated all his interests at 500 Fifth avenue, except his plant at Boundbrook, where gardenias are his specialty.

N. Lecakes & Co. have been incorporated, with an authorized capital of $9,000, to grow and deal in plants and flowers. The incorporators are David U. Page, Richard I. Calus and Donald P. Haynie.

Wertheimer Bros. say that their business with florists was never better, especially with those located in the middle west. They say that the number of reorders by mail indicate that the florists themselves are doing a good business and have used up stock bought, in some instances, for the Easter business. They have found special offers of staple ribbons a good way of establishing pleasant and mutually profitable relations with many whom their travelers have not called upon.

The American Evergreen Co., 52 West Twenty-eighth street, is handling arbutus and lilac in abundance. Over 3,000,000 dagger ferns and 800,000 fancy ferns are in storage.

Peter Crowe, of Utica, is in the city and will spend several days with John Raynor and his other wholesale friends before a trip to Boston.

The wholesale cut flower house of D. Smith & Co. has disintegrated and not a vestige of it remains.

Latest reports from the venerable Charles Allen, who has been suffering from an attack of pneumonia, are encouraging and hopes are entertained for his recovery.

J. K. Allen celebrates his twenty-first

FOR SALE—At a sacrifice. A model floral establishment in the city of Youngstown, Ohio. This is the oldest floral establishment in the city, and has a trade that is desirable in every way. In order to close out an estate, this establishment will be sold at a price that is an inducement. This is an excellent opening for some one desirous of engaging in the floral business. For further particulars call on or address C. Edwin Oyster, Receiver, 507-508 Dollar Bank Bldg., Youngstown, Ohio.

FOR SALE—One of the largest and best known mail-order seed, bulb, plant and nursery establishments in the United States. This business was established in 1860, and is known by all seed people the country over, and many abroad, and has an enviable reputation for quality in seeds, plants, etc. This is an excellent opportunity for an individual or corporation desirous of entering into this line of business, which is a very profitable one to engage in. To an ambitious young man, or several of them associated together, it offers a rare opportunity to step into and take up the management of a business that is so thoroughly established, and as well known as this one is. In order to close out an estate, the entire establishment, including 52 acres of testing gardens, office buildings, greenhouses containing 45,000 feet of glass, barns, seven dwellings, a complete and up-to-date printing establishment, in which is turned out all printed matter used, including catalogs; horses, wagons, and entire equipment necessary to carry on this business successfully, will be sold at a sacrifice. Any one interested can have full particulars by calling on or addressing the undersigned, C. Edwin Oyster, Receiver, 507-508 Dollar Bank Bldg., Youngstown, Ohio.

The Florists' Manual

We note your advertisement in a recent number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual, and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

Easter and the coming of age will have some special ceremonies.

James McManus says orchids will be in demand again as soon as the spring wedding season opens.

Moore, Hentz & Nash are cheerful at the outlook and agree that "It is a long lane that has no turning."

Joseph Fenrich is a reliable bowler all right, as his record of 234 demonstrates.

Gunther Bros. are now thoroughly established on West Twenty-eighth street for their first Easter away from Twenty-ninth street.

A. L. Young has been under the weather for some weeks, but is improving rapidly.

Millang Bros. are delighted with their move to Twenty-eighth street.

Alex J. Guttman has only cheery words and laudable ambitions in his discussion of the wholesale cut flower trade of the city.

Frank S. Hicks & Co. will soon be in their fine new store over Mr. Sheridan's.

H. E. Froment says there is sure to be a large supply of Beauties this Easter.

Traendly & Schenck say that there is considerable out-of-town demand for cattleyas and other high grade stock of which the supplies are limited in other towns than "little old New York."

John Cleary, father of John and Ambrose Cleary, died early this week.

green goods merchant, is getting busy in his nursery at Chatham, where he resides.

Wilson, with nurseries in Jersey, greenhouses in his own city, and the handsomest store in the city of churches, seems fully equipped for a record Easter.

Masur, on Fulton street, has been a year in his new store and is again crowded and ready for expansion.

John V. Phillips, at 272 Fulton street, says he thinks his display of Easter plants is the best in his many years at the business.

Bowling.

The bowling contest for the Traendly transportation to the convention in August began Friday evening, April 3, and will continue for thirteen weeks. Hereafter the first and second games each evening will be used to determine the average. One hundred and fifty-five seems high to some already, after Friday's effort. The club now has twenty members. President Marshall offers a box of cigars and a pruning knife to the best averages for the last three weeks of April. The alleys are excellent, the location the best and most convenient. # Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-sixth annual convention at Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25, 1908.

THE weather in the Santa Clara valley of California has been thus far favorable to the seed crops.

W. W. WILMORE, Denver, who makes a specialty of dahlias, says this season's business is all he can attend to.

AGAIN this season California seed growers have planted a considerable acreage in Colorado for onion bulbs for 1909 crop.

SOME of the pea growers are reported to have encroached upon their supplies of stock seed of the scarce varieties, so that they cannot add to their acreage of these sorts this year.

THE southern trucking territory had no spring; it was an almost instantaneous transition into summer. The result was a tremendous rush for seeds and then a sudden end to the demand.

THE government crop report, made public April 8, gives promise for next year and will have a present effect on general business, for it indicates the continuance of good crops of the great staples.

THERE is no prospect of striking out the free seed paragraph from the agricultural appropriation bill this year. The congressional distribution for 1909 will be conducted on the same lines as in recent years.

WHOLESALE seedsmen are having their own troubles these days. The reorders call for items that cannot be supplied, and to see that each customer gets "something just as good" occasions much wear on the gray matter.

PRESIDENT GEORGE S. GREEN, of the American Seed Trade Association, says the Detroit convention in June will be the "best ever" and that he looks for a record attendance because of the important questions now disturbing the seed trade.

G. S. CREGO, originator of the Crego aster, is removing from Maywood, Ill., to Portland, Ore., where he has arranged for land and is planting aster seeds. He expects to make a specialty of growing aster seeds and seeds of sweet pea novelties for the trade.

CONRAD APPEL, the Darmstadt seedsmen, evidently wants to keep his mailing list up to date, for on the envelope used for mailing the English edition of his catalogue is printed: "If removed, do not send on, but return please with indication of new address, if possible."

THE Yokohama Nursery Co., New York, is sending out a general catalogue for 1908, in English, printed in Yokohama, which is altogether one of the most unique of the trade publications. In the first place, instead of being bound as are American books, it is composed of about fifty sheets tied together with Japanese floss. The book contains illustrated, descriptive lists of a great variety of stock not found in any other horticultural catalogue, even Panama hats being included.

are very much pleased with the result of this year's business. While 1907 was an exceptionally good year with us, 1908 is running fully five per cent ahead. Joseph Breck &amp; Sons, Boston: "Our business up to April 1 was excellent, but since that date a cold spell set in and it is not quite as good as we would like to have it. We expect, however, that we are going to have a good season."

A. T. Boddington, New York: "We worked five nights last week, and Sunday; that is about as much as we can say at this time."

W. Atlee Burpee &amp; Co., Philadelphia: "We are now doing the largest business we have ever done, and the orders are coming in daily in a manner that promises that business during the month of April will be, comparatively speaking, about as good as it has been during the month of March. There seems to be a very good demand for all lines of seeds and the unfortunate part is that the supply of some of the most popular varieties is rapidly becoming exhausted."

W. W. Rawson &amp; Co., Boston: "Our business up to April 1 has been very satisfactory. We can report an increase of forty to fifty per cent, both in our mail order and counter trade. The weather has been in some respects unfavorable to an early rush, but we do not doubt that the season will be a most successful one."

Barteldes Seed Co., Denver Colo.: "It is the time of the year that we are usually exceedingly busy and this season, notwithstanding the money stringency, etc., is no exception, the trade being equal to last year, and were it not that we are experiencing an exceedingly dry season, we believe the seed demands would be still greater. The precipitation at Denver through the month of March was but eleven-one-hundredths of one inch, the warmest, driest month that is on record since the weather bureau has been keeping records for the public. This may make some difference with the farmers in the arid district where what is known as dry farming is conducted. on hand. Don't wait—have your To-Bak-Ine ready. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Paint the heating pipes with To-Bak-Ine Fuel Spray To-Bak-Ine Liquid. Any of these methods will control Thrips and other pests. Fumigate regularly, before you see the pests—especially just in the spring days. Don't fail to have a can of To-Bak-Ine on hand—and use it.

To-Bak-Ine Liquid is the most powerful spraying insecticide known. Spraying is one of the most economical methods, as you can adjust the amount of To-Bak-Ine Liquid to just the strength wanted, and if the pests infect only a portion of the stock they can be eradicated there without going over the entire house.

For Carnations use three teaspoonfuls to a gallon of water, and five gallons is enough to spray thoroughly a house 100x25 feet.

For Roses use four teaspoonfuls of To-Bak-Ine Liquid to a gallon of water, and five gallons of this mixture is enough for each house 100x25.

These directions depend on how badly the stock is infected and on the season, but if used regularly you can depend on clean stock at all times.

PRICES:—¼-pint, 60c; ½-pint, $1.10; 1-pint, $2.00; ½-gal., $7.75; 1-gal., $15.00; 5-gals., $67.50.

his stock, or himself and family. They have awoke to the fact that this country can grow all of their wants, and the sugar or cotton that they may grow is net profit. This is one of the reasons why we appreciate the increase in our seed business. We want to state the fact, however, that had it not been for this money crisis which has affected New Orleans in general and adjacent states, as well as the east and north, and hampered the business, it would have been twenty-five per cent better than what it is."

MORE ABOUT FORMOSA LILIES.

As we are the original introducers of the Formosa Liliun longiflorum, we think it will be of interest to state some facts about them, as there seems to be little knowledge as to the origin of this comparatively new type.

As the Liliun longiflorum business is of the greatest importance for our concern in Yokohama, Mr. Uhei Suzuki, the founder and president of our company, did not save either expense or trouble to bring a lily on the market that could compete in earliness with the Bermuda Harrisii. New plantations were started on different islands in the southern part of Japan, with stock from our regular plantations in the vicinity of Yokohama, but they only resulted in entire failures and big loss of money, because, although the lilies produced good bulbs, they did not give the desired results when forced.

Finally Mr. Suzuki discovered on one island a wild growing lily of the longiflorum type. He had the bulbs collected and cultivated in the same way the cultivations are made on the mainland. They proved to be a success, but we had to wait for the results of forcing them in the States. Three years ago we received the first six cases in miscellaneous sizes of this stock and they turned out excellently. The year after about sixty cases were consigned to us and again gave such satisfaction that we eabled to our Yokohama house to plant as many as possible. As a result we received over 300 cases last year and expect over 2,000 cases the coming season.

The Formosa lily flowers in the month of February on its native island, or about two months earlier than the Bermuda lily. The bulbs are thoroughly ripened by the end of May, when shipments will commence, which we count on reaching New York the end of July or the first part of August. The long rest the bulbs have until they can be potted will be decidedly in their favor. The Formosa lilies should not be forced as hard as Harrisii, otherwise they grow too tall.

THAT ONE WARRANTY.

Congressman Mann, in his report on the pure seed bill, says in part:

"Nor is it safe in many cases for the seller of seed to guarantee the character, quality, or productiveness of the seed. The test of seed often can not be made until it has been planted and the crop has been produced. This danger has led seedsmen quite generally to adopt in various forms the substance of what is known as the non-warranty clause of the American Seed Trade Association, instances of which are given later in this report. It probably would not be wise or safe to require seedsmen to warrant the seed sold by them, owing to the fact that they have no way of following the seed from the time it leaves their hands until the crop is produced. The only way, therefore, of reaching the present situation is by forbidding, to a limited extent, interstate commerce in seed which has been deliberately adulterated or misbranded and forbidding the importation of seed either intended for adulteration purposes in this country or which has been adulterated before importation."

After quoting the non-warranty of a number of leading seedsmen, the report quotes those giving a more or less qualified guarantee and concludes with the following under a special subhead as the one broad guaranty of good seed:

"We guarantee that every package we send out shall reach its destination in good condition and that everything shall be received exactly as ordered. If a package is lost or any of its contents injured on the way we will send again. We also guarantee everything true to name.—John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y."

CAVEAT EMPTOR.

The Saturday Evening Post has been seeking to prove that business men do unto others as they would be done by, and that there is no need that buyers beware. With this in view the following questions were addressed to some three score business men, embracing many lines:

1. Is the Golden Rule practical in the business world? If not, why?
2. Are there any commercial methods sanctioned by trade which do not square with the teachings of Christianity? For example, must a man lie or misrepresent to succeed?
3. What, in your observation, are the great evils, if any, in the business world?
4. Are standards higher or lower than when you entered business?

The reply of W. Atlee Burpee was as follows:

1. The Golden Rule is not only practical in the business world, but is an absolutely necessary foundation for any permanent success.

2. It is no more necessary for a successful merchant to lie or misrepresent than it is for a successful minister of the Gospel. In fact, any houses that are known to misrepresent will so quickly lose the confidence of their customers that their trade cannot be permanent.

3. It would be difficult to point out any great evils in the business world today so far as general merchandising goes, other than those which have had sensational exposure and which were really a vindication of business as it

Duke of Edinburgh. Bright vermillion.
Frau Karl Druschki. The finest white in existence.

Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.
General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.
John Hopper. Beautiful rose-pink.
General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.
La France. The finest light pink.
Margaret Dickson. White, pale flesh center.

Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.
Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light, satiny pink.
Mme. Plantier. White.
Mrs. John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.
Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.
Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.
Ulrich Brunner. Cherry-red.

We also carry about 25 other varieties. Write for list and price. Prices on Hardy Hybrid Perpetual Roses, $1.50 for 10; $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000.

ENGLISH MOSS ROSES

Assorted, White, Pink, Red. Large dormant plants, from open ground. 10c each; 85c for 5; $12.00 per 100.

STANDARD, or TREE ROSES

(Grafted on Rosa Canina or Rugosa Stock)
Large, well-grown, selected plants in the best and most serviceable varieties. 35c each; $3.25 for 10; $25.00 per 100.

MANETTI STOCKS FOR GRAFTING

Selected English Stock, best quality, $1.50 per 100; $12.00 per 1000.

BABY RAMBLERS

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER—Grown as a Standard

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free-blooming qualities, etc. 35c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

Mme. Norbert Levavasseur (Baby Rambler).

Strong, field-grown plants: $1.25 for 10; $12.00 per 100.

Catherine Seimeth. A very important novelty. A white Baby Rambler rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. It has the true rose perfume in a high degree. 45c each; $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100; extra strong, 60c each; $6.00 per doz.; $45.00 per 100.

bler class. Color intense crimson, and exceptionally free-flowing. 25c each; $1.00 for 5; $18.00 per 100.

Anny Muller. The pink Baby Rambler, and bound to find favor where the Baby Ramblers are popular. 45c each; $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Baby Dorothy. The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flowers is similar to Dorothy Perkins. This variety has created quite a sensation when exhibited at the English National Rose Society's and other shows. "Baby Dorothy," when planted out, flowers perpetually from spring until autumn. It makes an excellent pot plant for forcing. Price for strong, field-grown plants, 50c each; $2.00 for bundle of 5; $35.00 per 100.

Mrs. Wm. H. Cutbush. A grand acquisition to the Baby Ram-

HYBRID TEA, or EVERBLOOMING ROSES

Hybrid Tea, or Everblooming Roses, are becoming more popular every year. As hardy as the perpetuals, with slight protection in winter, they give a wealth of bloom all through the summer months and late in the fall till frost checks them.

The Grand New Rose Lyon. Originated by the raiser of Etolle de France. Perpetual flowering. Vigorous grower. The blooms are very large with broad petals, full and globular in form; shrimp-pink at the ends of the petals, center coral-red or salmon-pink shaded with chrome-yellow. Very fragrant. $1.25 each; $6.00 for bundle of 5; $12.00 for 10.

Rose, Etolle de France. Flower large, possessing petals of very good substance; magnificent cupped form. Superb crimson-red velvet, the center of the bloom vivid cerise-red. The flowers are very fragrant and last very long. The Queen of the Everblooming Red Roses. The most free-blooming and vigorous Red Rose ever introduced. Strong, 2-year-old plants, field-grown, 25c each; $1.00 for bundle of 5; $18.00 per 100.

The Killarney Rose. This is a grand rose for either indoor or outdoor cultivation; is a strong grower, and the blooms, which are of a beautiful pink, are borne in great profusion. Strong, 2-year-old field-grown stock, 25c each; $1.00 for bundle of 5; $18.00 per 100.

Gruss an Teplitz. No Rose in commerce can compare with Gruss an Teplitz as a bedder. It is a perfect sheet of richest crimson-scarlet all summer. A strong, vigorous grower. Hardy. 20c each; $1.50 for 10; $12.00 for 100.

Maman Cochet Roses. The best of all Roses for summer flowering and cutting.

Pink—Color a clear, rich pink changing to silvery rose; very double and fragrant.

White—A sport from the above, with all its characteristics; color a beautiful snow-white, at times tinted with the faintest suggestion of blush, the same as is often found in the Bride. 25c each; 75c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100.

POPULAR HYBRID TEA ROSES

American Beauty, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Clothilde Soupert, Caroline Testout, Hermosa. 20c each; 75c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100.

RAMBLER ROSES

Dorothy Perkins. Resembles the Crimson Rambler, except in color, which is a lovely shell-pink. 15c ea; 65c for 5; $12.00 per 100.

extra-strong, 2-year-old plants, grown on their own roots, at the following prices: 3 to 4 ft., 15c each; 65c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100; 4 to 5 ft. long, 20c each; $1.00 for 5; $15.00 per 100; 4 to 6 ft. long, 25c each; $1.15 for 5; $18.00 per 100.

Crimson Rambler Rose. American-grown. We can supply

WELL-KNOWN CLIMBERS

DAYTON, OHIO.

State of Trade.

The majority of our local florists report that business in the last week has experienced a slight improvement, which is chiefly due to the number of deaths that have occurred. Several of our large business houses are already having their spring openings, and at most of these openings pot plants and cut flowers are used in great profusion; many of them give away carnations as souvenirs, and this, of course, calls for several thousands; consequently the market is kept pretty clean and a good price is realized for them.

The weather, which is warm, is bringing bulbous stock along rapidly, and it is feared that hyacinths, narcissi, daffodils, etc., will be almost a thing of the past by Easter. On the other hand, prospects for plenty of Easter lilies look most favorable. Lily of the valley also is coming in nicely. Carnations will not be any too plentiful and there will not be enough roses to supply the demand. Counter trade is a little slow, but not any more than can be expected with Easter so near.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Dayton Florists' Club was held in Mrs. Elizabeth Young's store at 37 East Fifth street, April 6. There was an exceptionally large attendance. The meeting was presided over by the club's newly elected president, H. H. Ritter. After a short session of business the meeting was turned over to general discussion, mostly on bulbous stock, chiefly on the Harrisii lily. Most of the members have cut out growing Harrisii and have confined themselves to longiflorum giganteum and multiflorum. They seemed to think that the reason Harrisii has gone back on them so many times in late years is because they are dug and shipped before maturity.

ment for the smaller growers to hold their stock for higher prices. Carnations were not quite so plentiful the first of this week. The amount of stock on the market is greater than it was a year ago at this time, but the prices are lower. This, of course, causes the wholesalers to complain of hard times, a condition due to the quantity of stock rather than the demand.

Beauties are in good supply and the demand not equal, in spite of the good grade of stock. Bride, Maid and Chateau are plentiful and the indications are for a good crop for Easter. Violets are smaller and not up to standard, due largely to the warm weather. Carnations

J. A. Valentine has returned home from Chicago. E. S. K.

WASHINGTON, N. J.

Alonzo J. Bryan began work March 30 on three new greenhouses on his farm on East Washington avenue. The new houses will be 28x110, with a height of fourteen feet from the floor to the ridge. Besides these buildings, he will also erect a propagating house and a vegetable house. When completed the entire plant will be heated by steam, instead of hot water, as at present. Mr. Bryan will carry on the vegetable business on a larger scale and will still cater to the local demand for plants and cut flowers, but the greater part of the product of his greenhouses will be shipped to other markets. Edgar McConnell, of Scranton, Pa., who has had over thirty years' experience in the trade, has been engaged as manager of the floral end of the business. Mr. Bryan's dwelling, which was partly destroyed by fire March 16, will be replaced by a handsome new residence.

WELL BALANCED FERTILIZERS.

At this time of the year the gardening fraternity have many inquiries from planters in regard to the proper fertilizing of soils. There is no subject, apparently, with which gardeners are less acquainted. Well rotted manure has for centuries been the best known addition, and as in towns and some other places there is constant need of artificial enrichment in which the use of such a commodity is out of the question, a few remarks in a general way may be of interest.

In the use of fertilizers it might first be stated, and it is important to remember, that the soil constituents most heavily drawn upon by plant life are potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen. Of these a majority of soils in our Pacific coast towns contain the available forms in but limited amounts, and by continuous cropping, no adequate return being made, they become largely exhausted and the plants actually suffer from hunger.

Consequently the value of all fertilizers is based upon their content and the availability of these three ingredients. The other soil elements essential to plant life, with sometimes the exception of lime, are nearly always present in abundant supply; therefore it is seldom necessary to give them any attention. Incidentally they form a large proportion of the chemical structure of fertilizers. It is seldom, however, that any valuation is set upon them.

Lime is often used, not so much as a direct food, but to correct acidity of soils and improve their physical and mechanical condition. Lime enters largely into the formation of bones and other phosphate fertilizers.

Ordinary stable manure contains about nine pounds of nitrogen, eight of potash and six of phosphoric acid, per ton. If it was only for the fertilizing effect, and not for the mulching as well, it is easy to see that a tremendous amount would have to be used before any great benefit would be imparted to the soil.

The most important element to be considered is nitrogen. This promotes a growth of leaf and stalk. A deficiency is indicated by poor growth and foliage of a pale green color. A rank growth, on the other hand, with imperfect blossoms, indicates an excess of nitrogen. Flowers produced under these conditions often prove sterile and will not produce seed nor fruit. In many instances indications of excessive nitrogen simply mean that potash and phosphoric acid are not in sufficient supply. Raw bone meal, although slow to act, is very lasting and contains no potash, which should therefore be used in connection with it. Pure dissolved bone meal acts more quickly than the raw bone, but should be used also in combination with potash. It contains practically the same percentage of nitrogen, but usually not over twelve per cent of phosphoric acid.

The various brands of ammoniated, dissolved bone meal, or super-phosphates, put more nitrogenous matter in the soil when deficiency of this is indicated, but the percentage, usually about three and one-fourth, makes its use dangerous if handled carelessly.

Nitrate of soda, or Chili saltpeter, contains fifteen per cent of nitrogen. This, being in the form of nitrate, is immediately available to plant life, and its judicious use gives the gardener a control over his stock that no other form of nitrogen can equal. For general use it is not advisable to recommend it to those not versed in handling it.

Potash is the second ingredient to consider. It is necessary for the perfect development of flowers and fruits, and when it is lacking an abundant and luxuriant crop cannot be had. It produces hardy, disease-resisting wood and goes a long way toward the production of rich coloring, both in foliage and blossom. From five to seven per cent is the usual amount of potash that should be in combination, and, although not an ingredient found with bone meal in its various forms, it should be added unless a brand of fertilizer is used that contains it. Either the sulphate or muriate of potash will furnish an available supply in a very convenient form to use. Phosphoric acid, however, occurs in pure ground bone meal to the extent of twenty-two per cent, and from that down to twelve per cent in dissolved bone meal, and then still lower in combinations of nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid. This particular element enables the plant to assimilate and make use of the other ingredients, and without it plants would die before reaching maturity, without bearing seed, and seeds grown for planting should be liberally provided with phosphoric acid.

No one of these three essentials can of itself perform its peculiar functions. Each and all are dependent on each other, and only when all are present in suitable proportions can the best results be obtained. And here it should be borne in mind that an excess of any one element cannot make up for a deficiency in another.

The use of a well balanced fertilizer, containing all three of the necessary plant food ingredients, is strongly recommended unless it is absolutely known that the soil contains sufficient available supplies of any particular constituent.

By the use of properly balanced plant foods, in connection with intelligent handling of plants and flowers, not only will the results be good at the beginning, but the producing power of the land will year by year be increased until maximum results are regularly obtained.

When Writing Advertisers

PACIFIC COAST.

THE SEASON IN CALIFORNIA.

The fact that the central portion of California is much short of the usual rainfall at the present writing, coupled with the fact that the season is getting so far advanced that it is now too late to handle many kinds of stock, does not argue well for what might have otherwise been a fair spring.

To begin with, the rains were slow in commencing early in the season, and when they did arrive they started business nicely for a short time. The absence of frost in a great measure retarded the falling of leaves on deciduous stock until very late, and this made it doubly hard to handle some articles.

January and February did well and practically all the selling and planting were done during those months. With the advent of March the dry winds began, and with them warm, sunshiny days and an entire absence of moisture. Everyone was waiting for the welcome showers that did not materialize, and suddenly the new leaves began to spring forth, and at the present time almost everything is in full leaf and bloom.

As a consequence many planters have deferred their stock buying until next fall, and the season which opened up so well is now practically over, with only two months of time in which any great amount of business was done.

Much stock is still heeled in that will have to wait for another season before being sold, and as this is usually not a profitable condition to have trees in, the dealers do not generally consider this as a successful spring financially. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are within a couple of weeks of Easter and the excess of dry weather continues unabated. Hot, dry winds add to the seriousness of the occasion and everyone is wishing for a few good showers.

Flowers are overplentiful and the demand continues to be rather light. Prices are gradually tending downward, and unless there is a considerable revival of business in the near future, it is not likely that Easter prices will be as good as those of one year ago. Although many growers planted heavily of lilies, from the present outlook there will not be an excess of them. Those that are being brought into town now are netting the growers from $2 to $3 per dozen and with only fair demand.

Carnations are cheaper than the writer has ever seen them at this time of the year, and were it not for the fact that some of the largest growers depend largely on their shipping trade, the overproduction would be even more noticeable. With roses much the same condition exists in the usual white and pink varieties, but in the red colors there has not been such a heavy supply. Beauties are not now, nor have they been at any time this season, in sufficient quantity to supply the local demands.

Bulbous stock is getting scarcer, with the exception of Narcissus poeticus, and these are now at the height of their season. Daffodils have stiffened somewhat in price, and all other varieties, such as tulips, freesias and Dutch hyacinths, are practically over. A few late tulips, however, are still being shown and they move fairly well, but there seems to be but little demand for any bright colored flowers.

Lilac, both white and purple, is brought into town in huge quantities and is the most popular flower at present. Violets are slightly on the wane and the continued dry weather has not improved their keeping quality. Smilax is scarce and there is some demand for it for window and church decorations. Wild maidenhair has almost entirely taken the place of the tame variety, but it is of such poor lasting quality, especially at this season, that its principal good quality is its cheapness.

Fruit blossoms sell well for window decorations, and other kinds of outside stock in proportion.

The early part of the present week found most of the retailers busy with funeral work, and outside of this there is little to mention in the way of business.

Over in Oakland the conditions are about the same, and everyone is hoping that, with the advent of Easter, things in the florists' line may brighten up somewhat.

Various Notes.

D. F. Carnes, representing the Roseville Pottery Co., of Zanesville, O., is in town.

Thorsted & Co., of Fruitvale, are cutting largely of a new scarlet seedling carnation of their own raising, to which they have devoted considerable bench room. It is of a somewhat deeper shade than Estelle and grown on very long stems.

Frank Pelicano reports heavy orders for shipment of Easter stock to interior points. This firm is the second in line to move down into the burned district again and is located near its old quarters on Kearny street.

Harold George, of Elmhurst, is cutting heavily of late flowering daffodils. His soil and location seem to be ideal for this flower. G.

LANCASTER, O.—M. M. Miesse, of the White Post Farm, has added to one of his greenhouses a structure 25x106 feet. This extension is to be used for starting melons on sod and in pots. He says that this year's vegetable crops have been good, but prices were low in the beginning of the season.

SOOT AND OTHER FERTILIZERS.

Will you please inform me whether soot, either from soft or hard coal, is good for carnations? Please tell me, also, if a small quantity of gas lime, say, about one-half peck in a barrel of hen manure, would be likely to do any damage to the roots of carnations in the house.
A. L. & S.

Soot from soft coal is a splendid fertilizer, and I have never seen any harmful results from the use of it. It tones up the plants wonderfully, giving the foliage that dark, glossy green one delights to see, and on carnations it increases the amount of that grayish bloom which covers the foliage and flower stems. It also deepens the color in all blooms which are of a delicate shade, and heightens the color in the scarlets and cerises. I do not know anything about soot from hard coal.

You do not say how you used the hen manure, or how much you applied to a given space, so I cannot say whether damage resulted from that source or not. I will say, however, that hen manure is very concentrated and should be used with care. A peck of it soaked in fifty gallons of water is strong enough for any crop. I would not use lime in connection with it. It may not do any harm, but I hardly think it would do any good. It is not considered good policy to mix lime with manure when using it as a mulch, as it frees the ammonia too rapidly and wastes much of the plant food contained in the manure. I would never mix hen manure with the soil before planting the carnations, but would use it later as a top-dressing, or in liquid form for feeding.

TROUBLE WITH SWEET PEAS.

Our sweet peas are blasting the buds along the middle part of the bush, the top blooms being perfect. We do not use artificial heat now, except perhaps once or twice a week at night, and then just a little. Our temperature, in Kansas, now never goes below 58 or 60 degrees at night, and in the day time, with every vent open, top and side, it runs from 70 to 90 degrees, as we have more sun than we really can use. Our peas are this season in raised benches and are as healthy looking as you would wish to see, with that one exception. We have never been bothered that way before, although heretofore we have grown them in a solid bench on the ground under practically the same heat and sun conditions.
F. C.

Except for a short time in midwinter sweet peas do much better in solid beds. In fact, I have about made up my mind not to grow any more in benches, even for early winter flowering, as the flowers are much finer from solid beds. Sweet peas love to be cool and moist at the root and in the state of Kansas, where winter temperatures are higher and the sun's power much stronger than in our more northern states, the solid bed would seem to be the only way to successfully grow them. The most successful sweet pea specialists find that a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees under glass grows the finest sweet peas. As the days lengthen and temperatures rise, the quality deteriorates. I think if you return to the solid bed mode of culture you will not have any blighting and will have better success all around.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

J. H. H. BOYD, McMinnville, Tenn., says the sudden arrival of summer has put a stop to nursery shipments in his section.

MANY large orchards of the improved varieties of chestnuts are to be found in Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York.

THE Spokane Nursery Co., Spokane, Wash., has invested $3,000 in three lots adjoining its property and will add to its planting by just that much.

DURING the last few months all the nut nurseries have been actively engaged in grafting pecan stock and reports indicate a large increase in the number set.

THE Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station, College Park, Md., has issued interesting bulletins entitled "Nut Growing in Maryland" and "Strawberries."

THE P. J. Berekmans Co., Augusta, Ga., says that the unprecedentedly warm weather this season has cut short the shipping season in that locality by at least three weeks.

BATES BROS. recently sold their interests in the nursery business at Floral, Kan., and have associated themselves in the tree-growing department of the Wichita Nursery, Wichita.

GEORGE C. PERKINS, of Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., sails for Europe April 15, on the steamer Majestic. He goes upon a business trip in the interests of his house, and will visit the leading places of horticultural interest in Great Britain and on the continent.

THE nurserymen of the south have had a good season, but not so good as would have been the case with a more favorable shipping season. The financial disturbances in the north have had little effect on the planting of nursery stock at the south, but the early spring cut short the shipping season to such an extent that the volume of business was considerably reduced from what it would have been had a normal season prevailed.

SPIRAEA ARGUTA comes into bloom the first week in May, the slender branches being thickly covered with small, dense clusters of pure white flowers. It is quite hardy and can always be depended on to make an effective display. The small olive green leaves on the numerous branchlets are retained until late in the season. Its average height is four feet, but in fifteen years' time it will grow

THE HARDY MAGNOLIAS.

The hardy magnolias have never been appreciated as they should be here in Massachusetts. We have been growing these in quantity for over thirty years. After discarding the more tender varieties, we still have seven or eight which are perfectly hardy in any well sheltered location in this vicinity. When in bloom in April and May they are "the most magnificent flowering trees in America." Some are fully as large and

NEW ROSE

MRS. JARDINE

Every Florist who Plants a Rose for Winter Forcing wants at least Six Qualities

A FREE, STRONG GROWTH, WITH GOOD FOLIAGE. A VARIETY THAT CAN BE EASILY GROWN. LARGE FLOWERS ON LONG STEMS. DELICIOUS FRAGRANCE. DISTINCT, PLEASING COLOR THAT WILL SELL AT SIGHT. A ROSE THAT WILL HOLD ITS COLOR IN THE DULL DAYS OF DECEMBER AND JANUARY.

MRS. JARDINE has all these characteristics, and, in addition, is of so perfect a form that it can be used either in the bud or half expanded flower. The color is a bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink, and, even in January, when Bridesmaids and Killarney lose their color, Mrs. Jardine is as bright as in October or March.

We extend a cordial invitation to everyone interested in this New Rose to visit our Nurseries and see it growing.

MRS. JARDINE has been awarded Two Silver Medals, numerous Certificates, and successfully stood the best test which any novelty can possibly have in passing unanimously, in December, the Award Committee of the New York Florists' Club after an exhaustive examination of the growing plants, with a score of 92 points.

Strong Plants on own roots, from 2½-inch pots, $6.00 per doz.; $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000; 5000 for $1125.00; 10,000 for $2125.00.

handsome as the southern magnolia, or M. grandiflora, which is not considered hardy north of Virginia. The first variety to bloom in spring is M. stellata, or Hall's magnolia, pure white, from Japan, a dwarf, slow-growing plant, which, however, commences to bloom when two or three feet high, while specimens can be found twelve to fifteen feet high which bear thousands of blooms every year. Those who are in Washington in March see them all about the city, especially in the White House grounds and the Botanic Gardens. Here it does not bloom till the last of April or the first of May, and is followed by M. speciosa and M. Soulangeana, often mistaken for each other. Soulangeana, however, has the larger bloom and more spreading habit, but for one magnolia for the north we should choose M. speciosa as the most hardy and floriferous.

M. Lennei, red, is beautiful—a little more tender and not quite so vigorous as the last; still, in good, mellow soil it usually does well. Over thirty years ago the writer was walking with the late Dr. Parkman through his beautiful grounds at Jamaica Plains, near Boston. The doctor was pointing out his many beautiful trees and plants. "There," said he, straightening up to his full height and pointing to a scrubby tree, perhaps ten feet tall, "that tree when in bloom is the handsomest tree on my grounds; that is the Magnolia Lennei." The writer immediately bought two from a New York nursery, which cost him, delivered by express, $10 each. Since that time we have imported hundreds of small ones.

Magnolias should be handled carefully and, as the foreign ones are apt to kill back a little when small, they should always be cut in well when transplanted. We once transplanted about fifty M. speciosa, very large ones, after they were in leaf in June. We cut them back hard, about half the tops, and all lived and made fine specimens.

Among our native magnolias M. acuminata is the most hardy. It is rather desirable as a street and shade tree on account of its fine shape and good foliage. In the west it grows to be a large timber tree and is called the cucumber tree, because its fruit resembles cucumbers.

A much better ornamental tree is M. tripetala, a native of the southwest, but considered hardy in Massachusetts. Its large leaves give it a tropical look, and when covered with its immense white flowers, it is an object of striking beauty. It is generally grown in the bush form,

Baby Rambler Roses

A type of Rose which is becoming very popular for bedding purposes. They form shapely, compact, bushy specimens about 18 inches high, producing in great profusion from early in the season until severe frost immense trusses of small flowers.

Crimson Baby Rambler (Mme. Norbert Lavasseur). An extra fine lot of strong two-year-old plants, $2.50 per dozen; $20.00 per 100.

Pink Baby Rambler (Anchen Muller). Brilliant luminous pink; a shade that is always admired. $3.00 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.

White Baby Rambler (Katherina Zelmet). Pure white flowers, showing the yellow stamens very prettily, produced in large candelabra-shaped trusses. $3.50 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.

in brooks and wet places all through the southern states and as far north as Cape Ann, Massachusetts. There is a tract of low, wet land between Gloucester and Manchester where M. glauca was formerly quite plentiful. It has a small, white flower, cup shaped, in bloom about the first part of July and so fragrant that people traveling that road can smell it at quite a distance. This place was so noted for its magnolias that a village, now quite a famous watering place, was named for it. We have had it in our nursery for many years, but have always given it a damp, sheltered place. Planted in clumps or massed around a pond or sheltered bank, it has a very pretty effect. T. C. THURLOW.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

State of Business.

The cut flower trade has been good during the last week. There are plenty of flowers on the market, with prices about the same as last week. Violets from indoors are about all gone. There will be some for Easter from frames outside. They will be none too plentiful, however. Sweet peas are now quite plentiful. Bulbous stock is abundant.

J. H. Cleary still has his Saturday bargains. Last week he advertised 8,000 carnations and 3,000 roses for sale at special prices, 20 cents per dozen for the former and 38 cents per dozen for the latter. One party here sells roses at 25 cents per dozen every Saturday. This is bound to hurt the trade more or less.

Lilies will be rather scarce this Easter, but they are good, what there are of them.

Various Notes.

William P. Pierce is showing attractive window displays these days. He is receiving some fine carnations from his grower, Robert Hoxie. Mr. Hoxie does Boston Market to perfection.

R. H. Woodhouse intends building another greenhouse this season.

S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., is to try out H. A. Jahn's seedling crimson carnation.

Visitors the last week were: F. Lautenschlager, representing Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago; L. D. Bryant, with A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass.; C. H. Twinn, with King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y. W. L.

MONTREAL.

State of Business.

To the joy of us all, the snow has almost disappeared, but it has been cold, with strong winds.

For the last week or so business has been dull, but the Easter outlook is promising. If we can get enough sunshine the plants will all be ready in good time. There is nothing new or special in that line this year. Cut flowers are good and also plentiful.

Various Notes.

Miss Cairn reports business as excellent. Her pretty little store is, as usual, a mass of bloom and color.

Miss Murray's windows have been specially attractive lately. She had some fine lilacs, valley and violets, and is preparing for a big rush next week.

J. Bennett and G. Robinson paid the Ottawa boys a flying visit last week.

The members of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club held an "Old Boys' Reunion" April 6. There was a good turnout, and a good time. Unfortunately, it was a stag party; otherwise the presence of the members' wives and daughters might have added to the pleasures of the evening.

But the "old boys" did not think so.

MASON CITY, IOWA.

Lyons Park, a plot of ground comprising two square blocks in the south part of the city, two blocks south of the Milwaukee viaduct, and on the east side of Main street, has been purchased by the Kemble Floral Co. This company will erect new greenhouses here and move from the present location on West Fourth street as soon as they are completed. L. E. Flindt, local manager for Mr. Kemble, whose home is in Marshalltown, will have a residence built on the new location. This residence will be completed by July 1 and from that time Mr. Flindt will live there to have the building of the new greenhouses directly under his supervision. The work of building the greenhouses will begin about May 1 and will be ended about the last of August.

The Kemble Floral Co. will maintain a store in the city. The exact location of this store has not yet been determined.

BERLIN, N. Y.—Arthur Cowee says the season's sales of gladiolus bulbs have been excellent, being well cleaned up on the stock that florists buy.

DES MOINES, IA.—Soon after May 1, Alfred G. Lozier will remove to the store at 518 Walnut street. As soon as the building is vacated by its present occupant, a jeweler, a number of changes and improvements will be made in it in order to fit it for Mr. Lozier's use.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

Unique Plant Receptacles.

The accompanying illustration shows another of the unique plant receptacles designed by Charles H. Fox at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. These baskets are made in several colors and different heights, so that it was possible for Mr. Fox to make a happy combination of colors of basket, plant and ribbon, with appropriate size and shape of basket, using a variety of spring plants.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

[So many inquiries have been addressed to Albert T. Hey in regard to the "city beautiful" movement at Springfield, Ill., that Mr. Hey has requested the Review to publish, as an answer to some of these inquiries, the following address, which was delivered before the Illinois State Florists' Association, at Springfield, February 19, by Mrs. E. A. Walker.]

The "city beautiful" has become almost a household expression and is no longer considered a dream, a mere fad of the idealist; the interest in many directions is an established fact. The making of a more beautiful city is among the new arts. In the days of our forefathers the question of daily existence made too strenuous a life to give much thought to the artistic adornment of home or country. Now, when our republic takes high rank among the nations of the world, when peace and prosperity abound, the attention of men and women is directed toward the pursuit of this new art, the "city beautiful."

Interest in civic improvement in Springfield, Ill., was aroused by the meeting of the Civic Association of America held in Milwaukee, October, 1906. No one could fail to be impressed with the deep interest in this work exhibited by members present from Texas to Maine, California to New York, Philadelphia and Boston; men and women of broad intelligence, occupying high positions socially, giving of their time and talents in the interest of making greater and grander cities and towns in our own America.

Work of the Woman's Club.

One of the results from attending this meeting was the inauguration of a "city beautiful" department in one of the local daily papers, under the auspices of the Woman's Club of Springfield. The ground covered in this department during the period of its existence was: A cleaner city; the need of a good, pure water supply; the abatement of the smoke nuisance; the abandonment of obnoxious bill boards; a suggestion for securing a system of smaller parks; the cleaning up and cultivation of vacant lots; the care of back yards and alleys; the giving of more space in the erection of all new residences, for light and air; a plea for the elimination of all objectionable matter from the columns of the public press; the planting and care of trees; the duty of citizens in placing our public schools on a higher plane, both as to decoration, art studios and landscape gardening.

Training the Children.

Our schools are centers of influence; they should take an active interest in the "city beautiful" movement. Indeed, they should be the chief civic centers of the community, since a problem is thrust upon us for solution, namely, the guiding of the future of the republic by the children of our homes, as well as by those born of parents coming to our shores from every foreign land.

The civic committee from the Woman's Club endeavored to interest the children of the public and parochial schools by instilling a desire to contribute to the general attractiveness of their homes and yards. For this purpose 10,000 copies of a circular were distributed to the pupils and 11,000 packages of flower seeds were sold at a nominal price of 1 cent a package. The circular was as follows:

SPRINGFIELD BEAUTIFUL

Will You Help?

The Woman's Club offers the following prizes:
1st. Three Dollars ($3) for the best flower garden in each School District.
2d. A metal flag to be placed on the southeast corner of the best kept block of each School District; these flags to be placed June 15, and reawarded in September.

3d. A commemoration tree will be given the School District making the greatest improvement before September.

A flower show will be held in September, prizes to be announced hereafter; a badge button bearing the inscription, "Springfield Beautiful, I Have Helped," will be given every child who has done something toward making Springfield Beautiful.

Look out for the ALLEY; that will count half!

Don't throw papers on the street!

No private grounds will be entered without invitation.

Show what the children can do!

FLOWER SUGGESTIONS.

Do you want to cover an old fence or shed? Use: Morning glories, wild cucumber, cypress.

Do you want to raise flowers for cutting? Try: Nasturtium, zinnias, asters.

Do you want to have blooming plants in your garden? Try: Phlox, pansies, coreopsis.

Plant hardy flowers.

In addition to these prizes, the daily newspapers offered cash prizes for the best essays written by the pupils of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades upon "What Children Can Do to Make the City More Beautiful." The mayor issued a proclamation designating the first week of May as a special time for city house-cleaning. The results of this work were most gratifying. The climax, however, was reached in the great flower show. In this enterprise the Business Men's Association and the florists of our city took charge of the work and made the display a great success. The prizes awarded were trees, roots, bulbs and shrubs. A flower show upon a larger scale is among the anticipated events of the coming season.

The Mission of Flowers.

Do you florists ever stop to think of the mission of the flowers you send forth? Of the brightness, of the good cheer they bring to the home life? And even when they cover the spot where rests all that is mortal of our loved ones, they there speak eloquently of the endless life.

It is a beautiful thought that the sites of old colonial homes in New England, indeed almost the exact line of the old roadways, can be traced by the fragrant, blooming flowers which still persistently cling to life when the hands which planted and carefully trained them have been for many long years at rest.

In the distant and unknown future, perhaps, some flower may be culled whose fragrance shall serve to discover in the weedy, grass-grown ways of our lives, that in some work accomplished, some battle won of right over wrong, we too were counted worthy of remembrance. Any effort toward making the city beautiful can but make more beautiful the lives of its citizens, since

For, as a sainted bard hath truly said,
Even from the body's purity the mind
Receives a secret, sympathetic aid.

AN OHIO STORE.

At Marion, Ohio, F. E. Blake combines all the lines of market gardener and florist, doing both a wholesale and a retail business, and is just now entering upon his busiest season. He grows vegetables and vegetable plants, and also decorative and flowering plants and cut flowers, retailing a large part of his output from his store at 126 West Center street, which is shown in the accompanying illustration. He says the lilies pictured are the finest he ever had, some of them being five feet high, with from eight to thirteen flowers. With Mr. Blake there is no thought of dull trade this spring. He has constantly, as have most general florists in the small cities, an outlet for rather more stock than he has facilities to produce.

will enable us to give the much needed extra space to the rapidly growing bedding plants. Geraniums, being of the first importance, should be spread out. No more topping should now be done and all should be in the pots in which they are to be sold. By giving the plants a little breathing space between them, there will be less yellow foliage and far finer and stockier plants. Cannas will demand more room. Most of these should now be ready for potting. Petunias, verbenas, fuchsias, ageratums, and the large variety of annuals constantly being potted or boxed off, will take a lot of room. Coleus grows rapidly now and will need frequent spreading out, as will other colored leaved subjects. As the pots in which bedding stock is grown are usually quite small, liberal water supplies are a necessity. A careful hand at watering is a jewel to any commercial grower at this strenuous season.

Antirrhinums.

If cuttings were taken from some of the best antirrhinums some time ago, they should now be ready to pot off. Gradually hardened and set outdoors by the end of May, these will give plenty of strong cuttings late in the summer. These same plants can be lifted and benched themselves, and many of the finest spikes it has ever been my privilege to see were grown from these. Continual taking of cuttings causes deterioration and it is well to sow a packet or two of seeds. Plant the young stock outdoors and select cuttings from the very finest for forcing purposes.

Lily of the Valley.

Those who handle lily of the valley in small quantities and may not have the many conveniences of specialists in its culture, can now grow it well in a close frame. If there is a little bottom heat from horse manure, all the better, but this is not necessary. Keep the frame close and darkened until the shoots are of a good length. Then gradually admit more light. For Memorial day, if you start the pips in this way between three and four weeks before May 30, you will have it in season.

Memorial Day Stock.

Spiræas for use at the next floral carnival should now be starting naturally.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Pruning Hardy Roses.

The majority of florists have some hardy roses and a good many are asked to prune those belonging to their neighbors. Anyone who grows flowers of any kind whatsoever is looked upon as something of an expert in matters of this kind. We are afraid the work done by them is often somewhat amateurish. It behooves members of the ancient and honorable craft, therefore, to acquaint themselves with some of these little branches of floriculture, even though it may be a trifle different from the work of growing the particular specialty they depend upon for a livelihood.

Hardy roses planted now, while they may be shortened back a little, should not be finally pruned for about three weeks after planting. Then they should be cut back to within three or four eyes of the previous year's growth. Established plants can be pruned at once. We are referring more particularly to the class known as hybrid perpetuals. Cut out all dead and weak wood entirely. Do not be afraid to prune hard. Light trimming back will give you some early flowers, but the quality will be inferior. Hybrid teas are being more and more grown each year. Merely cut out dead wood from these, and the dead and thin ends of the remaining shoots. The rambler type requires, also, but little pruning. Beyond dead wood and the ends of the long canes, they should not be touched.

Such varieties as Persian Yellow, Austrian Copper, Wichuraiana, multiflora, Soleil D'Or and the Baby Rambler prefer light pruning. The rugosas and mosses should also be shortened much less than the hybrid perpetuals.

Tea roses grown in benches under glass give good results if cut back quite hard. Planted firmly and given a good soaking when set out in May or June, these give a nice lot of blooms in late summer and fall.

Care of Lawns.

The click of the lawn mower is a sure sign that spring is here. Before any grass cutting is done, however, the lawns should receive some attention. A raking to remove sticks, stones and other debris should be followed by a thorough rolling with as heavy a roller as can advantageously be used. After a soaking rain, when the moisture on the grass has dried, is the best time to do this. If no fertilizers have been applied, some should be given now. Well decayed and broken barnyard manure, sheep manure in a pulverized state, or some special lawn chemical mixture is suitable. Fresh barnyard manure cannot be recommended. It brings too many weed seeds into the lawn and is, furthermore, unsightly and foul smelling, and often does far more harm than good to the grass.

Bare places can be scratched over, some lawn seed spread on them and a little more fine loam spread over it and the rake again applied before rolling. In mossy places it is best to dig the land over and reseed altogether. If this entails too much labor, scratch up the moss with iron rakes and add fresh loam containing some fresh lime. Feed the grass, as that is the best way to smother out both moss and noxious weeds.

Bedding Stock.

With the passing of Easter there will be, we hope, many bare benches and this Store of F. E. Blake, Marion, O.

First Completed Section of the New Conservatory at Garfield Park, Chicago.

Six weeks should suffice to bring them into bloom. Lilliums, if they show the buds by the end of the month, will be all right. Crops in benches, such as double feverfew, stocks and late benched antirrhinums, should be encouraged by scratching over the surface soil and, when well established, should be assisted with a little chemical fertilizer. Hydrangeas should have the flower heads showing not later than the last of April. The short lapse of time between Easter and Memorial day this year makes it somewhat more difficult to give the plants for the latter occasion the room and attention their importance merits.

Left-over Easter Stock.

There are always some Easter leavings. We hope they are few and that all the best plants found purchasers at profitable prices.

Azaleas unsold should have seeds picked off and should be kept under glass until the third week in May, when they can either be plunged or planted outside where they can be reached daily with the hose.

It does not pay to carry over large genistas.

Plants of spiræas (astilbes) may be chopped in two and, if planted out in nursery rows in good soil, will make splendid forcing clumps in a couple of seasons.

Forced shrubs, such as lilacs, prunus, pyrus and others, are not worth retaining; nor does it pay to bother with hydrangeas of large size, unless you wish to grow some as specimens in tubs.

If left-over Rambler roses have any good canes coming after Easter, it will pay to keep them. Cut away all the flowering wood and give the young growths every possible show. Keep them in a light, sunny house.

Late Bulbous Stock.

This has been a decidedly off year for the sale of forced bulbous flowers and returns have been discouraging for those who make a specialty of their culture. At Memorial day there is always an unlimited call for tulips or any other bulbous flowers, especially if they have a little color. With the poor sales hitherto, it will pay to retard any of this stock for Memorial day. As a rule, the month of May gives some hot days, sufficient to finish cool-loving subjects like tulips and narcissi. Any grower possessing a cold cellar or pit, and who has much bulbous stock, should hold back all possible stock for May 30. This particularly refers to tulips and daffodils. Spanish iris and Gladiolus The Bride can be easily kept back in a coldframe.

Dahlias.

Young shoots will now be appearing in abundance on the dahlia roots recently started. It is far too early to think about planting out any of these. For customers near home, the best way is to pot these over and grow on in a moderately cool but sunny house. Such plants are decidedly preferable to pieces of tuber often not started at all. For home culture it is just as well to plant out the dormant roots early in May as to trouble starting them under glass at all.

Brief Reminders.

Keep fuchsias pinched and remove all flower buds as they appear, until three weeks before you need them in bloom.

Start tuberose in pots, to be planted outdoors in May or June.

It is still timely to sow rapid growing annuals, like salvia and zinnia.

Have you a sufficient batch of variegated vincas potted or in the cutting bench for next year's trade?

Chrysanthemum cuttings inserted now will give you as big blooms as you will find sale for. Plenty of time yet for moderate sized flowers.

Utilize the coldframes more and more to relieve the greenhouse pressure. On cold nights cover securely.

Scratch the surface of the bulb beds and remove any remaining mulching.

Keep roots of trees and shrubs being planted, from being exposed to drying winds.

Pot off any seedlings of Asparagus plumosus, smilax, grevilleas and Aralia Sieboldii.

Plant out roots of Incarvillea Delavayi and montbretia bulbs.

Look out for aphids on the calceolarias and pelargoniums. Never let up on the weekly fumigation.

GARFIELD PARK CONSERVATORY.

The new conservatory at Garfield Park, Chicago, is rapidly approaching completion. It has cost $160,000 and is said to be the finest structure of its kind in the United States. The accompanying illustration shows the first section of the range to which the public has been admitted. There are six such rooms and a second one will be in readiness for opening April 19.

WHALE OIL SOAP.

Will you kindly give directions for using whale oil soap for cleansing palms?
E. S.

The most convenient and safest way in which to use whale oil soap is to dissolve the soap in hot water in the proportion of one ounce of soap to one gallon of water, and as soon as the solution is cool enough to avoid all danger of scalding, it is ready for use. A warm soap solution is more effective in loosening scale insects than is a perfectly cold wash, but the temperature of the insecticide should not be higher than 120 degrees. If the soap is shaved up into thin shavings it will dissolve more readily.

W. H. T.

GERANIUMS.

Will you kindly state in brief detail the best method of handling geraniums after receiving their final shift into 4-inch pots? Last year mine came into bloom so slowly that they were safeable at too late a date. How close can they stand together before and after going into frames for hardening? Can cotton be used instead of glass for the frames? Could liquid fertilizer be used to advantage in bringing them into good shape? About what would be the right time for getting them into 4-inch pots so as to have them ready for planting-out time, the end of May here? Literature on geranium culture seems to be scarce and information on the subject will be highly appreciated by one not long in the business.

W. A. D.

Geraniums, after receiving their final shift into 4-inch pots, should have a bench in a sunny house where the night temperature is 45 to 50 degrees, not lower than the former figure. A warmer house may be utilized for a short time, but geraniums resent coddling and should be removed to a cooler structure before they can become soft. They should not be syringed overhead at all. It is both harmful and unnecessary. This practice and the use of too much manure in the compost is responsible for most of the leaf-spot so commonly seen. Neither must geraniums be kept constantly moist at the root. This promotes a soft growth, one not productive of floriferousness. Let your plants dry out well between waterings. You will notice, probably, that those which have been allowed to dry out the most, flower first.

To do the plants justice, they should be stood so that the leaves of the different plants only touch. Crowding them may save some watering, but it will give you more yellow foliage. Cotton can be used after the early part of May, but glass sashes are to be preferred. These can be removed altogether during warm days.

In regard to liquid fertilizer, if your plants are of a healthy color, I cannot advise its use. If, perchance, the soil used for them was too poor, a couple of waterings with weak nitrate of soda water at intervals of a week will green them up again. It is unwise to use much animal manure in the potting compost. This induces leaf growth at the expense of flowers. Fine bone is the best fertilizer at the final potting.

C. W.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.*Feeding by Top-dressing.

In naming the various substances used in the preparation of material for feeding by top-dressing, we place ground bone first on the list, as we consider it the most dependable fertilizer that the carnation grower can employ.

As is the case with all commercial fertilizers, there are many brands on the market and some are little better than sand or sawdust. As a general rule, the low price at which these inferior brands can be bought indicates lack of superior quality. However, it is better to buy on the basis of plant food value than on the cost per ton.

Available Phosphoric Acid.

Since the value of ground bone depends on the amount of available phosphoric acid carried, it is important when purchasing to see that the guaranteed analysis shows a good percentage in this form.

Compare the three following analyses:

	Raw Bone.	Steamed Bone.	Dissolved Bone.
	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.
Nitrogen .....	2 to 4	1 to 2	2 to 3
Available Phos. Acid..	5 to 8	6 to 9	13 to 15
Insoluble Phos. Acid..	15 to 17	16 to 20

It will be apparent from this comparison that dissolved bone is the most desirable, especially for the purpose of feeding.

Successive Top-dressings.

We prepare a mixture of six parts soil to one of bone, making it into a flat pile not over six inches in depth. We moisten this slightly, and as soon as the mass begins to heat, which it soon does, the whole is shoveled over several times during the day. Next morning the mixture is ready for use and is applied at the rate of a 4-inch potful between the rows across a 4-foot bench.

It is preferable to plan this operation to occur on the morning of a bright day, immediately following the application of the mixture with a moderate watering. The mixing and shoveling should be done in a shed or house not frequented by customers, as the prevalent odor is not particularly attractive.

After an interval of about two weeks we spread a dressing of ground sheep or cow manure, mixed with an equal quantity of soil, and to this is sometimes added a small quantity of pulverized hen manure. A 6-inch potful of this mixture between the rows is sufficient.

Soon after this, is applied a generous sprinkling of unleached hard-wood ashes.

An Injurious Combination.

On no account mix bone meal with wood ashes, neither follow closely an application of bone with one of ashes, for this reason, as the chemists tell us, that lime present in ashes causes available phosphoric acid to revert; that is, to become insoluble.

There has recently been placed on the market what is termed shredded cattle manure, and while I have never had any experience with this product, I should imagine, from reports of others, that it is a very convenient form in which to use cow manure, as it is usually called.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

ROOTING RED CHIEF.

I have had poor success rooting Red Chief carnation cuttings and would be glad to get some advice as to how they should be treated to get a better strike. I know of others having the same trouble as I.

W. J. K.

We have not found Red Chief a difficult one to root, although it has not been as easy or possibly as satisfactory to root as some varieties. We have found that it takes considerably longer to root than the average variety, but we succeeded in rooting practically every cutting we put in. Our last batch was put in sand February 25 and they are now ready to pot off and every one rooted. Earlier batches took even longer to root and were inclined to take a little rust toward the last. The Messrs. Dorner informed me of this peculiarity last spring, they having had the same experience with the variety.

There is no special trick in rooting it except to exercise patience. The usual precautions against wilting and damping must be kept up a little longer, that is all. Of course you can not put any more in sand now and expect to root any reasonable percentage, as the propagating season for carnations is practically over in this latitude. Even if you did succeed in rooting some of them now, they would not make good, strong plants. Red Chief is a splendid variety and it will pay you well to try to master this peculiarity. I would add, also, that it will pay you to keep it from blooming freely too early next fall. The early blooms are of little value and it being such a profuse bloomer, the first crop takes so much of the plant. Arrange to have the first of the winter's crop come in late in October or November. A. F. J. B.

HILLSIDE PLOW.

Will you kindly state where to procure a good one-horse hillside plow to use in planting carnations in the field, into the fresh plowed ground. C. W.

Write to the Gale Mfg. Co., Albion, Mich., and mention that the address was procured from the FLORISTS' REVIEW.

CARNATION SHOW IN LONDON.

The spring show of the Winter Flowering Carnation Society was held April 1 in the R. H. S. hall, London, England. When the society was instituted, two years ago, it was promoted with the object of demonstrating the importance and utility of the carnation as a winter-flowering plant, hence the title. Many members recognized from the beginning that the title was inappropriate and misleading, so, at the annual business meeting following the show, the title was altered to Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society.

The show held April 1 was the fourth show promoted by the society and in all respects there was a decided advance upon previous shows, especially in the number of entries and the attendance of the general public, evidence of the increasing popularity of the carnation in England. The high standard of excellence in quality of bloom shown in December was, however, probably not surpassed on this occasion except in a few classes.

The leading feature of the show was the magnificent collections of cut blooms from about a dozen trade growers. To these, medals were awarded as follows: Gold medals: Hugh Low & Co., Enfield, an extensive collection nicely arranged; H. Burnett, Guernsey, and W. H. Page, Hampton, collections of superior quality; C. Waters, Balcombe, average blooms most effectively and artistically arranged. Silver gilt medals: Bell & Sheldon, Guernsey; Morris & Co., Guernsey, and A. F. Dutton, Ivor, collections, all showing blooms of fine quality. Silver medals: C. Engellmann, Seffron Walden, a large collection but not quite up to usual form, and C. Lange, Hampton.

These collections occupied a considerable amount of table space in the hall and, owing to the different styles of arrangement adopted by the exhibitors, they were to the general public a more attractive feature than the classes for single vases of thirty-six blooms and eighteen blooms.

In the vase classes the leading prize winners were W. H. Lancashire, Guernsey; Bell & Sheldon, Guernsey; W. H. Page, Hampton; C. Engellmann, Seffron Walden; A. F. Dutton, Ivor; W. E. Wallace, Dunstable; Morris & Co., Guernsey, and S. Mortimer, Farnham. White Perfection was the best

white; Enchantress the best blush; Lawson, President and Robert Craig the best in their respective color classes.

For the best vase in the show there was a stiff contest between W. H. Lancashire's vase of Robert Craig and W. H. Page's vase of Enchantress, the judges deciding in favor of the first named. At the last show the same exhibitor secured the coveted honor with a vase of White Perfection.

Three varieties engaged the attention of the floral committee. H. Burnett submitted Marmion, a large, handsome flower of Malmaison type, cherry scarlet on the petals with a light edge and white reverse, this being awarded a first-class certificate as a new and valuable break, probably the forerunner of a new type. Incidentally I may mention the flowers command a high price in Covent Garden. Mr. Burnett also submitted Mikado, of a deep heliotrope shade, and this secured an award of merit. The third variety, from another grower, the committee expressed a desire to see again in December.

At the society's annual dinner the speakers dwelt upon the excellence of the show and the healthy condition of the society. This was followed by the annual business meeting. The annual report showed an increase in membership and a small balance at the bank. A scheme for the registration of new varieties was presented by the committee and adopted. Several speakers urged the desirability of co-operation with the American Carnation Society, but the general opinion was that as the American society is the longer established it might take the initiative steps in the matter. J. S. Brunton was re-elected chairman; S. Mortimer, vice-chairman; E. F. Hawes, exhibition secretary, and Hayward Mathias, Lucerne, Stubbington, Fareham, Hants (Eng.), corresponding secretary and treasurer. BEE.

HELLENTHAL'S HOUSE.

J. R. Hellenthal, at Columbus, O., reports that this winter he has had an unusually small proportion of split carnations and he gives credit for this fact to the more than ordinary amount of sunshine. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a house in which he grows Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Ethel Ward, Lady Bountiful, Queen and Victory. He says the general health of the stock has been excellent all through the season, better than in any previous years.

His Easter plants are in excellent shape and he is looking for the best Easter business on record, for Columbus is an excellent flower town and growing better every season, in spite of increased competition, both of the best class and low-priced. The low-priced competitors seem merely to be educators of the public, for the people turn to the best stores when the need is for a good article.

TROUBLE WITH GARDENIAS.

Please advise me how to save a lot of gardenias. I have just transplanted them into 5-inch pots. In mixing my soil I use one-half well rotted manure, one-third leaf-mold and a little sand. They are in a 75-foot house. Plenty of air is given them and not too much water. Some of the small branches are drying up and the foliage is fast losing the rich green luster it had before being repotted. From these particulars can you give the probable reason for this continued withering of the plants?
H. J. M.

You have used too large a proportion of manure in your compost and it would have been better not to add any leaf-mold at all. You do not state whether your potting material was lumpy or had been screened. At the first potting from the cutting bench, a mixture of half leaf-mold and loam with some sand added is suitable, but at the next shift a somewhat coarser and heavier compost is to be preferred. Two-thirds fibrous loam, with the finer particles discarded, and one-third well dried and lumpy cow manure, with the addition of a little soot and broken charcoal, I have found an ideal soil. Gardenias do not like a fine compost. No matter whether in pots or benches, coarse material well firmed will give a porosity which passes the water through it quickly and prevents any souring.

After repotting or rebenching, gardenias should have a close, moist atmosphere until established, after which air can be admitted freely. The temperature at night should not fall below 60 degrees, while for winter blooming 65 degrees is better.

If your plants are not doing well, why not start a fresh lot of cuttings now? If you have a propagating bench with a good bottom heat and can maintain a night temperature of 70 to 75 degrees, you can root them easily in a month. The cuttings must be kept saturated with water and well shaded. By starting now, you will have fine stock for flowering next winter and spring, either in pots or benches. It hardly pays to carry these plants over a second season.

MAIL ORDER ADVERTISING.

[A synopsis of a paper by Robert Pyle, of West Grove, read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, April 7, 1908.]

For our purpose tonight advertising may be said to be applied salesmanship, with the possibility of sales multiplied to the "nth" power. The first and indispensable thing for a mail order salesman to consider is his catalogue, or, primarily, a list of the things he has for sale with the prices thereof. But the successful catalogue man knows that bare lists and prices themselves will bring little business; therefore, he devotes time and earnest effort and spares no expense to arrange, amplify and beautify his catalogue. He will take care to have the plants properly classified, to have them carefully and accurately described, and also to include, if possible, directions for their culture, until it becomes a veritable encyclopedia of the things listed. He also engages the services of the best artists, will have his own photographic department or go where he can to get illustrations that will speak louder than words and make his catalogue to vie with the modern magazine in rare attractiveness.

In making up a catalogue we think it is always well to bear in mind the attitude of the men or the women who will read it. Amateurs, as a rule, want to know and are glad to be shown. Of course there are some women who will read a catalogue from cover to cover, no matter how long the descriptions; but the general tendency, and a good one, is to cut down these long descriptions and to insert in a clear, readable, well arranged manner only such things as would stand the test of actual usefulness and give an accurate picture of the thing the purchaser is asked to buy.

Cost of Catalogues.

Before leaving the subject we would like to call attention to the fact that the English florist of today is ahead of his American brother, as evidenced by the splendid specimens of catalogue making which are furnished patrons, not only as regards fine paper and beautiful illustrations, but the comprehensive textbook-like treatment of the subjects listed make them really delightfully entertaining in every way, and if the high prices which they seem able to get are any criterion we believe they must be good pieces of advertising.

We have here a sample of one of the English catalogues, nearly 400 pages—heavy plate paper, exquisitely executed color work—weight, two and a half pounds in the mails. They must cost more than $1 apiece.

The catalogues issued in our country average in price from 1 cent to 35 cents each in the mail-bag. There are a great many houses publishing about 100,000 books; very few approach the million per year edition. The number needed depends, of course, upon the number of regular customers, as we call those who order intermittently year after year, plus the number of new names that may be obtained in one way or another, so that right here comes the next point for the advertising man to consider in laying out his campaign: How many new names will he get?

Securing New Names.

The question which almost immediately follows is, how much money have you got to spend? This is more easily answered when some plan of operation has been arrived at. How to go about it to get new customers is a problem more fascinating than a game of chess, most uncertain as regards the outcome but often proving to bring rich rewards. How shall we reach the general public? To a man with a small place doing a local business that problem would be a comparatively simple one. He would probably put up a sign and make his place look as attractive as possible, using the local papers and sending out to his list of customers attractive bits of advertising literature at proper intervals. Of course, this is but a mere outline of what he might do. But our general catalogue man is catering to a scattered public with wonderfully diversified interests, living under multifarious conditions of climate and environment. He must catch their eye and gain their attention long enough to impress them.

One of the first things to consider, therefore, is what mediums he shall use, and the second thing is what kind of a proposition he will circulate through these mediums. It is much like sowing seed; good seed in poor ground is not much better than poor seed in good ground. Both must be good to form a successful combination. Let us, therefore, first consider the soil, or the mediums.

Papers and Results.

Judging from the way he spends his advertising appropriation, the average seed and plant advertiser has in the past plainly found it most profitable to use the magazines and some other periodicals, giving little attention to either bill-board, street car or other such forms of advertising. First in the list are the papers which hold for him somewhat the same place as the trade papers do for the wholesaler and the commission man. I refer to the garden magazines, with which you are all familiar. Next after this class we would name the women's publications. Of course there is a long list of important farm publications, with the Farm Journal a good leader, some of which will "win out" on certain propositions and "fall down" on others and this leads us to another very important matter, that of tracing results.

We understand that Burpee depends upon a certain proportion of the people answering his advertisements stating in what periodical they saw the advertisement, and in that way learns which ones pay best.

Where possible, we believe it pays to keep every advertisement and check the returns. We have a schedule showing the number of orders received, the cost per order, and cost per reply to a certain list of papers from a certain proposition for a certain period of years, and you can readily understand how helpful is this schedule in selecting mediums for future advertising.

How Much Space?

The next question perhaps will be, How much space shall we use? Does it pay to use a large space in a few mediums or a small space in a great many? Will it pay better to spend $4,000 for putting an advertisement on the back cover of the Ladies' Home Journal, for example, or to use the same amount of money in buying full page space in four of the leading monthly magazines? Of course, these are extreme cases, but the same principle applies, and it is no easy matter to decide questions of this kind. We believe it pays to take sufficient space to very certainly catch the attention of the woman who is not likely to be interested and to take that space in the magazines of good standing and large known circulation, and which you know reach the class of people for whom you are making a bid.

What Kind of Copy?

The question of copy is, perhaps, the most fascinating of all. We know of no easier way to waste money than to buy space and fill it but poorly. The first question to consider may be, will you advertise directly for orders or advertise for names? Or, in other words, get people to send for your catalogue, which can be depended upon to make the sales. Look through the advertising pages of any current magazine and we will find samples of every type. Temp-lin, for example, offers a beautiful lace fern free, tacking on the provision that 4 cents must be sent to pay cost of packing and postage. That 4 cents is a good foil to keep off mere curiosity-seekers. It appeals to the people who want much for little, but the advertisement is well handled and also ought to appeal to the very best names. An advertisement of this kind will undoubtedly get circulation for the catalogue.

Another type you are sure to note is that of making a definite offer of a collection or a novelty. There is some risk as to whether or not such offers will pull and this is the test for the man who writes the advertisement. Personally we have tried the free offer plan, and have secured thousands of names that have cost not more than a penny apiece, and we have tried the second plan above referred to and have got some orders to cost us not less than $4 apiece, but after we had counted up the cost of the catalogues sent on each particular proposition, and had considered the returns from all the sales made, there was little difference in the net result. Countless examples of this kind might be related, but all go to show that it is as important to consider the quality of the names thus secured as it is the cost to get them.

Display and Repetition.

There are a few things that may be worth mentioning in connection with display in advertising. Some artists or some advertisers seem to have the knack of getting up an advertisement that will stand out strongly on the page. Some years back white on black advertisements were much in evidence and still distinctive. You will remember the excellent advertising done by the greenhouse construction companies in the trade papers; what splendid taste is displayed, an attractive illustration, strong borders, white space and well selected and well arranged type and, best of all, good, straight from the shoulder talk.

There is a characteristic style in the clean appearance of Burpee's advertising, from which for the most part illustrations are eliminated, except in the way of their trade mark or their green label.

Advertisers have learned the value of repetition. "Water dropping day by day wears the hardest rock away." Repeated taps of the hammer will finally break the stone. There is a little ad that appears in the trade papers most pleasingly distinctive, and I dare say there is hardly a man in this room who is not perfectly familiar with the little label pictured in the firm name of the Leedle Floral Co. It is impossible for one to think of the advertisement of that firm without picturing in his mind the form of that little signature, which shines out boldly on the most crowded page.

A good trade mark can be hammered into the consciousness of the people you are trying to reach. With it, if it be strong enough, you can count upon gaining the attention of every passerby every time he comes along, and much oftener, and much more surely, than if your ad was dressed up in the common garb of ordinary type.

Testimonials.

Testimonials, it seems to us, are worthy of mention as being strong arguments in advertising. They are recovering from the violence done them by the patent medicine man. In the first place, they come from disinterested, at least unprejudiced persons, and in connection with catalogue work especially, if not with advertisements, they add conviction as to the pulling power of the thing advertised.

Just one more thought I wish to leave with you. When you advertise, be ready to "deliver the goods." Do not disappoint, or your advertising campaign might just as well not have been. Good stock, right prices, with prompt and courteous attention to customers, will win trade and create a confidence that will be hard to shake. This is by no means the least important.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A slight improvement in business is now apparent, but the usual pre-Easter boom is lacking this year. There will be no sensational advances in prices, which are evidently going to rule lower than for a number of years. Easter lilies are meeting with an active sale at 10 cents to 12½ cents per bud, against 12½ cents and 15 cents a year ago. More are sold at the lower than the higher figure. The quality of lilies is remarkably good, in spite of earlier reports of disease being rife. Roses show little change and promise to be in abundant supply. The same holds true of carnations. It looks at this time as if $4 per hundred would be top notch price on these for fancies. The quality is excellent and it seems too bad that prices continue so unremunerative.

Violets are stiffening somewhat, best doubles being 75 cents and some extra good singles $1. These latter being from coldframes, quite a good many smaller flowers are selling lower. Bulbous stock is still abundant, but selling a little better. Sweet peas are perhaps the most popular flower on the market at present and good flowers sell readily. The market is usually rather bare of flowers for some days before Easter. This is less apparent at present. Growers are wise in not holding back too much stock, preferring present moderate prices to a possible slump at the end of the week.

The demand for pot plants seems to be as large as ever, with prices averaging a little lower. Next to Easter lilies, azaleas seem most prominent. More pink ramblers, such as Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins, are seen than usual, these evidently having the preference over Crimson Rambler. Acacia paradoxa and Drummondii, spiræas, Dutch bulbous stock, hybrid roses, yellow and white marguerites, genistas, scarlet geraniums in pans, lily of the valley and forced shrubs in variety are mostly in evidence. Growers of these all report excellent sales.

The market was somewhat stronger Wednesday, April 15, with slight advances in prices.

The Chelsea Fire.

In the Chelsea fire April 12 two flower stores were destroyed, those of Mrs. Catherine Magee and B. B. Smalley. Ben reaches us every Saturday morning unless Uncle Sam gets out of whack, and when he does it's like the old lady who misses her coffee for breakfast. She said when she failed to have coffee for breakfast, there was something lacking all day, and when we fail to get the REVIEW (it's the only trade paper we subscribe for now, as it covers the ground) on Saturday, there is something lacking all day. Sunday Uncle Sam gives his carriers a day off, hence no REVIEW till Monday. Enclosed find the $1. Best wishes for the old reliable.

Caro, whose store is in Temple place, Boston, lost his residence, and so did Miss Winn, typewriter for Thomas J. Grey, the seedsman.

Club Field Day.

In spite of rather threatening weather there was a splendid delegation to Nahant April 11, the occasion being a visit of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club to Thomas Roland. The major portion of the party journeyed from Boston on the 12:30 express. Two special electric cars were in waiting to convey the party, numbering over 100 in all, to Nahant. Here Mr. Roland welcomed the delegation and proceeded to escort them at once through his large and splendidly kept establishment.

The first large house was filled with beautifully grown plants of Hiawatha and Crimson Rambler roses. Next in order was a house of hydrangeas in variety. A white variety, Jeanne d'Arc, was particularly noticeable. Its pure color makes it an ideal Easter plant. Lilies filled one large structure, a veritable sea of bloom, no traces of disease apparent, the best house of these it has been the privilege of the writer to see. The large azalea house was in splendid shape, a scene once seen not readily forgotten. The flowers almost entirely obscured the foliage. Following this came a wonderful house of Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins roses. The latter is evidently the favorite here, 1,000 plants of it being in flower to 400 of Lady Gay. Dorothy Perkins possessed the advantage of growing more compactly and flowering with great freedom while small; both, however, were grandly flowered.

One house was filled to overflowing with genistas, acacias and ericas in variety. Canterbury bells and a variety of miscellaneous plants were also noted in good shape. Bougainvillea Sanderiana had a house all to itself and no better specimens of this useful Easter plant can probably be found in America. Still another house was next visited filled with Crimson and Baby Ramblers, Dorothy Perkins and Lady Gay roses, all in excellent shape.

Apart from the magnificent lot of Easter stock, which is probably unexcelled in the country, there was noted a house of cyclamens in 3½-inch pots, many thousands of beautiful little plants crying for a little additional room, which they will soon have. Another house contained many thousands of Lorraine begonias in 2½-inch pots, also longing for a little more space and larger pots. Other houses were filled with ferns, bedding stock and miscellaneous decorative plants. The general opinion of the visitors was that no commercial establishment on the continent could show a higher grade of stock.

A large new house was filled with candytuft coming along all right for Memorial day. In the cold storage cellars were large quantities of azaleas and hydrangeas, which will be housed directly after Easter stock is out of the way and brought along for Memorial day. Like all up-to-date establishments, there are never any bare benches to be seen here. As fast as one crop is cleared, another takes its place.

After an inspection of the houses the company was treated to refreshments and after ample justice had been done to the same, President Westwood voiced the club's thanks to Mr. Roland for his courtesy and generous entertainment and extolled the high quality of the plants inspected. After photographs for the Lynn papers had been taken, the special cars were again boarded for Lynn and Boston was reached about 5 o'clock. The outing was the most successful yet held and was enjoyed by everyone. Among the visitors from outside the state were S. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I.; F. C. Green, Warwick, R. I., and T. McCarthy, Providence, R. I. Mrs. Peter Fisher and Mrs. William Sim were the only ladies present.

After leaving Nahant quite a number of the visitors journeyed to Cliftondale to see Mr. Sim's sweet peas, which were in magnificent crop and excited the wonder of all who were unaware of how well this gentleman can grow this popular flower.

Various Notes.

Wilfrid Wheeler was chosen at a meeting of the trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society April 11 to succeed the late W. H. Spooner as delegate from the society to the State Board of Agriculture. Eight new members were elected. A memorial on the death of W. H. Spooner was read and adopted.

Establishment of Davidson Floral Co., Holdrege, Neb.

Peirce Bros. are finding their new auto delivery wagon a great help at this busy season. It has made as much as 100 miles per day and has carried loads to Lowell, Worcester and other cities. Its capacity is 400 pots and it can do the work of four double-horse teams.

William Sim's talk on sweet pea culture under glass will be the chief attraction at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club April 21. There will be numerous exhibits and a record attendance for an April meeting is expected.

Some of the finest single violets now arriving at the markets are from Edward Winkler, of Wakefield; William Sim, William Spillsbury and A. W. Kidder.

Preparations for the spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1909 are already being made. It is planned to have this eclipse all its predecessors. A very unique feature will be a Japanese garden to be constructed and planted by Farquhar & Co.

Vernon T. Sherwood, formerly with W. W. Edgar & Co., is now with A. Leuthy & Co., Roslindale, as grower.

ON NEBRASKA'S PLAINS.

The rate at which the trade is growing in the great west is shown by the experience of the Davidson Floral Co., at Holdrege, Neb., whose establishment is pictured in the accompanying illustrations. It should be borne in mind that Holdrege is a town of only 5,000 inhabitants—a thousand families.

"We started July 1, 1906," says W. E. Davidson, "by putting up the house now used for roses, smilax, etc., together with a small office and a shed and boiler-room. But within five months of the time we started we found that business was so much ahead of our supply that we set about making plans for three more houses, one plant house, one carnation house and one violet house. These we completed June 1, 1907. Then again, last July, in order to take care of the continually increasing business, we set about to tear down the old office and erect a new one 22x32 feet."

The illustration of the exterior shows the office and store and a partial view of the greenhouses. It shows only the rose and violet houses; there is a carnation house 29x100, also a plant house 10x100, not in view, behind the store. The houses are all of modern type, Moninger construction, iron posts and supports, iron pipes and fittings for benches, heated with hot water.

The office and store are well built and conveniently arranged. Steel ceiling and walls are a feature, with hardwood floor and fixtures. In the basement there is a workroom, and the necessary facilities for storing stock. Store and greenhouses are lighted by electricity.

The officers of the company are: President, F. A. Davidson; secretary and treasurer, W. E. Davidson. H. R. Fisher is the active manager.

"Take it as a whole," says Mr. Davidson, "we have not a large plant, but we can say without boasting that we have as thoroughly modern and as well equipped a plant as can be found anywhere. Especially do we pride ourselves on the condition in which it is kept, for you will find everything from one end to the other in a perfectly orderly and cleanly condition. Under the management of Mr. Fisher we are growing as fine stock of the leading varieties as one can wish for. Especially is our carnation house a fine sight, with every plant doing its best. We are growing Enchantress, Lawson, Victory, Harlowarden, Queen Louise, Boston Market, also a few Winsor and Aristocrat."

THE DEATH ROLL.

F. P. Davis.

Franklin Pierce Davis, one of the most prominent men in Mobile, Ala., and widely known all over the state, died suddenly at his home in Summerville, a suburb, shortly after 3 o'clock on the afternoon of April 6, death being due to indigestion. His sudden end followed only two weeks after that of his brother, J. Bradford Davis.

Colonel Davis had suffered from indigestion frequently during the last year, but was never seriously ill from it. Sunday he felt slightly indisposed and called a doctor, who examined him with reassuring remarks. While his wife sat at his bedside, her hands on his forehead, the next afternoon, he suddenly fell back dead.

He was born in Mobile and for many years was manager of the Mobile Compress Co., later moving to Summerville, where he engaged in the florists' business. His range of glass was the largest in the city and one of the largest in the south.

He was twice married, his first wife being Corinne Cluis, daughter of a Mobilian, and to this union six children were born and survive him.

In 1894 he married Corinne Irwin, eldest daughter of Colonel Lee Irwin, and one child was born from this union, Lee Irwin Davis.

Mr. Kaber.

The death of Mr. Kaber, the senior partner in the Kaber Co., of La Porte, Ind., is reported.

Theodore E. Horn.

Theodore E. Horn, son of Julius and Anna W. Horn, died at Arlington Heights, Mass., April 11. He was 22 years of age. Julius Horn is the gardener on the well-known Shaw estate.

Ferdinand Bendt.

Ferdinand Bendt, of Newark, N. J., one of the old-time florists there, died April 11 of typhoid fever. His wife is ill with spinal meningitis and cannot long survive him.

THEY all read the REVIEW.

THE price of glass continues in favor of the greenhouse builder.

HAIL storms doing much damage to greenhouse glass occurred last week at Carthage, Mo., and Iola, Kan.

CORRESPONDENTS will please send Easter trade reports early. They must reach this office by the first mail April 22, to be in season for the issue of April 23; and after that issue Easter will be ancient history.

POSSIBLY the greatest evil in the flower business is that of lax credits. One may be narrowing his field if he gives credit to none save those legally "good," but regular if not prompt payments should be insisted upon.

So great has been the interest in the subject of hydrocyanic acid gas for fumigating greenhouses that the U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a second revised edition of its bulletin giving the results of its experiments.

THE florists who do much outdoor work, and at this time of year take on a number of extra men, say that help is much more plentiful than a year ago and that the number of applicants enables them to make a selection from those who have experience.

Department of Plant Registration.

The Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., make application to have the name of their rose previously registered as White Killarney changed to Mavourneen. Public notice is hereby given of this application and any persons objecting to this proposed change of name, or knowing of any reasons why the name should not be changed as above, are requested to forward a statement of their objections to the undersigned at once.

No objection being received within twenty days, a change in registry will be made. W. N. RUDD, Sec'y.

THE Belgian government has recognized the claims of horticulture as one of the leading branches of trade in that country. Well-known horticulturists have for some time strenuously worked for a board of horticulture, and their efforts are now rewarded. The board of agriculture will be reorganized, and a special department of horticulture formed. It is especially appropriate that this resolution should be passed by the Belgian government just on the eve of the great quinquennial exhibition at Ghent.

HOW TO PICK WINNERS.

The Chicago Tribune is publishing a series of articles on advertising that cover this important subject so fully, so clearly and so interestingly that they are being widely read. Here is one thought on how to pick the best paper:

You don't need a circulation statement. "The supreme test of the advertising value of a newspaper is—does it carry the bulk of the advertising? A newspaper which prints the most advertising, month after month, year after year, is always the best medium. This is true in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, as well as in Chicago."

The articles are by Herbert Kaufman and the Tribune says that as soon as the series is finished they will be printed in a booklet for general free distribution. Better get one.

ILLINOIS FLORISTS.

Appointments in State Association.

The following officers and committees have been appointed by President Albert T. Hey, of the State Florists' Association, since last meeting:

Vice-presidents—A. C. Brown, Springfield, to succeed August Poehlmann, term expired; E. W. Guy, Belleville, to succeed A. S. Halstead, term expired; A. R. Knowles, Bloomington, to succeed F. L. Washburn, treasurer-elect, who resigned.

Advisory committee to experiment station—J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, two years; W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, two years; C. D. Gallentine, Morrison, one year; F. J. Heintz, Jacksonville, one year; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, two years.

Membership committee—A. F. Lougren, Des Plaines, chairman; Frank A. Friedley, Springfield, and James B. O'Neill, Chicago.

J. F. AMMANN, Sec'y.

BREITMEYER FOR MAYOR.

Detroit friends of Philip H. Breitmeyer think he would make a good mayor. One of the local papers says: "Detroit's park and boulevard commissioner is the latest arrival among the republican possibilities for the mayoralty. He never held political office of any kind until he accepted his present one, but seems to be willing. He appears to have much strength among the reform element because of his declaration in favor of the enforcement of the liquor law, and also has thousands of supporters among the German societies, who are standing for personal liberty. He is an exceptionally successful florist, vice-president of the German-American bank, and forty-four years of age."

WINNIPEG, MAN.—The retail store of the Rosery Flower &amp; Seed Co., at 325 Portage avenue, has been purchased by A. K. Butchart.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week saw no especial change in the market; conditions were those which have prevailed for several weeks.

This week began with considerable increase in activity, but conditions are not those which usually prevail at the beginning of the week before Easter. While there is evidence that the growers are accumulating stock for the holiday, still there is an abundance of everything in the market and prices refuse to respond to the wholesalers' efforts to work them up a notch or two. There is so much material available that the buyers pass on whenever an advance is demanded. This condition hardly can prevail for many days, because the quality of stock is not all that could be desired, and as soon as Easter shipping gets under way, prices must of necessity advance on such stock as is in condition to stand a journey. The only thing that worries the wholesalers is the question of getting fair prices on that part of the supply that is a little off quality; there is too much of this grade.

Of Easter lilies, the beginning of the week saw abundant supplies. Nearly all of the wholesalers are offering them in pots, and in most houses there is a wide range of quality. The general report is that practically all the lilies are abundantly early; in fact, some have been with difficulty held back for the occasion. The great majority of the stock is short, so that it is anticipated the latter part of the week will see a good market for all really first-class lilies. At the same time it is figured there will be 8-cent lilies for those who want them.

Of roses and carnations there are now more in the market than is usual at the first of the week preceding Easter. The consensus of opinion is that there will be an abundant supply for all Easter requirements and that late orders can be taken care of in good shape and at prices which will leave the buyers a better opportunity than usual at Easter to make a satisfactory profit. Those carnation growers who have been storing stock need not anticipate a fortune for it. It will be remembered that last year, with less stock in the market previously and a stronger demand, there was a decided slump in the value of carnations the day before Easter. In this case the situation may be relieved by the disposition of the wholesalers to sell whenever opportunity presents; they are not hanging on to anything unless of the very best quality these days. The sun has taken the color out of the pink varieties of carnations. It was 75 degrees in the shade Tuesday, April 14.

The roses are of better average quality than the carnations. The Beauties are not so abundant as some houses thought they would be, and there is a big call for them on the advance orders. Maid and Bride are showing the effects of the spring-like weather, but plenty of good stock is still to be had. Richmond and Killarney are good. The latter is not in special demand for Easter, but Killarney is possibly the most popular rose of the week.

Mention The Review when you write.

The single violets are practically at an end, but there are enough Hudson river doubles, although the quality has been markedly affected by the approach of spring and their season is also nearly over.

Sweet peas still are abundant but sell well. Bulbous stock goes slowly. The outdoor jonquils and daffodils, if good, have the call on the market but are sold cheap. Outdoor bulb stock from southern Illinois is now arriving and lilac has been in the market for several days. That which is good sells fairly well.

The call for green stock has not shown any change and prices are steady.

Tuesday saw a good increase in business as compared with Monday, but Thursday and Friday are the big shipping days for Easter.

Easter Plants.

Easter plants are more abundant than usual, but it is so late that the bulb stock is not in such heavy supply as usual. Hardly any hyacinths are offered and not so many tulips as last year. There are more lilies in pots, also roses, spiræas, azaleas and hydrangeas.

Forty-third Street.

On Forty-third street, between Cottage Grove and the lake, there are three flower stores. John Pehrson is near the Illinois Central station. J. F. Kidwell & Bro. are a couple of blocks farther west, and Henry Klunder is in a new store at the northwest corner of Drexel boulevard and Forty-third street. Mr. Klunder has big show window facilities and makes a fine display. He says he is doing better there than he ever has done before in his life. Most of the south side retailers agree that, while February was a good month, March was dull, but that April started off well and the promise is for a first-class Easter.

Various Notes.

W. E. Lynch says there is a note of uncertainty as to Easter requirements in almost every letter from cut flower buyers. He says they all want stock, but are in doubt as to how much. Many buyers comment on the fact that the prospects for Easter are just about as the prospects were for Christmas a few days before that event; and everybody's Christmas was better than last year. Mr. Lynch says he looks for the greatest run of late telegraph orders this market has ever known.

A great many of the wholesalers are handling flowering plants this week. The E. F. Winterson Co. has fitted up a large part of the basement as a wholesale plant salesroom and has a big showing of stock.

The George Wittbold Co. denies a rumor which has been current in the market, to the effect that its North Clark street store is to be closed. It is stated that the company has no such intention. The report, doubtless, grew out of the fact that the North Clark street telephone is now operated through a private wire from the Buckingham place switch-board, the purpose being to receive and handle at the main store as many of the telephone orders as possible.

There was a quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, at the Art Institute April 14.

Albert Fuchs says that he will leave for Europe April 29, to fence at Frankfurt. He calls his apartment house, at Sheridan road and Clarendon avenue, The Chateau and sends acquaintances a souvenir postal card showing the horticultural embellishment of the property, which he says he recommends to other real estate men.

Last Saturday found W. J. Smyth in cheerful mood; it had been a good week, with good prospects for Easter, and he has bought a larger stock than ever before.

There was a meeting of the trustees of the Florists' Club at the Union restaurant, Tuesday, April 14, to consider financial matters in which the club is interested.

Henry Wehrman, who is one of E. C. Amling's carnation shippers, says that with all the Maywood establishments the stock is growing at a remarkable rate and that heavy cuts of fine carnations will be on for the socially active season after Easter.

The Hubert Bulb Co., of Portsmouth, Va., has been shipping large quantities of outdoor narcissi to this market, and much of the stock has been exceptionally good.

Mrs. Beu, at the Flower Growers' market, has been offering Brunner roses for several days, probably the only ones of this variety in the market. They sell readily and the best brought 15 cents, April 13.

C. M. Dickinson, at E. H. Hunt's, states that they secured control of Anton Then's crop of lilies April 11.

Lawrence Becker's coal-sheds and boiler-house were destroyed by fire Saturday night, April 11.

Louis Winkleman, who handles the Beauties in the wholesale store of Bassett & Washburn, has the sympathy of the boys in the market because of the death of his father April 11, at the age of 75 years. Bassett & Washburn sent a handsome spray to the funeral April 14.

Weiland & Risch are using a cash register and have ordered a new machine which will do almost everything except voice an opinion of the customers who do not pay as promptly as they might.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Bassett reached home April 12, after a sojourn of several months in the vicinity of Pasadena, Cal. Mr. Bassett says he has seen no spot in Egypt or along the northern shore of the Mediterranean that would suit him as well as Pasadena for a winter residence and he intends to make a longer stay next season.

Carl N. Thomas came all the way from West Springfield, Pa., to take a hand in the Easter rush at Randall's. He will return to the farm by April 20.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the mail orders for fertilizers are coming along at a rate considerably in advance of last year.

C. W. McKellar says his grower advises him that there will be a good crop of cattleyas on soon now, just in time for the spring weddings.

Wieter Bros. say that they ran their carnation houses practically without shading until April 12, but the sun that day was so strong they had to put shade on for such sorts as Lawson. There were sixteen days in March on which the sun did not shine and rose crops have not come on as fast as expected.

Kennicott Bros. Co. says the shipping business at the opening of the week was much more active than the local trade.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports having shipped quite a number of lily plants in the last week. The possibilities of doing business in this market are shown by the fact that heavy lilies in pots have been expressed both to Texas and Minnesota.

Miss Eaton and Charles Balluff have been in New York buying stock.

Al Marine, of Wittbold's Clark street store, is going to Denver, to enter the employ of the Park Floral Co.

A. Siegel, of St. Louis, was a visitor April 14. He says the prospects in his town are for a good Easter.

Andrew McAdams has returned from Florida and has plunged into the Easter rush with renewed vigor.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is still a little "lingering in the lap" on the part of winter. It was a chilly week and the cut flower market was at its lowest ebb, but on Saturday, April 11, the tide turned and by the time this issue reaches its readers it will be at the flood. As the week opens, the prospects for a successful Easter are most encouraging. Nurserymen are simply overwhelmed with orders. Catalogue trade is far ahead of expectations and perfect weather only is needed to insure a record business for the next few days.

In the wholesale market no one can more than predict, a week ahead, what will be the prices of roses, carnations, violets, etc. There will be great abundance of everything and all flowers are at their best. There will be no demand for pickled stock and no excuse for it.

The lilies for Easter, the good ones, all sold at 12 cents. There are none too many of this class. The short-stemmed ones and the second grade went at 10 cents and the cut ones for the department stores held firm at 8 cents. These big stores in both cities, after all, have been the great educators of the people and have made flower buyers of the multitude, with their reasonable prices and enormous sales. Without them and the foreign street merchants, where would the wholesale market and the growers be? Now the auctions are doing the same for the nursery business and soon through the daily auction of bedding and flowering plants by the Fruit Auction Co., on Franklin street, a revolution in the growing business will be accomplished. Every fruit store will have plants for sale. Every street will have its daily plant distributor, or peddler, and so the educative process will go on amid this constantly increasing population and better times for every department of floriculture will be assured. Every Tuesday and Friday at Cleary's and Elliott's the big stores are crowded with purchasing suburbanites. As one of the big nurserymen at Rutherford expressed it, "The people are crazy for nursery products." Many a time have I written that business here is only in its swaddling clothes. There is no limit to its possibilities. Now we will see what Easter itself has to say about it.

Club Meeting.

April 13 the Florists' Club returned to the old rooms in the Grand Opera House building and the meeting was a hummer. Nearly eighty were present and all were delighted.

The exhibits were Jahn's Crimson and Lloyd (white) carnations, which arrived in unsatisfactory condition for judgment and received a vote of thanks. A vase of Mrs. Jardine from Robert Scott & Son, already judged, received the club's thanks. From John Cook, of Baltimore, a dark pink rose, No. 1267, received 85 points, and My Maryland 83 points, and the thanks of the club. A plant of Newport Fairy, from Julius Roehrs Co., received a certificate of merit. Cherokee rose and a new hardy pink, unnamed, by W. A. Manda, of South Orange, earned a hearty vote of thanks. By Anton Schultheis a new rose, single, cerise, sport of Crimson Rambler, discovered by Charles Lenker, of Freeport, who is jointly interested with Mr. Schultheis in its dissemination, received a preliminary certificate. A vase of Richmond grown by Robert Schultz, of Madison, was shown in grand condition and earned a vote of thanks.

W. F. Sheridan, reporting for the house committee, gave credit to Mr. Young, the secretary, for the change of location to the new rooms. The other members of the committee, Messrs. Traendly and Allen, participated in the vote of thanks awarded. The outing and transportation committees reported progress. The resolutions committee suggested a letter of appreciation to the U. S. Department of Agriculture for its efforts in behalf of floriculture and for the lecture on soils by Prof. Corbett at the club's last meeting. This was unanimously approved. Mr. Marshall gave an interesting report concerning the bowling club and at a special meeting held later in the evening it was decided to make the change of alleys to the famous Thum rooms on Broadway and Thirty-first street.

Myers & Samtman reported Wyndmoor rose off crop, which accounts for no exhibit of it as intended.

Will Rickards, chairman of the house committee, spoke in behalf of a ladies' night and it was decided that the whole evening of Wednesday, May 27, be devoted to their entertainment.

Messrs. Schreiner and Cathcart were elected to membership and Messrs. Lentz, of New York; Badgley, of Chatham; S. H. Smith, Charles M. Lynn and Anton Schultheis, Jr., were nominated. The resignation of Peter De Voy, of Poughkeepsie, and Peter Fisher, of Boston, were accepted with much regret.

Harry May announced the death of Miss Dean, daughter of James Dean, of Freeport, L. I., and a committee to draw up resolutions, with Mr. May as chairman, was appointed by the chair.

Mr. Weathered spoke of the announcements in the daily papers of the big shipments of lilies from Bermuda and the low prices these indicated and appointed

Mr. Totty and another as a press committee to give reliable information to the Associated Press. Messrs. Totty, Marshall, Traendly and Lenker failed to detect any injury to the trade from such advertisements and the committee afterwards reported that it had been decided unwise to approach the daily press on the subject.

To compete for the Traendly transportation prizes, it was decided that no one is eligible for the honor who is not a member of the S. A. F. Mr. Traendly made an interesting address on his visit to Niagara with the executive committee. He told of the fine rooms at the International hotel there, where meetings, exhibits and existence could all be enjoyed under one roof. He spoke of the national flower show, the great work of the committee of fifty and the cooperation of European exhibitors in making it the grandest flower show the world has ever seen.

Robert Simpson, president of the Rose Society, spoke of the many strong features of the rose show in Chicago. Of weak features of the show, he said, there were too many roses of three varieties and too few Brides, Maids and the old favorites. Too much sameness, he declared, and for a successful exhibition more than one variety of flower is needed and the show would have been improved a hundred per cent thereby. W. A. Manda had the same complaint of sameness to make in his address, there being no relief to the monotony. He commended heartily the enthusiastic preparation being made by the Chicago people for the great exhibition in November.

John Young told of his trip to the Falls and Chicago, and of ex-Mayor Cutler's courtesy to the executive committee of the S. A. F.

Altogether this was one of the best meetings the club has ever enjoyed.

Various Notes.

A beautiful exhibition of flowering plants was on parade last week at the big glass area of the Julius Roehrs Co., at Rutherford. Just because distribution had not begun, about everything was sold and tagged and ready for this strenuous week. The most striking lots were the azaleas, the lilies, the ramblers, including the now famous Newport Fairy, the hawthorns, the snowballs and lilacs and, of course, the orchids. There is a forest of bay trees. Harry Gould is now traveling for this company.

Bobbink & Atkins have now 150 acres of nursery and 150 employees. "Impossible to keep pace with the orders," Mr. Atkins tells me, and everything there indicates it.

Peter Crowe had the time of his life here last week, with the growers and auctions and theaters and bowling. There was not anything he missed on his annual visit.

Hiram T. Jones, of Elizabeth, has appointed Myer, of Madison avenue, his New York representative. Myer has a big store on Fifty-ninth street for his Easter overflow.

Another wholesaler has come to town. Last Tuesday at 9 p. m. Joseph J. Levy, Jr., arrived.

It is interesting to note the space devoted now in all the large daily newspapers to Easter and its floral art, and these criticisms and descriptions grow more human and interesting as the space-writers learn to be accurate and sensible.

Many beautiful floral pieces were seen last week at the funeral of Langdon Smith; one of the greatest of newspaper men in this country. The most beautiful was a wreath by Weir with the motto, "And what man shall say we shall not live again?"

Among the distinguished visitors in New York last week was the enthusiastic lady who presides over the destinies of the Eaton Flower Shop, Chicago, accompanied by Charles M. Balloff, who is here selecting stock for the Easter trade.

David S. Adams, of Thorburn's force the last eight years, and for twelve years with the Peter Henderson Co., has just recovered from a four weeks' tussle with scarlet fever.

There have been meetings of carnationists and rosarians during the last few weeks, about which yet hovers an atmosphere of mystery. After Easter the enigma will be solved, doubtless.

Ford Bros. have some grand daisy plants in 10-inch and 12-inch pots, in full flower, grown by McMillan & Sons, of Hudson Heights, N. J., and lilies and large pans of hyacinths from E. J. Taylor, of Southport, L. I.

Millang Bros. have secured the big store above their present headquarters and have a grand display of Easter plants.

Horace Froment is handling the azaleas, rambler roses and lilies grown by the Hinode Florist Co., of Whitestone.

John Young has John Scott's lilies, ferns and gardenias in pots and Leach Bros.' geranium stock.

Bowling.

In an effort to acquire proficiency it has been determined to secure more perfect alleys for practice and the Thum alleys on Broadway and Thirtieth streets will probably be the scene of conflict next Friday. Last week the two games for the Traendly transportation resulted as follows:

Among the creditors are: Mrs. Robert Stafford, $1,635; George Schlegel, $1,098; John I. Raynor, $575; A. J. Guttman, $531; Julius Roehrs Co., $460, and Walter F. Sheridan, $349. The business was started many years ago by her husband, who died in February, 1903, and she has carried it on since. The bankruptcy is attributed to trade going farther uptown and inability to collect accounts.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There was nothing of special note going on last week. Among several of the leading retailers quite a bit of funeral work was made up, but outside of this not much was going on in the cut flower line, though blooming plants were selling well. As to Easter stock at the wholesale houses, it is difficult at this writing to say how stock is going to be or how good trade is going to be. The prospects are, though, that lilies will be in plenty, both in cut flowers and plants. In made up plants, styles will not vary much from those of last year.

Last week the wholesalers experienced a lot of trouble in disposing of their consignments, which were large, while the demand was slow. In fact, everything in season was in the market in full supply. The rush this week will not begin till near the end of the week and they are looking for light shipments until that time. They believe there will be plenty to fill all orders that are booked.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held Thursday afternoon, April 9. The meeting was not so well attended as usual, owing to most of the members being busy at this time of the year. The meeting opened promptly at 2 o'clock, with fourteen members present and with President Young in the chair. After the different committees had reported, the club's trustees were instructed to make preparations for the club's annual outing, with most members in favor of a steamboat trip down the river. The trustees are to bring in a full report at the May meeting of the club. Quite a list of delinquent members was read. Owing to the small attendance, a number of important discussions were laid over until the May meeting.

During a discussion on Easter lilies, it was learned that among longiflorums thirty per cent were diseased. All other Easter stock was in good shape, only that some will be too far advanced, owing to the lateness of Easter this year. A number of other questions were also discussed, which made the meeting interesting.

The next meeting will take place Thursday afternoon, May 14, at 2 o'clock, in the new meeting hall, 1023 Locust street.

Various Notes.

The following suburban florists were in town last week: J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; H. Johann, Collinsville, Ill.; E. W. Guy, A. S. Halstead and Henry Emunds, Belleville, Ill.; Edwin Denker, St. Charles, Mo.; W. J. Pilcher and F. Vennemann, Kirkwood, Mo.; John Connon, Webster Groves, Mo. Most of the above attended the Florists' Club meeting Thursday afternoon.

Andrew Meyer, Jr., city forester, made his annual report to the board of public improvements last week, as follows: 6,915 street trees had been planted during the year, under the supervision of his department, against 2,293 for the preceding year. There were also 1,782 permits issued to trim trees. The department trimmed on its own account 1,465 and cut down 68 during the month of March, on account of decay. The department so far has done a great deal of good to the city and all the assistants under the forester have had a busy season.

A. S. Halstead, president of the St. Clair Floral Co., reports plans for a large show house at his place in Belleville. The company also contemplates building three more new houses this summer, and when these are completed they will have over 50,000 feet of glass. They also have a number of new geraniums which give great promise.

well-known bulb salesman, through the REVIEW (as he reads no other, so Frank says), that he has his candidum lilies in bloom and ready for Easter. The new hat should be sent by express in time for church Easter morning.

The various florists who have show houses have already attractive Easter plant shows in their windows. Mrs. Ayers, Geo. Waldbart, F. C. Weber, J. F. Windt, F. H. Weber and Kalisch & Sons are filled up with all kinds of Easter stock. C. Young & Sons Co. are displaying a fine window of lilies this week. All of these report every indication of an active Easter trade in both plants and cut flowers, with a great many advance orders on hand and most of their plants labeled "sold."

J. J. B.

The beginning of a $500,000 undertaking, including the construction of seven large buildings on the Missouri Botanical Garden property and the establishment of the finest herbarium in the world, was announced by the trustees of the Shaw estate April 11. The plan has been developing for two years, but crystallized April 8, when the trustees voted to devote the surplus income each year to the project. The first step in the project was the breaking of ground for a $50,000 addition to the old Shaw mansion, on Tower Grove avenue. This building will be added to from time to time by other structures, each connected to the other by arcades. The seven structures will form three sides of a quadrangle. The fourth side will be formed by the present superintendent's house, office buildings and shrubbery.

plant business has quite overshadowed cut flowers for the time being.

There is no particular demand for any variety of cut flowers, although business is fair. Southern daffodils appear to be waning, the shipments being much lighter during the last few days. Brunners have made their appearance, and are quite an addition to the rose list. Snapdragon is fine, some fancy long-stemmed stock being equal to anything seen here this season. Violets are so nearly over that some of the wholesalers will not push them, believing that they are not good value, while others will make both Hightstown and Hudson river stock a feature of their business.

Easter Prospects.

Indications on the eve of the Easter rush point to an immense supply of both plants and cut flowers, probably the largest in the history of this city. Dividing the plants broadly into four classes, specials, extra, medium and ordinary, as we do with American Beauties, there is a moderate supply of really magnificent stock, belonging in the first class. This is practically all sold, as is also the case with most of the second or extra grade. Of the medium and ordinary stock, in which we may class those plants that are too far developed, as well as those that show only ordinary culture, there is an immense stock, with but small probability that even the street will be able to consume them all by Sunday.

The immense quantity of cut flowers now in sight makes fancy prices improbable. There will not be enough really fine long-stemmed cut lilies, but of medium and short there will be an abundant supply. Choice colored carnations will probably be about equal to the demand, while white carnations and ordinary grades in all colors are likely to be in excess of requirements. Of other flowers, there will be no scarcity.

With the Retailers.

There are three retailers in this city who deserve the thanks of all those interested in the cut flower business for their efforts to assist the market during the Lenten dullness. They are H. H. Battles, Robert Kift and John C. Gracey.

Mr. Battles' special sales at the Century Flower Shop have been looked forward to, by wholesalers and consumers alike, with keen interest each Saturday. His plan is to select a certain variety of flower and offer it in quantity at an attractive price. The profit to the store is quite as large as in ordinary sales, the purchase in quantity enabling the buyer to secure a special rate. The effect on the market is excellent, the demand for this particular variety being stimulated to an extent that enables the wholesalers to realize better prices in consequence.

Robert Kift has for some time been making up and advertising dainty boxes of really choice blooms in variety—a few Enchantress, some pink roses, a few sprays of valley, with perhaps some scarlet carnations or daffodils, laid the other way in the box to avoid a clash of color; a bunch of pansies and a spray of adiantum finishing off handsomely. Mr. Kift stated that by judicious buying these boxes, which seemed to his customers a bargain, had cost him 54 cents each.

Mr. Gracey has been advertising most attractively special offers of a like nature in the daily papers.

Mr. Farenwald's Talk.

A. Farenwald, of Roslyn, was called upon at the April meeting of the Florists' Club to describe his visit to Chicago. Mr. Farenwald spoke of the exhibition and the various sights of interest that he had seen during his short sojourn in the west. He dwelt especially on the magnificent range of glass owned and operated by Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove. Its size, the quality of its stock and the substitution of machinery wherever possible for hand labor filled him with admiration. To see a place operated on such a large scale where there was absolutely no waste space and where every detail, no matter how small, was carried out with clock-like precision, seemed wonderful. To hear that this place planned a little addition of 500,000 square feet of glass added to his amazement. No fear of overproduction there! Just think of it—a little addition of 500,000 square feet of glass to one place only. Mr. Farenwald said that Philadelphia had done well in the exhibition, but that he came back much wiser and feeling just so high—whereat he put his hand a little above his knee.

In past seasons he has frequently arranged with the daily papers for short paragraphs describing to their readers how desirable flowers are when secured from him because of their freshness and general good qualities. This season he is distributing a morocco-covered booklet under the title of "Shopping List," with his name and address beneath. The opening page is as follows:

"We take pleasure in sending you this helpful little book for your personal use. Accept it as a slight token of our appreciation of your patronage. Our endeavor will be, as in the past, to give entire satisfaction in filling all orders."

The inner covers are devoted to the calendars of the present and coming year.

Fifty-fifth and Springfield Ave.

William K. Harris, William K. Harris, Jr., Mark B. Mills, William Mills, Edward Linwood and their associates received an immense throng of visitors on Palm Sunday. Several policemen were required to keep the crowd moving. The feature of this display was the large quantity of well-grown stock in the seven staple kinds of plants: Lilies, azaleas, genistas, rhododendrons, spiræas, ramblers and hydrangeas. The feature of this display was the high quality and long stems of some of the lilies, the specimen azaleas and those planted three in a 10-inch pot, and the coloring of the hydrangeas to an Alice blue. Other stock grown in smaller quantities is bougainvilleas and the variegated sport of the same variety that originated here; Deutzia gracilis and the Baby Ramblers grown for two years to insure good size. The stock is rapidly being depleted to fill orders.

The Overbrook Nurseries.

J. W. Prince, in charge of Edward A. Stroud's Overbrook Nurseries, is justly proud of the fine condition of his lilies and hydrangeas. He has a number of varieties of Easter plants rarely seen elsewhere. They include a choice assortment of gloxinias well covered with bloom, the soft pink Lupinus polyphyllus Moerheimi, a beautiful thing, and Weigela Eva Harte, with its crimson flowers, making a desirable plant for those who wish to add to their outdoor shrubbery after Easter. A choice assortment of geranium novelties, it is found, attracts business.

Various Notes.

Jacob Becker has a splendidly grown lot of pot roses, including Jacqueminot, Killarney, Magna Charta, American Beauty, and Frau Karl Druschki.

Griffin Bros., of Frankford, have a finely grown lot of azaleas and lilies.

Harry Berger, of Berger Bros., visited the Beauty growing district at Wyndmoor a few days ago. He reports most of the plants in fine condition, the crop a little off.

John Haubert, of Bala, Pa., has opened several stores throughout the city for the disposal of his Easter stock.

The Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., report that the present season so far is the best in its history.

Walter P. Stokes has practically cleared up his entire batch of hydrangeas, including the immense specimens with forty flowers each.

William J. Young, Jr., has a finely grown lot of lilies and other Easter plants.

W. E. McKissick has secured the entire second floor above his salesroom for storage purposes this week. He believes that lilies require room, and means to give it to them.

Howard L. Courtney, for many years a bulwark of the Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., has been obliged to give up work for the present, owing to ill health.

M. Rice & Co. report a large number of out-of-town buyers in the city recently. The firm's business from October 1 to the present time is twelve per cent ahead of last season.

Charles Wintzer, son of Antoine Wintzer, of West Grove, Pa., has married and moved to North Carolina.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., returned home April 11, tired but happy.

The street asserts that His Grace of York and Job were seen walking arm in arm on Chestnut street.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The cut flower trade showed some improvement last week and the commission men were able to clean up better than for some time. There is much speculation at this time regarding Easter, and while all are making the usual preparations, they are somewhat afraid that the times may affect the trade.

The retail men look as active as in any other year and are all busy getting plants in shape. From the quantities of blooming plants in sight, one would wonder where there was room for the cut flowers.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting April 7, in the store-room of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., and it was one of the most enthusiastic meetings of the year. There were about sixty members present and, while the plant display was worthy of a more pretentious name than a "regular meeting show," it was nothing in comparison with the enthusiasm shown by the various members in discussing plants during the evening.

The regular business having received due attention, Ed Reineman—acting as chairman in the absence of President Fred Burki, who was ill—called for remarks for the good of the club, when J. H. Myers, of Altoona, Pa., after some complimentary remarks, called attention to the new spiraea, Queen Alexandra, which he is growing this year and is just getting into bloom. Mr. Myers thought it would be a good thing. There were some who were not so sure, believing it would get white as the flowers matured. And then the price, $25 per hundred for very small clumps, put

Don't Forget:—

That bench of slow-moving stock can be promptly turned into Cash (it comes with the order), if offered in the Classified Department of the REVIEW. It costs only 10 cents a line.

it out of the question for commercial men to make much profit in handling it, as it would take about three plants to make a good pot.

The subject of lilies was then taken up and the bulb growers were criticised severely for their careless way of sending out lily bulbs, sometimes having a dozen varieties in one lot and selling them as something select. However, after several had spoken of their failures through receiving poor bulbs, T. Malbranc, of Johnstown, Pa., took the floor and, after saying he was only a green Dutchman, proceeded to tell them that he had only grown lilies five years, having taken them up because he saw a profitable crop in sight. He has had no failures up to this time and he believes that many of the growers are responsible for their failures and that much of the stock is spoiled with the hose. His loss this year is six plants out of 2,000. He pots his bulbs, plunges them under the carnation benches, covers them with cinders and gives about two waterings. When they are ready for the bench they come up and are kept cool until ready to force. Then they are kept going until they are in bloom, always using water sparingly. His crop this year is giganteum. The stock, started in 4-inch pots and moved up, grew larger than bulbs started in 6-inch pots.

W. A. Clarke, the only representative at the American Rose Society show, told what he saw there, mentioning the fine stock shown and expressing some astonishment that there was not more enthusiasm shown by the general public.

The exhibitors were as follows:

Kaeb V. Oullainen, gardener for R. H. Boggs, showed Salpiglossia Empress, a plant which, when grown as those exhibited, would make a good addition to Easter blooming plants, and Mr. Oullainen thought it might be grown profitably by commercial plantmen.

Vegetable Forcing.

It is important that vegetable plants, such as lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower and celery, have roots in good numbers when the time comes for transferring them to the open ground, and it is questionable if plants capable of being lifted with good balls of soil filled with roots are not preferable to larger plants deficient in root formation.

JOHN J. DAVIS, assistant to the state entomologist of Illinois, will devote several months to an investigation of the insects infesting the market gardens in the Chicago district, both the pests under glass and those which cause trouble in the field. He will be pleased to hear from any grower who has troubles of this class. Address the State Entomologist at Urbana, Ill., who will promptly forward to Mr. Davis.

RED SPIDER ON LETTUCE.

I enclose samples of bugs that are eating the lettuce in my greenhouse. Tobacco smoke does not affect them and I do not know what to do. Will you kindly let me know what to do for them, as the case is urgent? Will you also give me the formula for making hydrocyanic acid gas?
H. L.

The insects enclosed in the box on the lettuce leaf were red spider. Fumigating does not affect them. Syringing the plants hard from underneath the foliage with water will check them, and even rid the house of them more quickly than any other way. They are easily kept down by use of the hose.

The complete formula and directions for the use of hydrocyanic acid gas were published in the REVIEW last October, in an article begun in the issue of October 24, page 48, and continued in the issue of October 31.
H. G.

STERILIZING LETTUCE SOIL.

E. A. Dunbar, of Ashtabula, O., gives the following account of his method of sterilizing soil for lettuce:

"The word 'sterilize' with us stands for steam cooking. After several years of experiments we have adopted the following plan: We use a 150 horse-power boiler at sixty to seventy pounds' pressure and carry the steam in a 2-inch pipe to the ground to be sterilized. Our beds are 13½x140. One-fourth of a bed, or 7x70 feet, is cooked at one 'set' for forty-five minutes. Across one end of this space is placed a 2-inch header, from which lead out six 1½-inch pipes, seventy feet long and about one foot apart. Each pipe is connected to the header by means of a Kewanee union. These pipes have ½-inch holes drilled one foot apart, their entire length, and the end of each pipe is bushed and closed with a ½-inch globe valve.

"Now, to begin operations, throw off the surface dirt and place the header properly; then dig a trench along the side of the bed from the end of the header, deep enough so that when one of the pipes is placed therein and connected to the header and the dirt put back, it will be three or four inches under the surface; place the other five pipes in a similar manner, being sure that the ½-inch holes all point down. Now cover with heavy sheeting or light duck, to keep in any escaping steam. Put two lines with a valve in each; connect one line with the header by a few feet of steam hose. By having two sets of headers and pipes, while this space is being cooked, four men can place and connect up the pipe in another space, so that the steam is shifted from one space to another with no lost time. The amount of space to be sterilized at one time will depend on the size of boiler. The above treatment, thoroughly applied, will rid the ground of all disease germs and weed seeds, and apparently unlocks plant food in the soil; which acts as a great stimulant to the following crop."

PORTLAND, ME.

Niles Nelson, of Portland, Me., had a narrow escape when his boiler-house was burned recently. Almost the entire stock was spoiled and the houses were replanted with Queen Alexandra, which will be fine for Memorial day, and with antirrhinums, which sell all the time.

J. W. Minnett, of Portland, has grand roses in the new house, 33x150 feet, and will add another house, 45x150 feet and 19 feet to the ridge, to be planted with Killarney, which has not yet been grown so far east. White Killarney will be a grand acquisition, as Kaiserin is well done here.

L. C. Goddard, at Woodfords, Portland, has built a very convenient office, with a regular cold storage plant in the rear. This improvement was found necessary in order to accommodate an increasing business and to enable him to carry bigger stocks. M.

CADILLAC, MICH.—A. W. Tweedie has sold his greenhouse property to Mrs. D. F. Diggins, who will use it to furnish flowers for the Mercy hospital.

There was never a dull moment until Mr. Reineman called for a motion to adjourn at 10:45 p. m.

Various Notes.

T. P. Langhans, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., fell into the elevator shaft of Breitenstein & Flemm's new store and, while he is badly shaken up, is very thankful he was not killed.

Breitenstein & Flemm have got the glass in their new store and have opened for business and, while their place is not very attractive at present, they are doing business.

Phipps Conservatories, at Schenley park, have their Easter show ready and open to the public and it reflects much credit on Superintendent Burke and his foreman, John Jones. There are lilies, azaleas, primulas and bulb stock of all kinds arranged with ferns and all sorts of decorative plants. Thousands of visitors are expected next Sunday, rain or shine.

George A. McWilliams has opened a store in Tarentum, Pa., for Easter.

H. C. Frick, H. J. Heiuz and A. R. Peacock will open their conservatories to the public for the next two weeks. The trade are under some obligations to these gentlemen for the part they take in educating the public. Hoo-Hoo.

HOOPESTON, ILL.—Peterson & Lawrence say they are enjoying a good business, although the weather has been a little against them.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—Charles Limmer has leased the store at 328 State street, and will take possession there May 1. After making considerable improvements at the new location, he will remove his business to it.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—Henry Dietrich, an employee of F. Walker & Co., was arrested April 1 on a charge of drunkenness and was removed a few hours later to the City hospital, where he died the following day.

Geraniums

We have a fine lot of strong plants in 2-in. pots ready to shift into 4-in. These are all from top cuttings and will make splendid stock for bedding if handled at once. The varieties are Marvel, M. de Castellane, A. Ricard, J. Viaud, Castries, Ctsse. de Harcourt. $2.50 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

B. & S. Shasta Daisy

This strain has been worked up by us from divisions of the original stock and must not be confounded with the seedling stock offered by catalogue men. It is so much finer that there is really no comparison. One of the finest and most profitable summer blooming plants we have. Strong divisions established in 3 in. pots, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

We still have some fine cuttings of the "May" Carnation at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. You are going to grow this variety sooner or later, so why not get it at once?

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., O. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-sixth annual convention at Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25, 1908.

GEORGE E. BAKER, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, is ill and in the local hospital.

THE market gardeners' strains of radish have been in strong request in the last few weeks.

THE market gardeners in the Chicago district have an organization with nearly 2,000 members.

THE agricultural appropriation bill, with the usual free seeds paragraph, is now in committee of the senate.

A LARGER acreage of onion seed will be grown in the central west in 1908 than ever before, if reports have it correctly.

THE bean growers are out after acres for the 1908 crop. The general impression seems to be that much less land will be planted to garden beans this year than usual.

SEEDSMEN all will be interested in the address on advertising, by Robert Pyle, of the Conard & Jones Co., delivered before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia and printed on page 10 of this issue of the REVIEW.

JUST at present it may look as though the seed houses are overloaded with valley pips, but a man of long experience says that, between sales and losses, good valley pips will be valuable property before new valley is in next fall.

THE Pre-Historic corn introduced as a novelty in 1898 by J. A. Everett, of Indianapolis, is being tested by a jury in the Criminal Court building, Chicago, this week. Mr. Everett hopes that it may be found innocent of having done the farmer any harm.

THE planting of seeds for the onion set crops is well under way at Louisville, and at Chicago some seed has gone in this week. The usual date for beginning planting at Chicago is April 10, but, while this has been a normal year as regards temperature, the land has been too wet for operations to begin as early as they might otherwise have done. If the seed is all in May 1, it is in season.

TRADE in all lines of the seed business is reported to be steady. In general the spring has been more normal than for some years back. As a consequence there has not been the see-sawing that prevailed last year. In some instances the lack of an extra rush for some of the staples has been construed as indicating a less than normal demand, but a careful canvass of the situation shows that the sales are fully up to the average, with a good way yet to go and no freakish conditions to upset calculations.

THE wholesalers report a heavy fill-in trade this spring.

SOME onions for seed were planted near Chicago last week.

THE government crop report, issued April 8, shows the condition of winter wheat to have been 91.3, as against 89.9 April 1, 1907, and a ten-year average of 86.2. The condition of rye was slightly below that of this date last year, but almost exactly the ten-year average.

CONSIDER THE MANN BILL.

In response to the call of the president of the American Seed Trade Association, a meeting of seedsmen was held at the Auditorium Annex hotel, Chicago, April 10. The Mann pure seed bill was the subject under discussion.

It was the sense of the meeting that important changes in the bill are needed to avoid great injustice to seedsmen and serious damage to important agricultural interests. A committee representing this meeting and the Seed Trade Association will be sent to Washington to attend a hearing before the Committee of Interstate and Foreign Commerce April 21. It is hoped that amendments to the bill may be secured which will avoid injury to legitimate seed business.

The members of the committee thus far appointed are: J. C. Vaughan and Chas. Dickinson, Chicago; Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.

Among those present at the Chicago meeting were:

- Allan, J. H., of J. H. Allan Seed Co., Sheboygan, Wis.
- Barnard, W. W., of W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago.
- Brown, Alfred J., of A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.
- Burt, N. J., of N. J. Burt & Co., Burlington, Ia.
- Bowen, Lem W., of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit.
- Boyles, Charles, of Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago.

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $14,380.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF SEED.

Prices versus Quality.

The "pure seed" bill now before congress, a bill to stop the adulteration and mislabeling of seeds, is looked upon by everyone of experience in the handling of seeds as too exacting, as a bill which, in its present form, would work a hardship to the seed trade; which view is correct if the Department of Agriculture, to which is referred the making of uniform rules and regulations, is impractical in the drafting of such regulations, but the Secretary of Agriculture, under the authority given him to formulate rules, can so frame the rules as to make them practical.

The government cannot provide against the selling of a poor quality seed at a correspondingly low price, or even at an outrageously high price, for that is a matter entirely between the buyer and the seller; but the government can step in and prevent the selling of unvital seeds and seeds mixed with other seeds, which it is obvious were not harvested in the same field at the same time.

Ample Room for Reform.

There is ample room for the adoption of practical rules and regulations, which may be not only a benefit to the entire agricultural public, but to every seedsman who is disposed to be honest, and the writer, for one, is ready to let the Secretary of Agriculture do what he can to correct many things in the seed trade, which sadly needs regulation. Of course, within the Department of Agriculture are the only people, in the employ of the government, capable of dealing with this subject, as for congress to attempt to deal with it would be like setting a bull in a china shop.

The necessity for government control is brought about by the course of the seedsmen themselves. Intense competition between wholesale seed merchants doing a general seed business and large on the other hand, to be willing to stand the reduction of many pounds or bushels to the acre because of taking out the rogues, or wild plants, which plants generally are by far the most productive of the whole crop.

This depreciation of quality in many brands of seeds is noticed in any well managed trial ground, where it is manifest that seeds sold at extremely low prices have been sold even then higher than is their true value. This depreciation in quality applies to nearly everything sold at extremely low prices, which cheap prices in the very beginning indicate a questionable origin of the stock.

Demoralizing Competition.

Often this depreciation is laid at the doors of the country storekeepers, but it really is chargeable to a great degree to larger seed sellers striving to get orders at any price. As these cheap prices seem to demonstrate to the country storekeeper that many seed houses and seed contractors have no bottom whatever to their prices, the storekeeper is convinced that even at these low prices he is asked more than he should pay; he thinks the seedsman is, after all, a robber, and he places the order with the cheapest house.

To be able to sell cheaply, stocks must be obtained from any low-cost source, and the result is a continuous depreciation in quality. The country shopkeeper, drummed almost to the point of distraction, finally selects his garden vegetable seeds or agricultural seeds of the lowest-priced sorts, and certainly gets a grade in accordance with the prices.

But lowest prices are not demanded by market gardeners who purchase their seeds with the one idea of making a profit from the results of their crops, men who realize the necessity of reliable stocks and, therefore, are anxious to purchase from a source of reputation and are ready to pay a price which gives some assurance of quality. Market gardeners fight shy of cheap seeds, knowing that the very price condemns them; but the country merchant wants his seeds to be as cheap as any sold by a competitor across the street or around the corner.

The Logical Result.

The logical result can only be just what has occurred in other branches of trade: There will be two or three grades of seed, just as there are two or three grades of candy—every girl knows that; and two or three grades of drugs, as every observant man knows, for it is well known that physicians recommend their patients to avoid certain drug stores because the proprietors are known never to purchase anything but the cheapest drugs. And just so will it be with seeds, for some dealers in seeds purchase anything; with them seeds are just seeds.

But, thanks to the technical intelligence, self-respect and high ideals of many wholesale seed merchants and many seed-growing contractors, there has been in the past and yet is more active than ever, a constant effort toward the improvement of species, for it is manifest that all the varieties of vegetables which can be mentioned as notable objects of deterioration in the hands of careless men, have at the same time vastly improved in the hands of a few who prefer an honorable reputation to shoddy dollars.

In the past the writer has been inclined often to be incensed against what he considered the masterful ways of the Department of Agriculture, but he is changing his opinion, for the work in the Seed Division, if properly regulated, may be on similar lines to the work of Dr. Wiley as respects foods and their adulterations, and everyone freely admits that the genial doctor has in two or

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER—Grown as a Standard

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free-blooming qualities, etc. 35c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

Mme. Norbert Levavasseur (Baby Rambler).

Strong, field-grown plants: $1.25 for 10; $12.00 per 100.

Catherine Seimeth. A very important novelty. A white Baby Rambler rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. It has the true rose perfume in a high degree. 45c each; $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100; extra strong, 60c each; $6.00 per doz.; $45.00 per 100.

Anny Muller. The pink Baby Rambler, and bound to find favor where the Baby Ramblers are popular. 45c each; $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Mrs. Wm. H. Cutbush. A grand acquisition to the Baby Rambler class. Color intense crimson, and exceptionally free-flowing. 25c each; $1.00 for 5; $18.00 per 100.

Baby Dorothy. The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flowers is similar to Dorothy Perkins. This variety has created quite a sensation when exhibited at the English National Rose Society's and other shows. "Baby Dorothy," when planted out, flowers perpetually from spring until autumn. It makes an excellent pot plant for forcing. Price for strong, field-grown plants, 50c each; $2.00 for bundle of 5; $35.00 per 100.

HYBRID TEA, or EVERBLOOMING ROSES

Hybrid Tea, or Everblooming Roses, are becoming more popular every year. As hardy as the perpetuals, with slight protection in winter, they give a wealth of bloom all through the summer months and late in the fall till frost checks them.

The Grand New Rose Lyon. Originated by the raiser of Etolle de France. Perpetual flowering. Vigorous grower. The blooms are very large with broad petals, full and globular in form; shrimp-pink at the ends of the petals, center coral-red or salmon-pink shaded with chrome-yellow. Very fragrant. $1.25 each; $6.00 for bundle of 5; $12.00 for 10.

The Killarney Rose. This is a grand rose for either indoor or outdoor cultivation; is a strong grower, and the blooms, which are of a beautiful pink, are borne in great profusion. Strong, 2-year-old field-grown stock, 25c each; $1.00 for bundle of 5; $18.00 per 100.

Maman Cochet Roses. The best of all Roses for summer flowering and cutting.

Pink—Color a clear, rich pink changing to silvery rose; very double and fragrant.

White—A sport from the above, with all its characteristics; color a beautiful snow-white, at times tinted with the faintest suggestion of blush, the same as is often found in the Bride. 25c each; 75c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100.

Rose, Etolle de France. Flower large, possessing petals of very good substance; magnificent cupped form. Superb crimson-red velvet, the center of the bloom vivid cerise-red. The flowers are very fragrant and last very long. The Queen of the Everblooming Red Roses. The most free-blooming and vigorous Red Rose ever introduced. Strong, 2-year-old plants, field-grown, 25c each; $1.00 for bundle of 5; $18.00 per 100.

Gruss an Teplitz. No Rose in commerce can compare with Gruss an Teplitz as a bedder. It is a perfect sheet of richest crimson-scarlet all summer. A strong, vigorous grower. Hardy. 20c each; $1.50 for 10; $12.00 for 100.

POPULAR HYBRID TEA ROSES

American Beauty, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Clothilde Souper, Caroline Testout, Hermosa. 20c each; 75c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100.

RAMBLER ROSES

Dorothy Perkins. Resembles the Crimson Rambler, except in color, which is a lovely shell-pink. 15c ea; 65c for 5; $12.00 per 100.

Crimson Rambler Rose. American-grown. We can supply extra-strong, 2-year-old plants, grown on their own roots, at the following prices: 3 to 4 ft., 15c each; 65c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100; 4 to 5 ft. long, 20c each; $1.00 for 5; $15.00 per 100; 4 to 6 ft. long, 25c each; $1.15 for 5; $18.00 per 100.

sciences should support investigations which will bear on the unscrupulous.

The agricultural public can properly demand a safeguarding of their interests against the selling of such seeds as are without doubt a fraud, and these impositions cannot be guarded against if too great a laxity of law is permitted to prevail. The writer would like to see the law so framed that there could be no fraud in the seed business, any more than in an apothecary shop, either by a man ignorant of the nature of the business, or by a rogue.

The seed business is one of confidence; a purchaser is entirely in the hands of the seller—very different from the case of a purchase of a pair of shoes or a hat, where the purchaser can there and then judge the quality of the completed article.

BURNET LANDRETH.

THE MAINE SEED LAW.

In view of the national pure seed law now before congress, it is of interest to note that as far back as 1897 the legislature of Maine enacted a law regulating the sale of agricultural seeds. It worked an immediate improvement in the character of the seeds sold in the state, but it did not provide for an inspection and as time passed the moral effect of the law to some extent and with some dealers grew less. To remedy this, the legislature of 1905 passed an additional section, calling for an inspection somewhat similar in requirements to that of the laws regulating the sale of commercial fertilizers, foods and feeding stuffs. Every lot of seeds sold, or exposed for sale, must be accompanied by a written or printed guarantee of the percentage of purity.

In 1907 the Agricultural Experiment Station at Orono made a large number of tests which, in general, showed that the grass seeds sold were of good quality, although in quite a number of instances, seeds were sold under a guarantee much too high. It developed in most instances that these seeds were bought from wholesale dealers in Maine and were sold by the retailer under the guarantees printed or stenciled on the bags as received from the wholesale dealer. As the seeds were, so far as it was possible to ascertain, bought and sold by the retailer in good faith, to the officials in charge it did not seem right to prosecute him. On turning to the wholesale dealer, who should have been the responsible party, it was not practicable to trace the goods to him. That is, it was not practicable to prove that the sample drawn at the store of the retailer was from a particular lot furnished by a wholesale dealer. While it would have been a simple matter to prosecute the retail dealer, it was not so easy to press the case against the wholesale dealer.

In January, at the invitation of the director of the Experiment Station, representatives of the wholesale houses he believed to have violated the law met at his office and the whole matter was gone over. As it seemed that by the amicable arrangement then made, and the clearer understanding of the law on the part of the wholesalers, the future would be safeguarded, all cases for 1907 were dropped.

The director makes this comment: "This is to be said as to the position of the wholesale dealer in Maine. He cannot anywhere buy seeds under a guaranty and he must by law guarantee the seeds he sells. This is a good deal of hardship. It is offset, however, by the fact that the Maine retailer cannot, so far as the writer knows, buy guaranteed seeds of any wholesale dealer outside of Maine and on this account the Maine wholesale dealer is in condition because of his guaranteed seeds to command the trade of Maine retailers."

The law will be much more strictly enforced in 1908 than in the past.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE Exotic Nurseries, Santa Barbara, Cal., which are developing rapidly, have added two city blocks to their nurseries, for growing palms and all kinds of selected ornamental plants.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

While trade may be called quite satisfactory, yet there is not the rush of two weeks ago and we are planning and laying up reserve force for the great Easter event. The market is well supplied with good stock and among the store attractions are a fine lot of flowering plants, which do not command as high a figure as they should. A cold and cloudy spell came just in time to help check the oversupply of cut flowers, and also proved a stimulant to the rose planting industry.

Various Notes.

In company with a new arrival from Chicago, I visited the greenhouses and nursery of Clark Bros. one afternoon, where we were able to form an idea of the enormous business done this spring in hardy roses and other small nursery stock. Favorable weather all through March enabled them to dispose of more stock than in any one month since they established this branch. They were fairly swamped with out-of-town orders, the returns from a neatly illustrated catalogue. In the retail store this firm is making a window display of that grand rose, Frau Karl Druschki, pot-grown. This is advertising a good thing in the proper way.

I am glad to announce that James Forbes is active among us again, and associated with his former partner, Mr. Martin. By mutual consent Martin & Forbes dissolved partnership a little over a year ago and Mr. Forbes took a well-earned rest and visited his home in Scotland. The business has been incorporated and is conducted under the name of the Martin & Forbes Co. Mr. Forbes has charge of the retail end of the business. H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

An unprecedented warm spell has brought an avalanche of everything except business to the town florists. Flowers are in such abundant supply that prices, even on the eve of Easter, have fallen away below the usual figures at this time. Carnations, especially the light colored varieties, can be had at almost anything offered, and from present indications there will be but little advance within the next few weeks.

Smilax is scarce, however, and in good demand. In quality it is well advanced in seed, but this is not considered detrimental as long as it is of good color.

Violets are almost out of season; the stems are becoming thin and the blooms weak and flabby. We have seen practically no double violets at all this season and apparently the retailers can get along without them.

Bulbous stock, with the exception of late daffodils and a few late tulips, is in the same condition. Indoor stock, such as valley and Easter lilies, is in good supply. Of the former we will have a heavy crop for Easter, and of the latter, although there were apparently not as many planted this year as before, there will be enough to go around. They cost the retailers from $2 to $3 per dozen stalks.

Green goods of all kinds move well and are being used largely among the shopkeepers for window decorations.

Bride and Maid are in oversupply and can be had at low prices. Beauties continue to be scarce and any really good stock is quickly bought up. Funeral trade seems to be about the only live thing in Lent, although the shipments of flowers to the country dealers seem to be about as heavy this year as they were last season. Every one is hoping that with the arrival of Easter there will be a revival of trade and that business will make an effort to keep up with the pace set by the flower buyers last year.

Various Notes.

The Ferry Floral Co. has moved to the new quarters and has one of the most attractive places in the ferry depot. A present to each purchaser was made on their opening day, a small potted fern, and several thousands were disposed of during the day.

Thomas and William Cox, late of the Cox Seed Co., have started the Cox Investment Co., with offices in the Phelan building.

George D. Barry will take an eastern trip during next month. He will visit New York, Chicago and Philadelphia and will not return before June 1.

The Sievers Floral Co. reports several large decorations on hand in honor of the visit of the fleet in May.

Thorsted & Co., of Fruitvale, have purchased another acre of land adjoining their present location and will probably erect several new carnation houses during the coming summer.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society will give its annual floral exhibition next month in Lyric hall. A full list of prizes will be given, both for amateurs and professionals. G.

NEW ORLEANS.

The weather seems so far not to have been very favorable to the rooting of chrysanthemums and there is a complaint among some growers of the shortage of cuttings. No doubt it is time enough yet to have them in condition to plant.

Home-grown flowers are abundant. Longiflorum, in almost every garden in the city, will be plentiful in a few days. They are stronger and healthier than any Easter lily imported at high prices and raised under glass with more care and expense. Owing to several mild winters in succession, ricinus are growing to

CHASSELL, MICH.

The Lakeside Floral Co. last fall doubled the capacity of its Chassell greenhouses, and now has one of the largest establishments of the kind in Michigan. The new greenhouses cover approximately an acre of ground, located on a hillside, where the sun is given every opportunity to aid in the rapid growth of the flowers. Houses covering 100x200 feet are devoted exclusively to carnations, while other houses, comprising 50x200 feet, are used for roses. On either side of the greenhouses are the propagating houses.

In addition to the roses and carnations, the company grows at its Chassell establishment many of its lilies, violets and some potted plants. The care of the flowers rests with Harry Lutey, a brother of A. E. Lutey, the manager of the Lakeside Floral Co., and he is ably assisted by Alfred York, for a number of years a prominent Houghton county florist. Mr. York is especially in charge of the carnation house, and under his direction good progress at propagating and growing new varieties has resulted.

Readers of the REVIEW are already aware that in addition to the newly enlarged plant at Chassell, the Lakeside Floral Co. has greenhouses in Calumet, where most of its pot plants, chrysanthemums and other species of cut flowers are grown. Its main offices are located in Houghton, with a branch in Calumet and agencies scattered throughout the copper country and at many other points in the upper peninsula.

EDWARDSVILLE, ILL. — J. F. Ammann has taken over the retail flower business of Mrs. Albert Dietschy, at Alton, Ill., the purchase including the property, store and residence. Mrs. Dietschy will manage the store for him. This is an old established business. Mr. and Mrs. Dietschy will make an extended visit east this summer and take a needed rest.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-Pres., O. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June 10 to 12, 1908.

CALYCANTHUS FLORIDUS is a species forming a small, compact bush four to six feet high, with deep blue flowers which appear early in the spring and last well into the summer.

THERE are two popular forms of golden bell, one an upright form, Forsythia viridissima, and the other drooping, Forsythia suspensa. The plants are perfectly hardy and will adapt themselves to almost any kind of soil.

THE shell bark hickory is probably more widely distributed than any other edible native nut. It has been a long time in securing the recognition it merits, but its value is now appreciated since the supply of native trees has been so largely exhausted.

MANY florists who have land and who sell at retail, doing garden work, are planting nurseries of hardy stock this spring, not the least of the advantages being that orders may be taken in summer and planting be done in the fall, when other outdoor work is not pressing.

THE nurserymen's convention at Milwaukee June 10 to 12 will be held at the Plankinton house, the same as in 1902. No special railroad rates will be obtainable, for in many states the regular 2 cents a mile is the same as the fare and a third was under the old order of things.

THE queen of Holland recently visited the nurseries of Boskoop and, like a good American politician, spoke pleasantly of the things she saw—whereupon the nurserymen at once set the correspondence clerks at work to notify the press and public all over the world that "Her Majesty was specially interested in the firm's collection of rhododendrons in bloom, particularly the new seedlings of large flowering varieties," or something to that effect.

As AN investment, nut culture seems to be exempt to a great extent from some of the ills attending ordinary industrial stocks. The production of nuts never exceeds the demand; the business does not have the fixed charges for insurance, wear and tear of machinery, strikes or lockouts so common in other lines. Besides, thus far the only fluctuation in value of nut properties has been upwards, as orchards increase steadily in value for about twenty-five years.

THE nurserymen of the middle west are enjoying a more nearly normal season than any in recent years. Planting began as early as ever, and there have been no hot spells to start growth too soon, so that work has proceeded steadily without the great rush that came with the early heat that started growth last year. The results at the end of the season, now not far distant in the southern part and only fairly begun in the most northern states, promise to be perfectly satisfactory all around. The farmers are planting more than ever of fruit and ornamental trees and shrubs, and the wealthy are prosecuting their landscape work as much as in any previous season.

STEPHEN HOYT'S SONS CO., New Canaan, CONN.

THE general report from southern nurserymen is that the cutting short of the season, by the ahead-of-time arrival of summer, had the effect of reducing the season's sales to a point below last year's business.

NURSERYMEN will all be interested in the address on mail order advertising, by Robert Pyle, of the Conard & Jones Co., delivered before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia and published on page 10 of this issue of the REVIEW

A FEW years ago the large, thin-shelled nuts were eagerly sought for propagating purposes. Now the tendency is to find nuts of medium size, with plump kernels, that are produced by trees which bear regularly and abundantly.

WANT STOCK TRUE TO NAME.

At their meeting, at Oklahoma City April 4, the Oklahoma Fruit Growers' Association passed resolutions asking that the legislature provide laws for the proper regulation of nurseries in Oklahoma.

"Heretofore fruit growers in Oklahoma have lost a lot of good money on trees that were not true to name," said C. A. McNabb. "We want laws enacted so that when a man buys nursery stock in Oklahoma he will know positively what he is getting."

The new officers of the association are: President, C. G. Jones, of Oklahoma City; vice-president, R. L. Peebly, of Oklahoma City; secretary, Ed. E. Blake,

THE SUGAR MAPLE.

More than fifty years ago, says T. C. Thurlow, of West Newbury, Mass., we decided that the sugar maple was the best street and shade tree for this section of the country, and we are still of that opinion. It is a clean, healthy tree, freer from insects than most other trees, and it will adapt itself to almost any soil, damp or dry; in fact, on sandy plains or cold, rocky pastures it will grow and flourish better than any other native tree. Many a worn out pasture or hillside in New England could be planted at a profit with sugar maples for sugar making. We have trees on our place, not over twenty years planted, which produced four or five gallons of sap to a tree last year. We have raised these trees in former years by the thousand and sold them into all the towns and cities in this section of the state, also into southern New Hampshire and Maine.

We have several times shipped them by the carload into New York state and have never yet had any complaint of sugar maples.

The Norway maple is a fine street tree, more desirable for planting near the seashore, also farther south, especially below Washington, where it is preferred to the sugar maple.

THE SOUTHERN NURSERY CO.

The Southern Nursery Co., Nashville, Tenn., was organized in 1872. Its capital and surplus now amount to $75,000, and it owns and has in cultivation 800 acres of land, employing 125 people. They travel, also, more than 100 men, and in addition make wholesale shipments throughout the United States. The Hon. Nathan W. Hale, president of the company, has been for a number of years congressman from the second congressional district, a man successful in public and in business life and a big property owner. J. H. Camp, of Knoxville, is vice-president of the company and also operates large coal mining interests in East Tennessee. E. W. Chattin is secretary and treasurer. E. H. Dudley and Gilbert Marshall are also connected as officers.

GRAFTING CLEMATIS.

The most suitable stock for propagating by grafting the many beautiful hybrids and varieties of clematis is C. vitalba, it being superior for this purpose to C. flammula, which was largely used formerly.

To secure the stock plants, seeds should be sown in the spring, and the roots may be grafted the following season, but it is better to transplant the seedlings at the end of the first year, in order to obtain stronger plants. If they are used when they are one year old the entire seedling is required as a stock, whereas in the second year many suitable pieces of roots can be severed from each plant, and the latter can be again planted so as to form new roots for the following year, but the Gardeners' Chronicle says it is advisable to discard the plants after their third or fourth year.

News from the Agricultural College.

The department of floriculture is arranging for a carnation and rose exhibit to be held in Wilder hall, Friday evening, April 24, and Saturday, April 25. It is felt that the students at the college should receive a better training in varieties of commercial crops than they can get from materials now grown in the vicinity. The students feel that they cannot afford to travel for this study. Therefore this exhibit has been arranged. Professor E. A. White has tick; J. W. Adams & Co., Springfield; H. W. Field, Northampton; Peirce Bros., Waltham; William Sim, Cliftondale; F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown; S. J. Goddard, Framingham; H. H. Rogers. This exhibit will be open to students and townspeople and should have considerable educational value. The college will pay express charges if any others care to send exhibits.

The trustees of the college are asking for a legislative appropriation of $34,000 for a new range of greenhouses of modern commercial type, with an attached teaching building for use of the floricultural department. It is not the intention of the college to engage in commercial floriculture, but a new range, adapted to giving the students up-to-date instruction in methods of growing cut flowers for the trade, is badly needed. It is expected to build an instruction building costing about $15,000. This will contain a large laboratory and workroom to accommodate at least fifty men at one time, a classroom for 100 men, smaller classrooms, office, and a room for the exhibition of material used in greenhouse construction. The basement will contain a soil and fertilizer room, a cool room for bulbs, and rooms for storage of pots and implements.

The greenhouse range as now planned will consist of a palm house 30x40 on the east end of the general workroom. From the south side of this workroom a house 12x180 will run directly south. This will be used for propagation and for general plants. On the east and west sides of this low, narrow house the special houses of the range will be built. This will provide for a full southern exposure for each house. The range as planned includes a students' house for special student work, 30x50, violet house 24x50, chrysanthemum and bedding-plant house 24x50, lettuce house 24x50. These will be even-span houses. The range will also include a rose house 24x50, a carnation house, cucumber house and tomato house, each of the same dimensions. These will be three-quarter-span houses. This range will be built as durably as possible, with iron frame and cement foundation and benches.

NEW ROSE

MRS. JARDINE

Every Florist who Plants a Rose for Winter Forcing wants at least Six Qualities

A FREE, STRONG GROWTH, WITH GOOD FOLIAGE. A VARIETY THAT CAN BE EASILY GROWN. LARGE FLOWERS ON LONG STEMS. DELICIOUS FRAGRANCE. DISTINCT, PLEASING COLOR THAT WILL SELL AT SIGHT. A ROSE THAT WILL HOLD ITS COLOR IN THE DULL DAYS OF DECEMBER AND JANUARY.

MRS. JARDINE has all these characteristics, and, in addition, is of so perfect a form that it can be used either in the bud or half expanded flower. The color is a bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink, and, even in January, when Bridesmaids and Killarney lose their color, Mrs. Jardine is as bright as in October or March.

We extend a cordial invitation to everyone interested in this New Rose to visit our Nurseries and see it growing.

MRS. JARDINE has been awarded Two Silver Medals, numerous Certificates, and successfully stood the best test which any novelty can possibly have in passing unanimously, in December, the Award Committee of the New York Florists' Club after an exhaustive examination of the growing plants, with a score of 92 points.

Strong Plants on own roots, from 2½-inch pots, $6.00 per doz.; $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000; 5000 for $1125.00; 10,000 for $2125.00.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

Trade has been a little quiet for the last week or so, but enough is doing to satisfy everybody, especially when Easter is so close upon us. Every one looks for heavy business for Easter and all are making great preparations for the rush. There will be loads of bulbous stock. Roses will be in good supply, while carnations may be a little scarce. There will be plenty of azaleas, spiræas, rambler roses, hydrangeas, etc. The outlook promises a good demand, with prices below last year.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club had no meeting since last report, as we meet on the second and fourth Tuesdays, and March had five Tuesdays. The dance has been postponed to May 4, as a majority said it came too close to Easter. The bowlers have lost some of their enthusiasm, owing to the Easter rush. The club appointed a committee to look into the street fakers, but so far it seems nothing can be done, as they are in doorways, etc., and pay rent, so it looks as though they are here to stay a while.

G. H. Woodrow, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., has returned from Magnetic Springs, where he went for a bad case of stomach trouble, but is on deck again.

Mr. Gibson, of the Livingston Seed Co., is back at his post.

Mr. Dudley, of Parkersburg, W. Va., was a visitor last week. J. M.

SMITH'S Mum Manual sent by the REVIEW for 40 cents.

WINDSOR, ONT.—C. R. Tuson was the victim recently of a clever swindler, who not only fleeced him for $5, but humiliated him by having him deliver funeral flowers to a house where the inmates were all enjoying robust health. The stranger sobbed out an order for the flowers, to be worked into a design with the word "Sister." In payment he tendered a check for $12.20. Mr. Tuson never dreamed of being swindled by a heart-broken brother, and handed over $5 in change, later delivering the order to a surprised family. The swindler crossed to Detroit, dried his eyes and attempted to victimize another florist on the same game, but was detected and arrested, as related by the REVIEW's Detroit correspondent in the issue of April 9.

CARNATION CUTTINGS

We are in unusually good position to supply exceptionally well-rooted, healthy stock. We have such a large quantity of flowering plants that we propagate only from heel cuttings from flowering shoots. Our cuttings are rooted in light, sunny, airy houses, and we are sure will satisfy the most critical buyer.

A prominent carnation grower writes: "You seem to be the only firm in the business that knows how to pack stock and have it reach the buyer in good condition, and I have always found your cuttings cheaper than the same varieties from others at much lower figures."

While our prices may not always be the cheapest, we certainly can give, quality considered, as good value as, if not better than, is obtainable anywhere.

We offer also BEACON and RED CHIEF, from sand, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. From soil, $7.50 per 100; $60.00 per 1000. Also VICTORY, MELODY, WHITE PERFECTION, from sand, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. From soil, $6.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000. VARIEGATED LAWSON, WHITE LAWSON and RED LAWSON, from sand, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000. From soil, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000. We can also supply WINONA and AFTERGLOW, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Buyers will find transplanted stock offered from soil well worth the difference in price.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Everything is in readiness for the Easter rush and never before was the town equipped with such an elegant display of stock. All are well supplied and we hope the demand will equal the supply.

The hybrid rose stock seems to be the leading factor with all greenhouses. The stock is first-class and should sell at sight. Hydrangeas are none too plentiful, except at Schwerdt & Berner's place. This plant has always been a mainstay at this place and the result is a superb stock.

Cut stock is now showing the effect of the Easter hold-back. We no doubt will experience the same condition with pickled stock as we have heretofore. The greenhouse man reaps the benefit, while the store man suffers the loss.

Various Notes.

Harold Markham, who for the last year has been running a small store, has added two more stores to his list, both on the same order as his former one. The new stores, however, are to be used as Easter branches only. Some cause or other has led other firms to open Easter branches, for it is reported several small places are to open up for the week.

The J. H. Rebstock Co. will run the flower department in the Sweeney Co. dry goods store all this week.

The monthly meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club was held April 7, in the club rooms. The officers for the ensuing year presided for the first time, with good success. The meeting was well attended. President Sandiford appointed committees on essays, on entertainment, on sports and on auditing, for the coming year. A membership committee was also appointed, the president adding three new names to the committee now acting. The club is still growing, three new names being added at the meeting.

The weekly meeting for bowling was held last Monday night, as usual. The affair is now being attended by what we term the regulars and each meeting improves the scores. After Easter the committee will arrange for team bowling and make a series for the different teams.

ENCLOSED you will find $1, for which please send me the REVIEW for another year. I find it to be the best paper for the trade, either in buying or selling.—W. H. CATANESE, Norristown, Pa.

NEPHROLEPIS AMERPOHLII

PHILADELPHIA LACE FERN

$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

(5% off, cash with order)

These are good, strong plants that were potted November and December last.

We need the room and must move them.

Also a fine lot of 6½-inch pots at 75c each, 25 or more at 70c each.

This is the most talked about fern of the lot and has been awarded a great many honors, including a medal by the Royal Horticultural Society of London, and the "Kift Cup," by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, for the most meritorious new plant introduced in 1907.

Equally as good as green for cut flowers or pot culture.

The stock here offered is in superb condition.

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

Largest assortment of desirable varieties. Plants of proper size to give best immediate results. For complete list of varieties see our current wholesale list. :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: ::

Many planters not thoroughly familiar with this class of plants have an idea that nothing but a large, field-grown clump will give satisfactory returns for the season. This, as experience has taught us, is in most instances a mistake. A vigorous plant of proper size will, in nearly every case, give quicker and better returns than the best so-called "field clumps" that can be procured. It will be noticed that the majority of the stock offered in this list is described as being 3, 4 or 5-inch pots. This does not necessarily mean that the plants have been altogether pot-grown, but that they have been field-grown and dug and potted up during the Fall and early Winter months, and such stock can be planted, even late in the Spring, with practically no loss, which, in the case of clumps, is often quite serious.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business did not hold out quite as well as was expected last week; yet it was better than for several weeks before. It cannot be said that the demand was any better, but there was not nearly so much stock coming in, and so the wholesale houses were not so badly loaded up. Carnations were cleaned up fairly well every day, but the demand was not heavy enough to cause the price to rise much. It averaged better than for some time, though. Roses continued in heavy supply and the price was about as low as it ever gets. The greater portion of them sold at job lot prices. Bulbous flowers were not so plentiful and sold better. Lilies were in fair demand and the price held up well. Violets from the east are still in this market and are of good quality.

Notwithstanding that many in the trade are predicting a poor Easter this year, I believe that they are going to be agreeably disappointed. Advance orders are coming in well, and though some of them have been trimmed a little, there is no reason to be alarmed at that. From all indications, I cannot help thinking that every one in the trade will have occasion to be well satisfied with the business this Easter.

Various Notes.

George Magrie was laid up for several days last week, but is now able to be about again and in a few days will be as good as ever.

J. T. Conger has purchased a barn and is now engaged in moving it to its new location at the rear of his residence.

Miss A. Cronan is giving her store an overhauling and spring cleaning. It will be finished in plenty of time for the Easter rush.

L. F. Benson has returned from his trip through the southwest and will remain here till after Easter. He then expects to return to Oklahoma City, where he will probably engage in business. He has secured an option on a farm in that locality and may try farming for a while.

Huntsman & Co. are trying newspaper advertising to attract trade to their store. They hold a special advertised sale every Saturday and say that it pays them well.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

F. G. Danforth, of Skowhegan, Me., notes an increasing demand from far-off points for flowers. Even from the lumbering camps come orders for funeral designs. He has fifteen hundred boxes planted with asters and tomatoes, which fill the space vacated by violets thrown out as soon as this flower becomes common. A house 30x200 feet will be built this spring, possibly for roses, as Beauties with stems five feet in length are not a rarity here.

Mitchell & Co., of Waterville, Me., have their handsome store fixed up for Easter. There is nothing to excel it in the state. Their delivery wagon is a gem and a fine ad. Funeral work has been heavy of late and called for some large pieces.

Adam Sekenger, of Bangor, Me., was almost too busy to talk at the time of my visit. A big shipping business is done, which taxes the resources of the entire force at times. Easter stock, especially roses, is in excellent shape. Heavy orders for funeral work have kept business up to last year's mark. Miss Sekenger is the artist and receives many compliments for her work.

Mrs. T. Allen, of Bangor, carries on the snug business established by her husband forty years ago and is ably assisted by her son and daughter. The whole plant has been remodeled and made up-to-date.

Buckley & Preble, of Bangor, have succeeded F. J. Moses, who still has his branch at Bar Harbor. They find the combination of drugs, cigars and flowers works well.

The Mount Hope Floral Co., of Bangor, is in extremis, having been absorbed by the New Floral Co.

Our pioneer fellow craftsman, Albert Dirwanger, of Portland, Me., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his side partner, who for forty years assisted him in the business.

C. L. Howe, of Dover, N. H., says business has been good and prospects for Easter are encouraging. His stock was never in better shape.

William T. Walke, of Salem, Mass., has a fine batch of lilies in shape for Easter and expects to clean out early.

I LIKE the REVIEW best of all; it is very interesting and instructive.—LUDWIG ZIMMER, St. Louis, Mo.

—1908—

ROSEA GIGANTEA. This beautiful variety has extra large flowers, which are borne in such abundance that the mass of color on each plant is amazing. Single petals are 2½ inches across; color, a deep, rich rose, almost a coral carmine. Plants make a vigorous growth, producing unusually fine clumps of green foliage. Height, 4 feet. (A great favorite with visitors to our trial grounds.) Strong plants, $2.00 each, prepaid; $18.00 per doz. by express, not prepaid.

CLADIO-FLORA. Remarkable for the unusual shape of the flowers, which look like large Gladioli. Petals are not long, but short and rounded and so wide they overlap each other, thus giving a very attractive appearance to the flowers. Color is crimson, changing to carmine rose with an uneven edge of gold to each petal. Height, 3½ feet. Price, strong plants, $2.00 each, prepaid; $18.00 per doz. by express, not prepaid.

METEOR. Meteor is a vigorous grower with healthy green foliage. It is highly valued because of its magnificent flowers; fully four inches across, and abundance of bloom. Color is a deep crimson; very rich; each plant usually throws up five to six trusses of buds, which continue blooming luxuriantly all summer through. Price, plants or dormant roots, 75c each, postpaid; $6.00 per doz. by express, not prepaid.

WILLIAM SAUNDERS—(1907). The flowers are large, of splendid form and are borne very freely in immense clusters. The color is a deep, rich, shining scarlet, lightly dappled with crimson. Foliage is a rich bronze. Height, 3½ to 4 feet. We believe that Wm. Saunders is decidedly the most perfect canna of this type that has been introduced. Those who tried Wm. Saunders in 1907 say it cannot be excelled. We offer plants only: 60c ea. postpaid; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100 by express, not prepaid.

This new edition comprises about 50 per cent more genera than the former one, and embraces the botanical name, derivation, natural order, etc., together with a short history of the different genera, concise instructions for their propagation and culture, and all the leading local or common English names, together with a comprehensive glossary of botanical and technical terms. Plain instructions are also given for the cultivation of the principal vegetables, fruits and flowers. Cloth. $3.00

Henderson's Picturesque Gardens and Ornamental Gardening.

By CHARLES HENDERSON. A volume containing half-tone illustrations of the prettiest and most famous gardens and parks of the world, vividly portraying lawn, garden and landscape effects, plant and tree groupings, decorative bedding, herbaceous gardens and borders, formal gardens, lawn gardens, Italian, Japanese and English gardens, rock gardens, wild gardens, bog gardens, subtropical gardens, sunken and terrace gardens, rosariums, hardy ferneries, arches, columns, festoons, etc., picturesquely draped with vines, as well as numerous other garden embellishments. Each illustration is described and explained. Cloth with gold. $2.50

Greenhouse Management.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

CHIMNEY FACTS.

It often has been stated what relation should exist between the weight of coal burned in a grate and the weight and volume of air required for perfect combustion. It is sometimes more striking, however, to bring out this point by using a larger unit than the single pound. Take, for instance, a 100 horse-power boiler plant. Many such plants would burn 500 pounds of coal an hour; the air supplied would weigh 10,000 pounds and the volume of this air at a chimney temperature of 500 degrees would be about 240,000 cubic feet. The chimney for this plant must therefore discharge nearly 10,500 pounds (5.22 tons) of gases into the atmosphere each hour; that is, for each ton of coal burned the chimney will discharge from eighteen to twenty-two tons of gases. To keep these gases of the right color and composition for ninety per cent of the time is the problem to be solved, not only by florists in residence districts, but by those who want to keep their glass clean.

Chimneys will still be needed when the so-called smoke problem is solved. The popular solution consists in changing the color of the gases flowing from the chimney from black to a light gray. At least, this is all that the public and the smoke inspector will demand. But even when this problem is well solved, our chimneys must continue to discharge immense volumes of heated gases, and these gases will often carry with them fine particles of ash which cannot be burned; all of which may produce something of that disagreeable haze which floats over manufacturing cities. The dense black smoke from chimneys is certainly a nuisance. It can be stopped for about ninety per cent of the time, and if this is accomplished a most wonderful improvement will be observed in the atmosphere.

If smoke is not largely prevented it will be because of laxity in carrying out the provisions of the law, combined with the indifference of owners, rather than because of a lack of furnaces and boiler settings which are available for successfully burning bituminous coal without smoke.

had made such headway as to be uncon-

Charles Smith, rose growers for J. R.
Freeman, were elected members.

Flowers of speech vied with rare and fragrant blossoms at the annual dinner of the club in Freund's banquet hall.
Good fellowship permeated the atmosphere, and the florists enjoyed themselves to full measure, the dinner being the most successful in the history of the club.

The retiring president, Peter Bisset, introduced the new incumbent, F. H.
Kramer, who was given an ovation. He said that the club made great strides during the last year, but he hoped to promote an even better spirit of good will and increase the membership to twice the present number on the books.

An orchestra played throughout the evening, and E. Lawrence Phillips sang several popular songs. Prof. Charlemagne Keebler, who was elected to honorary membership in the club, entertained the banqueters with a rose poem, burlesque on an Italian opera and other character work.

Joseph Freeman was toastmaster.
William Gude, who presented Prof.
Keebler with the certificate of honorary membership, spoke feelingly of the good fellowship prevalent in the club and heartily congratulated retiring President Bisset and Secretary McCauley for their earnest and untiring efforts. In presenting Mr. Bisset with a handsome monogram silver dish Mr. Gude said: "You will notice that it is for fruit and sweet things. May it ever be filled to overflowing with the sweet things of life, which you so well deserve because of the living kindness of your life and the fruits of your labors so admirably performed. You will note further that it is sterling. That is emblematic of the sterling good wishes, the sterling appreciation, and the undying good will of your fellow-florists." Mr. Bisset thanked the donors and wished the club continued success.

Among others who spoke were Mrs. William Gude, Vice-president Robertson, Z. D. Blackistone, Geo. Shaffer, Adolphus Gude, George Cook, Chas. McCauley, and several others. O. O.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Although little has been stirring in the business line among the local florists during the last week, business began to pick up April 13 and indications point to a busy week. Funeral work called for a fair supply of flowers and the opening of the baseball season helped business, as some large bouquets were presented to players on visiting ball teams during the week. Roses and carnations have been selling at a fair rate, but spring flowers are not selling fast.

Retailers are receiving large orders for Easter lilies and probably the largest order was secured by the Schoen Floral Co., which will decorate the Trinity Episcopal church for the Easter service. This is the largest church in the city and it will require about 1,000 lilies to fill the contract.

Various Notes.

Easter has brought out prettily decorated windows among the retailers.

C. Commiske has a splendid lot of daisies.

E. R. Sackett, of the Sackett Floral Co., Fostoria, and Y. Willan, of Bowling Green, were Toledo visitors.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Current Comment.

From all appearances, the Easter cut will be light in this city. The usual spring crop is off and, unless the bulb stock is in shape, cut blooms will not be so plentiful as they were last year. Business has been good during the last week and all signs point to a revival of trade as soon as Lent is over.

The many friends of Walter Coles were very sorry to hear of the loss he had sustained in the death of his little daughter.

On Wednesday evening, April 8, the greenhouses of Paul O. Tauer, at Lebanon, Ind., were totally destroyed by fire. Owing to bad roads and being blocked by a freight train, the local fire department did not arrive till too late to do any good. The disaster was made more serious by the fact that the houses were full of an extensive line of bedding plants for the coming season. Mr. Tauer's friends, both in the town and trade, are coming to his assistance and hope to put him on his feet again.

The last meeting of the State Florists' Association was well attended, many out-of-town members being present. S.

John Heidenrich says that there always is a silver lining in the darkest cloud and that even a hail storm has its compensations, for his recent loss brought out the friendly spirit of the others in the trade. He says Bertermann Bros. Co., Smith & Young Co., Baur & Smith, E. A. Nelson and A. Wiegand & Son were especially kind.

FOND DU LAC, WIS.—Charles H. Johannsen, who formerly conducted a flower store in this city on South Main street, returned April 4 from Appleton. After selling his business here Mr. Johannsen had started a store in Appleton. He has now sold his business in Appleton.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—F. H. Kramer startled the trade April 5 by a full page advertisement in the Sunday Times, offering just one item, lilies in pots at from 50 cents to $1.50 per plant. The bid was for early orders and the trade will watch with interest the result in the business done, both at the store on F. street and at the stand in Center market.

MONTREAL.*Club Meeting.

The last meeting of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club was well attended. Probably the words "refreshments" and "old boys' reunion" on the notice cards were responsible for this. The most remarkable "old boy" present was John Perrin, who, according to report, was dead and buried. Quite a number of the boys believed this report and were naturally surprised to see John alive and well. After routine, W. C. Hall read Robert Craig's paper on "The Private Gardener," which was voted all right. J. Tuck also read a paper on similar lines, but not so extensive.

Various Notes.

Everything is in fine shape for the Easter trade and we are hoping that the weather clerk will be good to us. Last Wednesday we had a big snow storm and a few flurries again on Saturday. Of course, there have been the usual April showers.

Mrs. White's store is full of Easter stock. Her lilies are fine and she expects a busy time.

Miss Murray's store was attractively arranged last week with spiræas, lilacs, daffodils, hyacinths and a splendid variety of cut flowers. She expects a large shipment of lilies, which will fill up all the remaining room in her store.

Campbell's are getting ready for the rush. It is likely that Miss Bennett will assist them during the holidays.

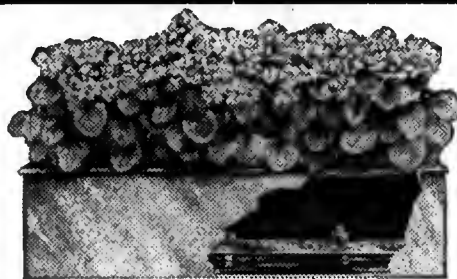

J. Bennett has plenty of fine plants ready. Some of his lilies are not yet sold, so there is a chance for some one who runs short. His hydrangeas are slow and may not be ready in time. On American Beauties and roses he ought to do well.

Hall & Robinson's hydrangeas are good and they have a large quantity on hand.

Mr. Hay, of the Canadian Floral Co., has kept his large window attractive with centerpieces of violets; violets and sweet peas; also huge bunches of roses. He deserves great credit for his work.

It is rumored that S. L. Bain intends to open a store on St. Catherine street west, between McGill College avenue and Mansfield street. We are sorry to hear that he is confined to the house by illness.

EASTER TRADE.

A summary of the Easter business indicates that it was generally satisfactory. There are a few reports of decreases in the volume of sales, but in the majority of cases these are due to local causes; for instance, in the eastern manufacturing cities, where the retail business of a town is dependent upon one big factory, if that factory was closed down, as sometimes happened, the florists felt the effect in lessened Easter sales. Also, the weather man was unfriendly in a number of eastern cities and there was rain on Saturday and Sunday, which of course caused a great deal of loss.

West of Pittsburg the reports are almost unanimous that the volume of Easter business was greater than ever before. The quantity of stock disposed of made a new record, but prices were lower, both at wholesale and at retail, than they usually have been. As a consequence most wholesale markets report the money value of sales only about as last year, but in almost every instance where a retailer looked to wholesale sources for his supply, he was able to buy cheaper, sell cheaper, increase the volume of his business and make an entirely satisfactory profit.

It is quite generally reported that the individual purchases at retail were smaller than usual and the moderate-priced plant arrangements were the ones that sold. Where a retailer had provided any considerable number of big, expensive plants, he had some of them left, while the neighbor who had only moderate-priced specimens sold out as cleanly as could be expected. In cut flowers all prices were sufficiently low for desirable stock to move freely.

The supply of carnations was something phenomenal and the street vendors competed with the store florists on these. Easter is generally considered a day for white flowers, but red roses were in most demand and it was the white carnations that were slow to move. The violet enjoyed a period of great demand and sweet peas sold well. Bulbous stock was slow to move in the face of the abundance of other material.

The Easter lily was in heavy supply throughout the country and prices in many instances were the lowest ever recorded for Easter, with many lilies left over.

While there are various reports of its being "a plant Easter," it was fully demonstrated that cut flowers still would sell fully as readily as plants, provided the retailers could be assured of the character and moderate price of the stock a few days in advance of the holiday, as they can be with plants.

GROTESQUE DESIGNS.

The call for unusual designs is so frequent with certain stores that the most grotesque idea occasions little comment, but a Toledo florist received an order for a design to be presented to the Toledo ball team at the opening of the season last week that was about as unusual as anything he ever had been called on to make.

The offering consisted of a large hen made of violets. A number of rooters presented the floral piece to the team and chose the peculiar design because the Toledo club is known about the circuit as the Mud Hens. Manager Armour received a large bouquet from the Elks club, as did his wife, and the team was also given a large floral horseshoe made of carnations, roses and spring flowers.

FLORAL FASHIONS.

One Chicago retail florist showed practically all his Easter plants made up in baskets of one style. It was a green and white round braided basket, with a large handle, and on the pieces showed nearly all its plants in either earthenware of one sort or another, or in metallic receptacles. Of course, a few large baskets and hampers were in the display, but the majority of the pieces were simple in character and little ribbon was used. The best selling line was a good imitation of the expensive Italian terra cotta, which may be had in an infinite variety of sizes and shapes. Also, the Pompeian toneware and the Russian brass were largely used, with some fine English china. In these, as a rule, one plant only was placed, in most cases removed from its pot and planted directly into the receptacle. The soil was covered with live sphagnum moss, and no other embellishment was used unless asked for by the customer. On those pieces which were provided with upright handles, ribbons were used of a color to match the flowers of the plant in the receptacle.

This style of arrangement provided relief from the monotony of basket and hamper arrangements which have been so numerous shown in recent years, and also met the demand for Easter gifts at popular prices.

of greatest size there even were two handles, crossing each other from side to side of the basket. There was considerable variation in the style of arrangement and the stock used, while ribbon was employed lavishly and served to give variety to the stock.

Most other retailers used a variety of baskets, but the E. Wienhoeber Co.

not an easy plant to decorate, but with this basket in silver or gold, according to the color of the hydrangea blooms, it makes not only a unique and striking but exceptionally pleasant effect.

ROCK'S SHOPPING LIST.

A number of retail florists who cater to good trade, sent out, just before Easter, neat little "Shopping Lists." That of W. L. Rock, Kansas City, had an insert which read:

"Your attention is asked to a showing of Home Grown Plants and Flowers. Gladden the heart of your friend at Easter time. Display ready for your inspection Wednesday."

The first two pages carried the following:

"We have much to be thankful for—our patrons appreciate our efforts to please them."

"For that tired feeling after a few hours of shopping, spend a few moments among the flowers—a positive cure—our store is always a veritable flower show."

"Don't worry over your floral decorations—leave that to us—glad to shoulder the responsibility."

"A smart flower shop, patronized generously, typifies good management. We have the correct ideas, the methods and the plans of action covering every form of decoration in flowers."

"Make a mental note of it—we deliver flowers that are worth while, in perfect condition, anywhere in these United States within twenty-four hours."

"The name Rock on a box of flowers is of greater merit than even the sterling mark on silver."

"There's an individuality about our methods that cannot be overlooked—ask your friends."

"The charm of floral arrangement consists in the fitness and beauty of design."

On the last two pages one reads:

"We are always pleased to serve those who are tired of old ways, and who crave something fresh and original in the cut flower line."

"We sustain a well earned reputation of doing things—that are worth while."

"If unable to get what you want at the other shops, try us—you'll try no farther."

"Kindly bear in mind that we have reliable correspondents in nearly every large city in the world competent to execute cut flower orders on very short notice."

"Please remember us in your shopping list—one trial will surely convince you that it was worth while."

A DAISY BUNCH.

A novelty in the way of a bride's bouquet is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is the reproduction of a photograph made at the store of Sawyer & Payne, Jacksonville, Fla., who devised the bunch of daisies to meet a call for something out of the ordinary in wedding bouquets. They say the bunch was a pronounced hit, attracting vastly more attention than would have been possible with the most elaborate creation with valley, sweet peas or even orchids.

PLANTS FOR LARGE BED.

We have on our lawn a large bed which we would like to plant to coleus, using two colors, the Golden Bedder and some good dark variety. We have done little design bedding, so a few suggestions would be much appreciated. The bed is thirty feet in diameter, with a walk leading to and around it.

COLUMBUS.

Golden Bedder and Verschaffeltii are the two coleuses which will suit your bed best, if you desire to use this class of plants. For lower growing plants, such alternantheras as paronychioides magnifica and its golden yellow form would be suitable. A bed of this size and character can be made quite attractive by working out one of the many fanciful designs seen in the public parks each year. To make a proper carpet bed design, one which would do you credit, will require a lot of material and entail considerable expense.

Such a bed would be more effective planted with cannas. If you want two colors, select such varieties as Beaute Poitevine, Comte de Sach, a splendid crimson; Mme. Crozy, Antoine Wintzer, or Crimson Bedder as crimsons, and Yellow Bird, King Edward or Florence Vaughan as yellows. By securing sufficient plants of first-class crimson and yellow cannas, you will produce a far superior bed to one composed of either coleus or alternanthera. The majority of the cannas named attain a height of four feet and I presume this would not be high enough to hide the sun dial. You could either plant a solid half of the bed with one color or run a thick band of one shade for a border and plant the balance with the other variety.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Cattleya Trianae.

The flowering season for Cattleya Trianae being over, all necessary re-basketing or re-potting should be attended to without delay. A compost of chopped, lumpy fern fiber, to which may be added a little fresh sphagnum moss, is suitable. Cut off all dead roots and pick away as much of the old compost as possible. Place firmly in the receptacles, be they pot, pan or basket, and keep on the dry side until roots and shoots show some development. Abundant drainage, keeping the plants well up to the light, and only sufficient shade as yet to break the full force of the sun, are cultural needs.

Tuberous Begonias.

For summer and early fall blooming the tuberous rooted section of begonias is very useful. As bedding plants they succeed well only in partially shaded places. In such locations, if kept mulched and occasionally watered, they make a really splendid showing. Near the seashore they do fairly well, even in full sun, but it is not wise to try them without a little shade. In Great Britain these begonias have to a large extent usurped the position at one time held by zonal geraniums, and truly their ease of culture, freedom of bloom and the fact that rains injure them very little are strong points in their favor. For outdoor culture the ground should be well manured and we have always found a mulching of old cow manure of great benefit. For piazza boxes in partial shade, these are among the finest flowering plants grown.

Tubers of fine strains can now be bought so cheaply that none need be without a few dozens or hundreds of begonias. There is still ample time to start these and have fine plants for summer blooming. Lay the tubers on the bench or in flats. Cover with moss and moisten well. Then keep a little drier until roots and shoots appear. Pot them up before they root too much, using a mixture of cow manure, loam and sand. Leaf-mold is good for seedlings, but the cow manure has more body to it for older plants. Do not pot very firmly, and a fairly porous compost is to be preferred to a close one. An ordinary greenhouse will grow splendid begonias. As the weather becomes warmer some shade will be necessary, especially during the flowering time, but this should never be heavy. One or two short stakes should also be tied to the stems, to prevent their toppling over or snapping.

Good flowering plants may be had from seed in one season. If sown in February, these should now be in flats and can be potted off very shortly. A temperature of 50 to 55 degrees at night will bring these along nicely. Loam, leaf-mold, sand and powdered charcoal make a good growing medium for them at the first potting. In summer fine plants can be grown in coldframes, on which lath shadings are used during strong sunshine.

Gloxinias.

Gloxinias are not nearly so much grown commercially as their beauty, ease of culture and usefulness would seem to warrant. As cut flowers they are rather fragile, although anyone getting them in bloom early will find they work in extremely well for Memorial day bouquets. Plants in flower also sell well at that date. Anyone having customers wanting summer flowering plants cannot afford to neglect gloxinias. They make a good house plant and last well if carefully watered and kept out of sunshine. Gloxinias require a somewhat higher temperature than begonias, although in the summer months they will succeed well in any greenhouse. Shade they must have. A few hours' direct sunlight will burn the foliage and disfigure the plants for a season.

Late winter sown seedlings will not flower before August and will not equal plants raised from last year's balls. The finest gloxinias we ever saw were grown in shallow benches. These carried magnificent flowers and were a sight for the gods themselves. They were grown where there was a good local call for the flowers for table decorations. We doubt if they would pay, grown thus, except in exceptional cases. There are, however, few customers, if they are real flower fanciers, who can resist the temptation to purchase a well flowered gloxinia. It is not yet too late to purchase gloxinia tubers. Start in the same way as begonias, using the same brand of compost, but grow them somewhat warmer. Do not wet the foliage with the hose when watering. To secure nice plants, elevate them on pots or stand on shelves sufficiently far away from the glass so that they will not burn. Use liquid manure as the flowers show. Do not allow them to become crowded, or the foliage will not hang over the pot, as it naturally should. The old-fashioned gloxinias, with drooping flowers, are rarely seen nowadays, the erecta type having displaced them. The types are many and varied and, of course, it is eventually money in the pocket to purchase the best.

Achimines.

Another plant not much seen outside of private estates is the achimine. Here is a plant unequalled as a summer bloomer, and fine alike for window boxes, pots, pans or hanging baskets. The little corms will probably have been started before now and grow well with the gloxinias, the same soil and temperature being suitable. Nothing can be finer than hanging baskets of achimines for conservatory decoration, letting the shoots droop down naturally. In pots or pans they are also excellent. A dozen corms will give a good 6-inch pot or pan. It is necessary to put a thin stake to each shoot before flowering time. These corms may be started in pans thickly and transplanted to their blooming pots or pans later; or, better still, they may be put directly into the latter. Keep them on the dry side until growths and root action are fairly well advanced. Soil which will grow gloxinias and begonias will be all right for achimines.

Fuchsias.

As summer blooming plants, we do not see as many fuchsias as we did a quarter of a century ago. Owing to our hot summers they are not a success as bedding plants unless in shady spots, and then only to a moderate extent, but as late summer flowering plants in pots they are worthy of attention. Plants now in 3-inch pots and grown along in a cool house will make useful stock in 6-inch or 7-inch pots in three months' time. Pinching to keep the plants bushy and the removal of all flower buds should be done until three to four weeks before they are wanted in bloom. For window and piazza boxes, fuchsias are particularly serviceable. They will flower during a good part of the summer if kept moist at the root and protected from strong sunshine. In Europe plants grown as standards are much used as bedders. Dotted in this way through beds and borders, with suitable groundwork, they are extremely effective, but here our use of them in this way must necessarily be restricted. There is always a fair sale for little plants carrying a few flowers during the bedding season.

Care of Bedding Stock.

The bare benches following Easter give us excellent chances to spread out our rapidly growing bedding plants. Sales on these will not be general for several weeks yet, and an effort should be made to get the stock into as good a condition as possible. While coleus, alternanthera and sundry other colored leaved subjects will still want a warm, moist house, there are some others which can now be gradually hardened. Among these latter are geraniums, ageratums, verbenas, asters, stocks, dianthus, variegated vincas and lantanas. Much harm can be done by too sudden a change of temperature. To remove plants from a house with a night temperature of 60 degrees, directly to the coldframes, is courting injury of a more or less serious nature. The plants will soon present a hard and semi-starved appearance. Let the hardening be as gradual as possible and, if you are placing stock in frames, remember that we get occasional frosts in our northern and eastern states until the end of May in most years, and be sure to protect the sashes with some mats, boards or other covering on such nights. You will find that many of your bedding plants will grow much better in frames than in houses after May 1, so you should take advantage of all spare sashes to accommodate them.

Avoid coddling dahlias. They are best grown cool and airy. Cannas should now have made a good growth and should have a somewhat cooler house. Do not place in frames yet a while. Heliotrope likes heat, and if you want to see it make a fine growth, try some cuttings, after potting, in a hotbed, partly plunging the pots. No greenhouse provides quite as good a growing atmosphere for these warmth-loving bedding plants as a well-made hotbed.

COLD STORAGE LILIES.

How are cold storage Easter lily bulbs forced in summer, beginning as early as May? A.

Cold storage lily bulbs are now procurable at almost any season. Their summer culture does not greatly differ from that of bulbs potted in the fall for winter or spring flowering. Bulbs potted in May can be stood on a cellar floor or in a coldframe, preferably the former. If they can be kept in an even and moderately cool temperature for a few weeks, the bulbs will make more roots than would be the case in a warmer place. The aim should be to get as many roots as possible before growths become advanced. Cold storage stock always starts to grow more quickly than bulbs not subjected to this method of retarding.

As soon as the roots are found to be running nicely around the sides of the pots and the young growths show themselves, stand on a bench in any light house and treat in the regular way. My experience has been that hardly as fine stock is produced from retarded bulbs, but their use makes it possible to have lilies, if we want them, every day in the year. C. W.

have had them about the time he states in order to get seed enough to plant two houses in 1895. This was three years before it was put into commerce by Burpee.

The origin is also claimed by Thomas Gould, of Ventura, Cal. This is the variety sent out by Burpee as Earliest of All, in 1898. I think this strain of Mr. Gould's was first seen in bloom among plants of Blanche Ferry. In 1898 Mr. Zvolanek started with Emil Leuly, of West Hoboken, and had at that time six houses of Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer. Now, there is no difference between this Florence Denzer and Mont Blanc. They are the same in every respect. Benary, of Erfurt, Germany, sent out Mont Blanc, I think, in 1902, or four years after Mr. Zvolanek was raising it in Hoboken. No doubt, if Mr. Zvolanek would again cross with the vetch the old varieties, and secure an early flowering strain, his claim would be substantiated. He has promised to do this.

Sports.

Many claim that this strain are habit sports, that they produce flowers identical to the late varieties from which they sported. I do not believe, myself, that they do sport, for I have grown a great many, both inside and outside, and have never had one sport with me. Mr. Zvolanek, who has raised practically all the winter flowering varieties, says he has never had one sport with him. Mr. Zvolanek raised Christmas Captain as a result of a cross between Captain of the Blues and Christmas Pink. A grower in England claims that Captain of the Blues sported with him from the late to the early type, but I believe this was only a stray seed of Christmas Captain which had in some way gotten among his Captain of the Blues, for he was growing seed of Mr. Zvolanek's at the time. I think the cause is apparent. It is also possible that if he were growing the two types side by side, cross fertilization may have taken place, and the early flowering one may have been the result.

It is claimed by some that sweet peas do not mix, but the more I grow of them the more convinced I am that they do mix more or less. There is not one variety I grow but what quite frequently exposes its pollen and pistil, so in this case what is there to prevent insects or flies from carrying the pollen? Some claim these are deformed flowers and would not go to seed anyhow, but this is not the case, for if they are left on the plants they go to seed every time and produce fine seed. I am told this is far more marked on the seed farms in California than in a greenhouse.

I believe the early sweet pea is the result of a cross between the old type and some other species. I do not believe the late sweet pea can sport from the late to the early flowering, and will only believe so when I have conclusive proof that this is the case. Many growers, on seeing some variety they imagined they sowed, without examination immediately call it a sport. They do not stop to consider that there are many ways of that seed getting there. The seedsman and seed grower cannot always prevent the seed getting mixed.

Types.

There are three types of the early sweet pea—the wavy or Spencer type; the common type, with the broad,

SWEET PEAS

UNDER GLASS

A Staple Cut Flower.

The subject which has been assigned for our consideration tonight is one that would have carried more weight had someone else, more fit than I, been asked to read this paper. I will, however, do the best I can, and trust you will overlook anything I may say that seems to you improper, as this is the first time I have been called upon to speak before an audience. I also invite criticism, for no doubt many of you have your own ideas, and I hope you will let them be known, for only by so doing can we expect to settle some of the points that may arise.

The sweet pea, which is the subject I am going to say a few words on tonight, is one of the staples in cut flowers, ranking in this respect next to the violet. I will not go into the ancient history of the sweet pea, but confine my remarks as much as possible to the winter or early flowering section, the advent of which, I think, is within the memory of the youngest member here. It is only within the last ten or twelve years that the sweet pea has been placed before the people in the winter months. By growing the old varieties under glass it was only possible to have them, at the most, five months of the year. With the advent of the early flowering section it was made possible to cut flowers all the year.

The first sweet peas I grew under glass were such varieties as Blanche Ferry, Emily Henderson, Katherine Tracy, Countess of Radnor and Emily Eckford. These are of the late or summer flowering section. These varieties, when sown under glass in August, would not come into bloom until the end of the following April, and seed sown in January would flower as early as that sown in August. They have a season of flowering and will not flower before that time, no matter when the seed is sown. The early flowering sweet pea is just the opposite in this respect, for in many cases they commence to flower when only a few inches above the soil, and if sown in July they will flower in August. They make a poor growth in summer and do not do so well as the late varieties. In the winter months, however, they make a strong growth, and while making this growth they flower, and I feel safe to say that the flower produced then is far superior to the late flowering varieties.

Origin.

The origin of the winter flowering sweet pea is something that seems to be a mystery. There are several who claim this distinction. A. C. Zvolanek, of Bound Brook, N. J., is one who claims to be the originator. He claims that he made his first experiments twenty-five years ago, but did not succeed until he made a cross with the European vetch. In January, 1892, he found some of the plants producing flowers which were small in size, and the plants only attained the height of two feet, but by crossing and recrossing a strain producing large flowers on long stems, and growing six feet in height, was secured. At this time Mr. Zvolanek was not in business for himself, but raised them mainly for pleasure, and gave seed to any of his friends who wanted some. While in the employment of Thomas Young, of New York, in 1895-6, he had two houses of Christmas Pink. If this story is correct, it shows that he must straight standard, and the incurved or hooded type. As yet the Spencer type seems to me a little soft for commercial purposes, but this fault may be remedied in new varieties. The standard, which is wavy, has not the strength of the common type, and they fold together when they are bunched, in such a way as to make them look small, although the flowers are larger than the common type. The common type, although not so large as the Spencer type, is the best for commercial purposes; their stiff, straight standards do not fold together, and the flowers remain open. The incurved or hooded are the least desirable; their flowers are incurved and look small beside the ordinary type. They, however, have very long, wiry stems, and some of the best fancy varieties are of this type. They also are very strong growers.

Hybridization.

Most of the varieties, with the exception of the ones sent out first, are the results of crossing the early and late varieties together. This is done at the time the two types are in bloom together. Mrs. Charles Totty, Mrs. Alexander Wallace, Mrs. George Lewis, Christmas Captain, W. W. Smalley and a number more are the results of crossing the two types together. Varieties raised by crossing the early type with the same type are usually weak growers. It seems to take the blood of the late varieties to give them constitution. I noticed this the last winter on a batch of recrossed Christmas; this was the Christmas crossed on the late flowering Blanche Ferry. There was about fifty per cent of the old type among them, but the early flowering ones were much stronger and produced stronger flowers on longer stems than Christmas, and grew three feet higher.

Strains.

There are now strains of these peas in England, Germany and Algeria. I am unable to give much information about these, as I have never managed to get any of the seed. I have seen the Algerian strain growing at Mr. Zvolanek's. They were not in flower then, but in growth and habit they were identical with what we have here. He later sent me some of the flowers. They were of poor color and variety; in fact, they were certainly ten years behind what we have here now. Flowers of the English strain resembled the Algerian strain and Mr. Zvolanek says they are the same varieties or mixture he sold five years ago to the firms who are now selling the seed. It is very hard to hold the stock of any one variety by the raiser, because it is sent to California to be grown along for seed, and while there the seed can be carried from one place to another.

Sweet Pea Society.

What we need here now is an American sweet pea society, for at the present time there is nothing to prevent any one from selling sweet peas under any name he pleases. We have Earliest of All, Christmas Pink and Xmas Pink. These three varieties are the same in every particular. The re-selected Earliest of All is earlier than the others, but the flowers of all three are identical. There are Mont Blanc and Florence Denzer; these two are identical. There are also Zvolanek's Watching, Burpee's Earliest

White and White Bird; these are all identical. We have Flamingo and Christmas Red; these are identical, and Sunbeams and Canary Bird are identical.

Aside from keeping the names straight, the formation of a society would stimulate the growing of sweet peas, and no doubt many would go into the improving of them in the way the carnation men have done with the carnation. If a number would get together with this in view, it would be hard to predict what the sweet pea would be ten years from now. Just fancy what an exhibition you could have if a number got together and did as the carnation men have done. The sweet pea is everybody's flower, being within the reach of all. Thus far Mr. Zvolanek seems to be about the only one to improve this class. It was only a few years ago that the first of this type were seen; now he has practically all the colors seen in the late varieties. I think great credit is due him for what he has accomplished. Putting aside Christmas Pink, Mont Blanc and Sunbeams, he has raised practically all the other varieties in cultivation now. He is doing for this type of peas what Henry Eckford did for the late flowering section.

Cultivation.

To grow the sweet pea to perfection under glass, you must have a greenhouse suitable for the purpose. It should be at least eight feet high on the sides, four and a half feet being glass. Mine are seven feet and I find the side rows strike the glass when the vines are about half grown, thereby giving me half a crop. My center rows are about right; they are twelve to fifteen feet high. The higher they grow the more and better flowers you get. We plant the rows five feet apart and in a line with the supports of the greenhouse. The uprights are twelve feet apart, so in supporting we run twine from one support to the other on each side of the row. This I have found the best method of supporting. I have tried wire netting. This is only a nuisance, as the vines do not cling to the wire, which causes just as much tying as if it were not there. It also causes injury many times to the vines. As a sweet pea stretches many times more than a foot in developing, if held back by anything in growing the growth looks like a spiral spring and the picking of the blooms is made very difficult. The side rows are planted five feet from the sides of the house and all the heating pipes are on the sides. They are very susceptible to red spider, and as they will not stand syringing, the farther you can afford economically to have them from the pipes the better.

The Soil.

We have not changed the soil in the houses since they were built four and five years ago, and we find the vines are getting more vigorous each year. In the same soil a crop of tomatoes and violets are harvested each year. The soil was originally eighteen inches deep, but by the application of manure each year the depth is now two and a half feet. The tomato crop is on the wane by the middle of August. When these are cleaned out we trench the house over as deep as the soil, bringing the bottom soil to the surface. In the bottom of the trench we put three inches of decomposed cow manure; one foot from the surface we put on three inches more of the same material. The house is allowed to remain in this state until nearly time for sowing the seed. The soil is then usually very dry, so we dampen it down enough to cling together while the house gets another fork over. This time we go down one foot and mix the top layer of manure with the surface soil. We then make the surface as nearly level as possible and thoroughly water the soil, giving enough to penetrate the entire mass, with a strong dose of liquid horse manure. In about three days, depending on the weather, the house will be ready to plant.

We sow the seeds about one inch and a half apart. We make the drills one inch deep and do not allow more than one inch of soil over them. We do not pull any more soil toward the root, as is often recommended, but let it remain level. If more soil is pulled around the base of the plant, stem-rot is sure to follow. We do not water the plants again until they are up about three inches. Of course, you can grow them on a bench with a few inches of soil, but the results will be just what you make them, a weak growth and a crop of short-stemmed flowers. These soon play out, as there is not enough soil or food for the vines to live on.

The Temperature.

They may be made to flower any time you wish by increasing the temperature, but the best results are obtained by growing at a temperature just above freezing until the buds can be felt in the crowns of the plants. Then the temperature should be gradually increased, say 1 degree a night, until you reach 48 degrees. This, I think, is about right, although in midwinter I think they move a little better at 50 degrees. As the days lengthen, a little cooler temperature seems to suit better. A rise of 10 to 15 degrees should be given during the day in sunny weather. In spells of cloudy weather, 55 degrees is high enough during the day. If a high temperature is given in dark weather, the growth gets soft and wilts when the sun comes out bright again.

While the plants are young they should be regularly fumigated, so that there will not be a sign of lice when the plants commence to flower. If they are clean at this stage it will not be necessary to fumigate while they are in bloom. It is impossible to sell sweet peas that smell of tobacco. Tobacco, also bleaches the flowers of some varieties and makes them look like some other variety.

We sometimes hear of some one having trouble by the buds dropping. This is more the case in midwinter than at any other time. This is caused by too cool a temperature or a sudden chill, or too much water. Should a house be allowed to go near the freezing point in midwinter, the wholesale dropping of buds will be sure to follow. Diseases have not shown themselves with us. Sometimes we see a plant that looks stunted, with yellow streaks in the foliage. This we have attributed to too rich soil or the roots striking manure that was not thoroughly decomposed.

They take an abundance of water in the flowering season, but require very little in the early stages of their growth. They should be provided with proper drainage, so that if too much water is given it will settle into the subsoil, and no bad results will follow.

Time of Flowering.

I find in experimenting with the newer varieties of peas that some come into bloom ahead of the others. Take re-selected Earliest of All and Watching, for instance. These two will come into flower fully two weeks ahead of the other varieties, and for early purposes they are a fine pair to grow together. They are both black-seeded. These will flower in October if sown in August, and will be in full crop for Thanksgiving. For a later crop I prefer Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer. These are the peers among sweet peas at the present time. The Denzer is two weeks later than Christmas Pink and is white-seeded. It should be sown in sand and transplanted into flowering quarters at the time you sow the seed of Christmas Pink. They will then commence to flower together.

There is now quite a demand for some of the fancy varieties. These sell best in the spring, but will soon get into demand all winter. They are something new and the people are a little skeptical about buying them. They will, however, find a ready sale when once there are enough of them around to attract attention. Among the new varieties I think Mrs. Charles Totty the best. It is the same shade as the Countess of Radnor, and is a very strong grower, having a 2-foot stem. W. W. Smalley comes next. This is a shade of satin pink. It is a fine seller, but a trifle short in stem. Mrs. Alexander Wallace is a good one. The color is dark lavender and sells well. Mrs. Wm. Sim sells well. The color is salmon pink. It produces very long stems, many being two feet in length. The improved Mrs. F. Delansky I have great hopes in. It is the color of an Enchantress carnation. A limited quantity of Le Marquis and Christmas Captain can be sold. Both are purple shades. The same may be said of Blue Bird. Mrs. Eddy Wild is deep crimson, but the flowers are small in size and the stems rather short. It is a strong grower.

A Warning.

To those who are contemplating growing sweet peas the one important thing is to have the right seed. You may get your house in the best possible condition, yet without the right seed failure is sure to follow. Many seedsmen are selling, as seed of the early varieties, what are not the early varieties. Very few seedsmen know that there is any difference between the two, and substitute with the late varieties. Not a winter passes but what some poor grower gets hit hard in this way. He sows his seeds. They start finely. They grow well, but he gets no flowers. He is paying high for his experience.

I will tell you an experience of my own, to show what harm can be done in not knowing what you are planting. A few years ago I planted a house with Earliest of All. I bought my seed from a reputable seed house. This turned out to be the best house of peas I had ever sown. The seed was all true and, to be sure of seed for the following year, I bought seed again from this same firm, with the assurance that it was the same as I had bought the preceding August. My intentions were to build another greenhouse and raise two crops, one for early, the other for late cutting. The house was built and put into the best possible condition. The seed was sown in August and all came up in fine shape. They grew lovely, but somehow or other they did not look right to me. The vines looked too heavy and strong. However, I did not like to disturb them and I let them grow.

The other house was planted the middle of November, after a crop of mid-season chrysanthemums. I procured the seed for this house from another source. The beginning of March they commenced to bloom and by the first part of April $2,000 worth of peas had been sold from this house. The other house had not commenced to flower in the beginning of April. The vines had reached the glass and were pulled down several times. It was then deemed advisable to clear the house out and consign the vines to the rubbish heap. This was done after keeping the house, which was 36x360, at a temperature of 50 degrees all winter long.

I was out by this deal $6,000, this being based on the product sold from a house of similar size the year before. I mention this to show the seedsmen what a great injury can be done by selling something that is not true to name, and to warn the grower to be doubly sure before he risks too much space in something he is in doubt about.

The safest way is to procure your seed in advance and test it yourself. Sow some of it, and if the plants grow strong and stocky and bush around the base you have the wrong sort for winter flowering, but if the plant runs up to a single stem and does not bush you have the right kind. The early type seldom break near the ground. The one shoot forms practically the whole plant. Some side shoots are made, but these never attain the strength of the main shoot.

PRUNING HYDRANGEAS.

The accompanying illustrations show a plant of Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora growing on the grounds of W. C. Scovell, a well-known florist at Malta, O. One of the pictures shows the plant in bloom, carrying 175 panicles of flowers. The other picture illustrates Mr. Scovell's method of pruning. The plant is eight years old, but only a little over three feet high after pruning and three feet six inches across. The main stem is four and a half inches in diameter at the base. He cuts back to but one bud each year.

Gardeners all know that this hydrangea should be cut back rather heavily, but not many prune as closely as does Mr. Scovell. On the subject, Bailey says: "This and also most of the other species should be pruned in fall or early spring and the branches of the previous year cut back to one to three pairs of buds, ac-ording to the growth of the branches and the desired size of the panicles; if only slightly pruned the panicles will be many but small. Sometimes they are cut back every year almost to the ground and produce then enormous panicles, which, however, usually need artificial support and lack the gracefulness of less severely pruned plants."

THE DEATH ROLL.

Charles W. Kaber.

The death of Charles W. Kaber, of La Porte, Ind., which was briefly mentioned in last week's REVIEW, was due to paralysis. He was stricken with this malady Sunday evening, April 5, and passed away early in the following morning. For more than a year, following an operation for appendicitis, he had not been in good health, but he had been able to be up and around and had devoted time and energy to assisting his son and daughters at the greenhouses.

Mr. Kaber was born in a village near Leipzig, Germany, April 5, 1833. In 1853 he came to America, with his parents. The family lived in Chicago a year and then moved to La Porte. The young man became a clerk in the large mercantile house of P. King, with whom he was associated for twenty-five years as a clerk and head of the merchant tailoring department. Afterward he entered into a partnership with Charles N. Dolk, now of South Bend, in the merchant tailoring business, the firm being located in the basement under the Red Cross pharmacy. Upon the dissolution of the partnership, Mr. Kaber became associated with Louis Smith, the two having a store and merchant tailoring establishment in the room now occupied by Hilley's cafe. In 1894 Mr. Kaber retired from this business and had since been associated with his children in the florists' trade, in which the family has been very successful. Mr. Kaber was married December 24, 1856, to Christine Margaret Niemier, who, with five children, Mrs. F. J. La Hayn of Crocker, Ind., Misses Bertha and Ella Kaber and William and Charles Kaber of La Porte, survives him. The deceased also leaves eight grandchildren and one brother, Henry Kaber, of East La Porte. Mr. Kaber was a member of the La Porte lodge of Odd Fellows and Union Encampment.

Mrs. Rose Bendt.

As reported in last week's obituary column, Ferdinand Bendt, of Newark, N. J., died Saturday, April 11, of typhoid fever. On the following Monday, April Hydrangea Paniculata on Grounds of W. C. Scovell, Malta, O.

13, his wife, Mrs. Rose Bendt, died of the same disease. She died in ignorance of the fact that her husband had passed away before her. Next day a double funeral service was held and the two bodies were placed in the same grave. Dorothy Bendt, the 13-year-old daughter, who was also stricken down by the fever, is now said to be convalescent. It is believed that an oyster stew, partaken of by these three members of the family April 1, was the cause of the disease. Of the family of four, Nellie, aged 6, was the only one who did not eat any of the oysters, and she has remained well.

It is rumored that there may be trouble in settling Mr. Bendt's estate, as no will has been found. The estate is valued at nearly $200,000. Mrs. Bendt was a widow when she married the florist, and had two children who are with relatives in Germany. As she survived her husband, some lawyers are of the opinion that the children of her first marriage will be entitled to one-third interest in the estate.

HARDY OUTDOOR ROSES.

[Synopsis of a paper by David McFarlane, of Tarrytown, N. Y., read before the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, continued from the Review of April 9.]

Hybrid Perpetuals for Cutting.

The best way to grow hybrid perpetual roses for cut blooms is in rows in the garden. I would advise every one to give them plenty of room between the rows, three feet or more, and they may be set fifteen to eighteen inches in the rows. This enables you to draw up the soil to the heel of the plants for winter protection, before placing the manure around them. Another advantage it lends in spring is, that when you remove the manure the cavity in the center will hold quite a lot of it, and where it can be deeply forked in this will cause fresh root action over a wide space. As the root is the driving power for the top and our aim is to produce a good bloom on a long stem, with good foliage, I have never seen this method fail even on light, sandy soil.

Most men, who have written on the subject of the rose, advocate the soil to be left good and firm and only forked up to a depth of a few inches in the spring. This is contrary to my experience for good results. I never hesitate to put the fork as far in as the foot will send it, seven or eight inches away from the neck of the plant. No doubt, by this operation a great many roots are broken, but it is at a time when the plant is dormant and we have just cut all of its top away, and I think that the young roots will work through the loose soil with such vigor as will soon more than compensate for the rough pruning they have received.

Hybrid perpetual roses should not remain undisturbed more than seven or eight years. They should then either be replaced with young 2-year-old stock or carefully lifted, placed over a chopping block and all the thick, fiberless roots removed with a sharp hatchet. Roses treated in this way are, in many cases, as good as younger stock. Care should be taken not to treat all in one season, as hybrids give poor results the first season after being planted.

Roses grown for cutting or exhibition purposes should be disbudded, leaving only the strongest bud on each shoot, which is generally the center one, and where roses are grown especially for exhibition the small, weakly shoots may be removed at an early stage. The latter is, however, seldom necessary where the operation of pruning has been perfectly performed in early spring; for in that operation no wood should be left that is likely to throw up a weak growth.

Climbing Roses.

No class of rose has gained in popularity in the last fifteen years as have the climbing roses. This, I may say, is due to the Crimson Rambler, which is now no more a stranger to the humble cottager than to the millionaire. The Crimson Rambler may justly be credited with the stimulant it created among hybridizers, the results of which are now demonstrated to us with a vast variety of sterling merit, for which the Yankee hybridizer deserves a good share of the credit.

For covering arbors, trellises, fences, pillars, or planting along sides of buildings and high walls, in conjunction with other climbers, nothing is more effective than these rambler roses. The best and hardiest varieties are found in the rambler or polyantha class. Some of the Wichuraiana hybrids are extremely useful for this purpose, but some of them cannot be classed as hardy roses, many of them having too much tea blood in them to be able to stand our winters. I have seen large plants of Gardenia, Jersey Beauty and Evergreen Gem completely killed with a moderately cold winter. They are better, generally, for covering banks and low projecting rocks, and when mixed with honeysuckle are extremely valuable for landscape work.

Use and Arrangement.

Pillars and various shaped trellises may be covered with roses in the front and rear yards of the small cottager and many of the strongest growing hybrid perpetual varieties, as well as the so-called pillar rose, may be used for this purpose. Some of the best are: Baltimore Belle, Queen of the Prairies, Gem of the Prairies, General Jacqueminot, Mme. Plantier, Magna Charta and Marshall P. Wilder.

Climbing and pillar roses must not be cut far back in spring, but the oldest wood should be cut out occasionally. This is best done just after the flowering period, taking care that you have a good young growth from the bottom for every old one you cut out. All that will be necessary in spring will be to cut back to suit the space desired to be covered.

Pests.

The rose, like all other good things in floriculture, has its bug enemies. White scale, or rose scale, is often troublesome on climbing, pillar or standard roses. Where the wood is over a year old it is generally the worst. A thorough spraying with Pratt's Scalecide, one part Scalecide to twenty of water, applied with a fine nozzle in late fall or early spring, will kill this pest.

Caterpillar must be carefully guarded against. I generally find one application of powdered hellebore sufficient to keep this in check. This should be applied about May 20. The best way, I find, is to use it in liquid form, one tablespoonful of hellebore to fourteen quarts of water, sprayed on in the afternoon of a bright, dry day. One should not wait until reminded by the half-eaten leaves before using hellebore, as the caterpillars are sure to visit you about the time I have stated.

Another great enemy of the rose is a little white thrips. This seldom attacks the roses in the open garden, but look out for your climbers on buildings or pillars, if any way shaded by trees. I find a strong application of tobacco water the best for keeping this thrips in check; but, generally, it has to be repeated at intervals throughout the season, commencing about May 10. Aphis is sometimes troublesome. If so, tobacco dust, applied late in the evening, is the surest remedy.

But the worst of all bugs that we have seen in late years is the genuine rose bug that devours the finished product and has vexed all admirers of the rose along this section of the Hudson river for the last few years. I have seen arbors of roses with the blooms literally covered with these bugs and scarcely one perfect bloom free from its ravages. Killing by hand seems to be the only way to destroy this pest, but even this is small satisfaction, for we are unable to save our blooms. If I could prescribe a remedy to eradicate this pest this paper would have been at least worth the ink that has been spilled upon it.

THE CINERARIA.

The cineraria is one of the most beautiful and useful winter-flowering plants for the greenhouse and for house decoration. It is of easy culture, but when well grown will well repay the grower for all the extra care and trouble taken with it. No private gardener can afford to be without the cineraria, for it is one of the showiest plants at his disposal, and commercial growers find a ready sale for well-flowered plants.

The first thing to consider is to secure the best possible strain of seed, for the seeds are not expensive and, as with all other seeds, the best always is infinitely the cheapest.

The seeds may be sown any time from June 10 to June 25. First, prepare a light compost, consisting of one part loam, one part leaf-mold and a good sprinkling of sand. Put all these through a fine sieve and fill some well drained 5-inch pots or shallow pans. Firm the soil moderately, give a watering and allow the pots to stand for a while before sowing the seeds. When sowing the seeds take great care not to sow too thickly. Cover lightly with fine, sifted sand. Stand the pots or pans in a shady position in the greenhouse, covering with a sheet of glass. Watch closely for the appearance of the seedlings and remove the glass to prevent the little plants from becoming drawn and weak.

When large enough to handle, prick off in 4-inch pots, from four to six plants in a pot. If left in the seed pots or pans to become crowded during the warm nights of August the result would be a total failure through the young plants damping off.

As soon as they are large enough, the next shift should be into 2¼-inch pots, one plant to a pot, using the same compost as before. Keep the plants in a shady house and as cool as possible. The next shift may be into 4-inch pots and a little richer compost may be used. A sprinkling of bone meal in the soil will suffice. Continue to pot moderately firm.

When the 4-inch pots are filled with roots the plants will be ready for their final shift to 6-inch pots. This shift should be made early in January, making up a compost consisting of two parts good loam and one part well rotted cow manure, to which a sprinkling of bone meal may be added and the materials well mixed together. For this shift pot the plants firmly.

Keep the plants fumigated once every two weeks to ward off the attack of greenfly and other insects. When the plants show signs of flowering, sprinkle a little of Clay's fertilizer on the surface of the pots every two weeks and water it in.

The illustrations accompanying these notes are from some of my plants of the past season, the photographs having been made by A. T. Boddington, who thought them a credit to his seed. H. B. VYSE.

BOSTON.

The Easter Market.

All things considered, Easter trade has been fairly satisfactory. Probably as many flowers and plants were sold as a year ago, but prices averaged lower. There had been little hope of any records being broken, owing to the prevailing trade depression. The terrible Chelsea fire April 12, calling for hundreds of thousands of dollars for relief, also had some depressing influence on the market. Growers on the whole fared better than the retailers, the largest producers of lilies, rambler roses and other flowering plants selling out clean.

The plants continue to cut more of a figure each succeeding Easter. Lilies, as usual, held first place; prices varied from $10 to $12.50 per hundred buds, although poor stock could be purchased cheaper. At retail 14 cents to 16 cents were prevailing rates. Pink rambler roses seemed to be second in popularity. Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins and Farquhar were all in evidence, Dorothy Perkins in largest numbers. Quite a few Hiawatha were sold, also of Baby Ramblers. Less hybrids than usual were in evidence. Of Crimson Ramblers far less were seen than of the pink varieties, and these were not of the best quality. Azaleas sold well; salmon and deep pink shades were most seen. Genistas sold only moderately. Acacia armata was less abundant than usual, owing to the late date of Easter. Some nice ericas were seen, including some of the waxy section.

Rhododendron Pink Pearl was well flowered at a few stores. Other rhododendrons were fewer than usual. Marguerites, yellow and white, were good and sold well. Bulbous stock was abundant and sold rather slow. Other plants noted included Boronia elatior, gloxinias, astilbes of excellent quality, cratægus, Prunus triloba, deutzias and English primroses. Palms, ferns and other foliage plants were rather a slow sale.

In cut flowers there were no striking advances in prices. Roses were in heavy supply and of fine quality. Beauty advanced in price only a little, but best grade Killarney and Richmond sold up to $4 per dozen. Bride and Maid varied from $2 to $8, only fine flowers reaching top figures. Of Mme. Chatenay some excellent flowers were sold. Wellesley also showed up well. Carnations were of excellent quality. A few made $5 per hundred, a fair number $4, and many went at $3, which seemed to be a popular price, and a good many were either sold lower or left over in ice-boxes. Prices on carnations did not average much over half those of a year ago.

Violets, owing to the lateness of the season, were not overabundant. Good flowers of both singles and doubles made $1 to $1.25 per hundred, some extra fine singles from frames selling at $1.50. Sweet peas were one of the best selling flowers, varying all the way from 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Narcissi and tulips were a slow sale, $1 to $2 per hundred being ruling rates. Marguerites were plentiful and sold at $1 to $2 per hundred. Cut lilies of the best quality made $12.50 per hundred and from that down to $8. L. candidum were few and usually of poor quality. One grower who had some well grown ones made $1.50 per dozen on them, as much as the best longiflorums brought. In miscellaneous flowers primroses, mignonette, anemones, ranunculus, antirrhinum, Spanish iris, Gladiolus The Bride, ixias, *tritonia*s and lilac were included. Few orchids were seen.

Since Easter the market has been fairly steady. There is an abundance of all cut flowers and prices have dropped. Weddings and social functions will help to relieve the congestion now for a few days.

Club Meeting.

An attendance of about 150 greeted William Sim when he delivered his lecture on sweet pea culture under glass before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club April 21. His paper, which appears elsewhere in this issue, was listened to with close attention and a rousing vote of thanks was tendered him for the same. Messrs. Cameron, Palmer, Stevens, Guerin, Pray, Coles, Fisher, Anderson, Craig and others joined in the discussion and the outdoor culture of sweet peas was taken up by Mr. Sim and others.

Peter M. Miller made a financial statement on the banquet, reporting all bills paid and a small balance in the treasury. The committee and donors of cut flowers and other decorative material were thanked. A report of the landscape gardening classes was made. Four new members were elected. A contribution of $50 was voted for the Chelsea relief fund.

Exhibits, even so soon after Easter, were quite numerous. George Stewart received a report of merit for Calceolaria Stewartia. Thomas Coles had Gerbera Jamesoni and mushrooms. George Page showed Marechal Niel and Chatenay roses. William Sim showed a large lot of sweet peas. W. N. Craig had annual larkspur and Lilium candidum. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had hybrid lilies, longiflorum x Philippense.

At the May meeting Mr. Palmer will give a few thoughts on the art of selling.

Various Notes.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. report a heavy volume of Easter trade at lower prices than a year ago. The call for evergreen wreathing was less active than usual. All greenery supplies were slower sales.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, picked 65,000 Campbell violets for Easter, of extra fine quality.

A. Leuthy & Co. sold out clean, not having any flowering stuff left. They have this season disposed of over 15,000 azaleas.

Edward MacMulkin had his usual attractive Easter windows, white being the only color used. Among other plants he had some good Prunus triloba and Dorothy Perkins rose.

Sidney Hoffman, on Massachusetts avenue, did a heavy Easter trade. No finer specimen azaleas, rambler roses, marguerites and other flowering plants were seen than at this up-to-date store.

Charles Holbrow, of Brighton, had some of the best Lilium candidum on the market, at 12½ cents per bud wholesale. These should be worth growing if one only secures the true type.

The H. E. Fiske Seed Co. had a fine display of Easter lilies and other flowering plants at the store on Faneuil Hall square. This firm is doing an excellent business.

Darwin and other late flowering tulips in great variety will be a feature at W. W. Rawson & Co.'s trial grounds in a few weeks. Sweet peas and dahlias will also be grown largely.

W. W. Edgar & Co. did a splendid Easter trade, disposing of about 25,000 pots of longiflorum lilies alone. Frank Edgar was unfortunately on the sick list for the Easter trade.

Welch Bros. sold more lilies in pots than ever and had a heavy call for cut flowers at moderate prices. They report a quite satisfactory Easter trade.

Arbor day will be celebrated in Massachusetts April 25. It is estimated that a million young forest trees will be planted in the state this year.

Pleasant weather prevailed this year on the day before Easter, rain holding off until night. Easter day was pleasant in the morning, but rain fell in the afternoon. Early in the morning of April 17 a temperature of 14 degrees above zero was recorded close to Boston.

William Sim picked 40,000 sweet peas April 17. W. N. CRAIG.

NEW ORLEANS.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting Thursday, April 16.

The committee on the fall flower show arrangements is working hard on different subjects.

E. Baker, one of the founders of the society, presented his resignation, having accepted a position in a different line of business. The society made him an honorary member.

A. Alost invited the members to a dinner party to be held at his place, the Rose Villa, May 3.

B. M. Wichers brought a bunch of Magnolia glauca. All magnolias grow and bloom down here to perfection, and nearly two months ahead of those in more northern localities, the M. grandiflora being now covered with blossoms.

H. Dasher made his application to be a member of the society.

Various Notes.

In the gardens of New Orleans, longiflorum lilies have never before been so conspicuous at Easter as they were this year. No doubt this was owing to several past mild winters and also to the lateness of Easter. Nevertheless, the importation of lilies does not seem to be necessary in a place where home-grown plants reach such perfection at this time of the year.

J. H. Menard reports Easter business as good. He had several church decorations, one of these, at the Jesuits' church, being an elaborate one and one of the largest of the city. He has on hand yet a good quantity of spring plants. A lot of pot roses look extra fine.

A. Alost, unlike many others, says he has been very successful with his cuttings of chrysanthemums and is waiting for favorable weather to transplant them from pots to the ground. His new greenhouses are nearly completed.

A. Newsham has consigned to the Jos. Steckler Seed Co. several tons of orchids from Belize, Honduras. He expects to make some more shipments before returning home.

J. Verberg's son met a horrible death by being run over by an electric car and instantly killed.

C. R. Panter is putting the last touch to the planting of the Dannell park, a beautiful little spot, facing St. Charles avenue. The place has been donated to the city. A single bed of 1,000 roses will be a sight when well established.

Otto Abele, of Abele Bros., says the Easter business was not so good as last year. M. M. L.

MILWAUKEE.

Easter Trade.

Easter trade, both in pot plants and cut flowers, came up to expectations, and, without doubt, it was just as good as a year ago. There were about enough good Easter lilies, both in pots and cut flowers, to meet the demand. All other pot plants also sold well. In the cut flower line there was a decided glut in bulbous stock and roses, the latter selling at a price so low as to make the growers feel anything but satisfied. There were plenty of good carnations, which sold well, but the pickled stock, which again made its appearance, as usual, proved to be a poor speculation and will only decrease, instead of increase, the returns.

All the retailers made good window displays, which, no doubt, helped to keep them busy.

Various Notes.

At the last club meeting, a letter from the board of the Wisconsin State Fair was at hand, stating that five prizes, to the amount of $150 cash, would be on the premium list for the best flowering beds, same to be planted in spring and judgment passed during the fair, which generally takes place during the first part of September.

The Sentinel, a morning paper, has again organized a Back Yard Improvement Association and called upon the club for judges. President Fred Holton appointed Messrs. Kellner, Dallwig, Zimmerman and Zepnick, one for each side of the city, to cooperate with the association and help a good thing along. Owing to the efforts of the Outdoor Art Association, the river front, formerly left to care for itself, being a general dumping place, will, if all promises hold good, be beautified with window boxes, trees and shrubs in pots and tubs. R. B. Watrous, secretary of the Citizens' Business League, said that a meeting of directors of the league, property owners and members of the Outdoor Art Association will be called for an early date. This certainly is a step in the right direction, helping to beautify the city and at the same time helping the florist who handles that line of stock.

The installation of the lately elected mayor and council, April 21, created quite a call for cut flowers and helped clean up the market. Most of the flowers were put up in large designs of horseshoes, baskets, etc.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. already has its boiler-shed up at its new Brown Deer place and, with all material on hand, will go right on now with the erection of the greenhouses.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. has finished grading and will soon commence the erection of three more houses.

The weather in and about Milwaukee has been very favorable of late. The land is rapidly drying and, with no rain, some of the carnation specialists at North Milwaukee will begin to move stock into the field. Their young stock all around is looking well. GENE.

CINCINNATI.

Easter Trade.

The reports from the various stores and wholesale houses, as to how business was this Easter, show considerable variation. One will say about a third less than last year and then the next that it was a good deal better, while the third will say that it was fully equal to last year. When we go into the matter carefully we can find few indications that there was an increase in business this year over last. On the other hand, there are many good reasons to prove that business was not up to last year. First, the lateness of the season; there were large quantities of outdoor flowers in bloom, and on Easter almost anywhere you went you could see any number of people with armloads of lilac, daffodils and other outdoor flowers. Of course, this took something away from the florists. Second, the Saturday before Easter was about as bad a day as we ever get at this season of the year. It rained all day, all the way from a drizzle to a hard downpour. This took away more business. Third, the general business depression which we have been going through for several months and which all of that time has been making itself felt in the flower business, was present in the Easter trade as well. Then there are still other reasons, such as the scarcity of carnations, which were hardly equal to the demand, and the decided scarcity of violets and sweet peas. To top that off, lilies were in oversupply.

So, taking all of these things into consideration and striking a general average, I would say that the business this year was not up to the standard. Perhaps there was a decline of about fifteen per cent from the normal, but as it is something which should have been expected and looked out for, it is a question if the average florist did not make just about as much money as he usually does at this time. And we have every reason to feel satisfied, for, with the one exception of lilies, the market was cleaned out close and the prices were fair, too. And, owing to several large funerals, the lilies proved to be good property April 20, as the market was cleaned out of almost everything else.

Most kinds of bulbous flowers did well. Lilies did not go as well as they should, but they are still good property and will likely be cleaned out at a fair price. Carnations were not equal to the demand, as was expected, and so they brought a good price. Roses, with the exception of red ones, were equal to the demand, there being plenty to fill all orders and a few white ones to spare.

The Jabez Elliott flower market was, as is usual, crowded with flowers and plants. The heavy rain on Saturday cut down their sales a great deal and business was not up to last year with the standholders. Had it not been for the rain, it is probable that their business would have exceeded that of former years.

Various Notes.

G. Brunner's Sons hit it just right with their hybrid rose plants this year. Their stock was in fine shape and made a great showing on their stands in the market.

Huntsman & Co. painted their store front just before Easter and their place looked very inviting.

Park Superintendent J. W. Rodgers went to Madison, Ind., April 15, to attend the funeral of his sister.

Visitors were J. F. Gorman, of the Lord & Burnham Co., New York, and Sidney Wertheimer, also of New York.

Frank Kyrk, son of L. H. Kyrk, the wholesale florist, has accepted a position as city salesman with the Pittsburg Lamp Co.

Mr. Maynard and wife passed through this city Easter for Detroit, after a few weeks' vacation in North Carolina.

C. J. OHMER.

IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The industrial and commercial development of the south has been rapid these last few years and the florists' establishments and business have nearly all grown as rapidly as their territory developed; indeed, in many cases the flower business has progressed more rapidly than almost any other industry. There is no section which has made more progress than North Carolina, and at Raleigh, J. L. O'Quinn & Co. have kept pace with the expansion of their opportunities and think the future is bright for all florists in the south.

It was about ten years ago that J. L. O'Quinn built two small greenhouses, growing for retail trade. Year by year the glass has been added to as the demand increased, until now there is about 25,000 square feet of glass. A general stock is grown for retail trade, but a large part of the glass is devoted to roses, carnations, violets and chrysanthemums, with bulbous stock in season.

In addition to the glass, considerable space outdoors is devoted to field-grown roses, evergreens, shrubs and deciduous shade trees, the nursery feature proving one of the most profitable branches of the business.

IMPORTANT IF TRUE.

A contemporary reports that a farmer in Ohio has made a discovery that will be of vast importance to farmers during a dry season. He has found that when onions and potatoes are planted in the same field in alternate rows the onions, being so strong, bring tears to the eyes of potatoes in such volumes that the roots of the vines are kept moist and a big crop is raised in spite of the drought.

It is false economy to cut fire heat off the houses yet, except for the hardest stock. It is still necessary on cold nights and during wet, sunless weather.

ADDITIONAL shading will be needed on some houses from time to time. Do not make it heavy yet, as we often get much dull weather in May.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November 9 to 15, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

GRADUALLY harden the little berried solanums, carnations, hydrangeas and pentstemons.

TURN over your compost pile intended for mums, roses and carnations. Add some fine bone to it.

FINISH planting rambler roses, wistarias, clematis and other deciduous climbers as soon as possible.

TRANSPLANT any hardy flowering perennials as soon as possible, if you wish some blooms the first season.

SEEDLINGS of Clerodendron fallax should have a warm house. For fall use, these are bright and serviceable.

BE sure that the roots of all trees and shrubs are moistened before planting. This will reduce your death roll materially.

PLANT your early asters under glass in a vacant bench, where carnations or other crops are on the wane. Give the soil a good addition of rotted manure first.

WITH many retail florists who try to keep a step ahead of competitors, pottery has largely taken the place of baskets and hampers in the making up of holiday plant arrangements.

THE Baby Rambler rose surely this Easter came into its own. It was shown in large quantities all over the country and had a splendid sale, whether in small plants or larger specimens.

WHEN a retail florist's business was taken over by a relative not long since, he owed wholesalers an aggregate of several thousands of dollars. Lax credits are a moral as well as an economic wrong.

EASTER without doubt marked another advance in the sale of flowering plants. In all the larger cities the supplies of plants were greater than they ever have been before, the stock was of better average quality, and the retailers pushed the plants instead of cut flowers so long as the supply lasted.

It is still rather early to risk bay trees in the open. Take advantage of wet days to trim off brown ends and be sure they are well supplied with water.

MAKE a first sowing of mignonette, bachelor's button, sweet sultan, annual larkspur and candytuft outdoors. A second sowing of sweet peas will be timely.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Moles in the Greenhouse.

Will some one kindly inform us how to get rid of ground or meadow moles?

For the last three months moles have been in one of our greenhouses. The damage they have done is something serious, especially in geraniums, which they gnaw off just above the soil and sometimes eat the part which is in the ground, for an inch downward, but usually they cut the plant off just even with the ground. They have destroyed as many as fifty to seventy-five 4-inch plants in one night. They seem to be particularly fond of the Jean Viaud geranium and Christmas cherries. Those we have in 5-inch pots and they cut them about four inches above the soil, or rather the more tender branches.

We have caught the moles in ordinary mouse traps, baiting the same with bread covered lightly with butter. We also have caught a few young ones with traps baited with cheese, which the older moles do not seem to care for. We have tried strychnine scattered thinly on bread covered with butter, some of which they ate.

The moles are a shade darker than a Maltese cat, with long, pointed nose, short legged and stub tailed.

At the present time they refuse to eat poisoned bread or food put on traps. They seem to be content in destroying plants of all descriptions.

AUGUSTUS CASPERS.

ORCHID COMMITTEE.

Horticultural Society of New York.

With a view to encouraging the cultivation and the study of orchids and the formation of orchid collections, a committee of the Horticultural Society of New York has been appointed for the purpose of forming an orchid section.

This action is the outcome of the recent gathering of a few orchid amateurs in New York, as it was the unanimous feeling of those who took the initiative that the times were not propitious for the forming of an independent society. The Horticultural Society of New York in forming this orchid section gives perfect autonomy to the section, which will be free to make its own rules and regulations for the exhibiting of orchids.

The first step is taken in connection with the forthcoming announcements of the May exhibition, to be held in the New York Botanical Garden May 13 and 14, when, besides four cash prizes, two for amateurs and two open to all, there will be offered one gold medal, three silver medals and three bronze medals, these medals to be awarded at the discretion of the orchid committee, which is composed as follows: C. Moore, Hackensack, N. J., chairman; J. E. Lager, J. A. Manda, G. V. Nash, J. W. M. Kitchen, H. A. Siebrecht, and E. H. Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J., secretary.

The Great Central Market.

The Easter trade was something enormous.

The quantity of flowers was much the greatest ever handled in this market in a similar period.

Prices were lower than in any recent Easter, but the volume of sales was so great that the money value of the Easter business was at least as great as last year, possibly even a little better, for several houses report good increases.

At the same time, more stock was left over than at any recent Easter.

The Easter trade made a bad start. The advance orders were neither so numerous nor so large as usual. Many transient buyers did not appear at all, and the regulars did not place orders for as great an amount of material. The city trade was not a factor in the market until the eleventh hour, with the result that when the actual Easter business opened, about Thursday, April 16, he was indeed an optimistic wholesaler who could see in the situation anything encouraging. But additions to orders were more numerous than in any previous year and the number of late telegraph and telephone orders was the greatest ever known in this market. Also, after the city retailers had sold enough plants to be sure they were not going to be stuck on them, they began to give attention to cut flowers and in the end consumed a good amount of stock, although probably less than last year. Great quantities of cut stock were left to be handled by the Greek stores, where few plants were offered.

While the aggregate business is cause for general satisfaction, there was one feature far from pleasing. There was an unusually large quantity of second grade goods. Many thousands of carnations were shipped in which had been allowed to hang on the plants for so long that they were useless to any first-class store. Also, there were short-stemmed lilies and many other flowers which could not be used by what is known as the legitimate trade. The result was that an enormous quantity of stock was jobbed off cheap, to those who consider price rather than quality in their buying. One wholesaler asserts that it is the belief that on Saturday 100,000 carnations were sold at $1 per hundred. Some even were sold lower than that. Lilies, violets and bulb stock all suffered in the clearing process, and the averages on these lines will not give joy to the growers.

The best selling item was roses. Beauties were much short of the demand and Richmond and Killarney also were comparatively scarce, many orders having to be cut. Pink roses cleaned up in good shape, but there was a surplus of Bride. Prices on roses were better maintained than on almost any other item.

The predictions as to lilies were fulfilled: there were enough good lilies to supply the demand for that grade and so many low grade lilies that everyone could be suited on price, which reduced the value of the best stock. While some lilies sold for 15 cents, others sold for 6 cents and there were some sales at

C. W. BENSON & CO., ALVIN, TEXAS

Mention The Review when you write.

5 cents. There were a few pots of lilies in nearly every icebox when Easter was over and Monday saw enough lilies in the market for quite a fair Easter business.

The receipts of carnations were something tremendous. Those growers who sent in good stock at the time wanted received what should be fairly satisfactory prices, all things considered, but taking the receipts in the aggregate, the average will probably be the lowest ever recorded at Easter. Considerable quantities of white failed to find any sale, even when offered at the buyer's own price.

Violets were received in larger quantities than at any previous Easter and prices ranged from 75 cents per hundred down to the vanishing point. The bulk of the receipts were sold at from 20 cents to 30 cents per hundred.

Sweet peas were a good item. If of fair quality they sold well, though not at fancy prices. There was so much stock in the market that bulbous material was neglected. White tulips suffered especially, and quite a number of daffodils were left.

The story of the retailers is almost a repetition of that told by the wholesalers. The business began late and ended with a tremendous rush. Most of the retailers had bought more heavily of plants than in preceding years and kept them to the front until well cleaned up. Many of the less pretentious stores were able to use many more cut flowers than in previous years, because of lower wholesale prices on their grade of stock, and in the aggregate all did a satisfactory business, in many cases larger than last year, although it was the general report that individual purchases were smaller. Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning extra delivery facilities were at a premium, practically every enclosed vehicle for hire in the town being on the street with some florist's sign on the sides. The profit to all the retailers was excellent, because of the cheaper prices at which they secured their supplies.

This week opened with the wholesale market heavily stocked and demand light.

Easter Plants.

The retailers stocked up with flowering plants more heavily than in any previous year. There was no special novelty in the plant line, but it was notable that the supply and variety of roses were much greater than heretofore. Lady Gay was generally considered the best of the lot. The Baby Rambler was the most numerous. Lilies were possibly as abundant as ever, but did not predominate in the displays, as they have in bygone seasons, when the variety of stock available was less great. Bulbous stock was not as abundant as in years when Easter has been earlier. Azaleas were plentiful, especially small ones.

April 14 was a summer day, the temperature in the shade being 75 degrees. It advanced the flowering stock as much as it had progressed in the entire week preceding, and everything was full blown. This added to the brightness of the displays, but added nothing to the keeping qualities of the stock. Naturally, the retailers, having bought their plants in advance, pushed the sale and generally made a fair clean-up, if somewhat at the expense of cut flower sales. There were, of course, some plants left over, but not more than usual.

Smyth's Easter Window.

Michigan avenue, south of Thirty-first street, is being repaved, and W. J. Smyth, whose store is on that corner, told a REVIEW reporter he was afraid the closing of the street would hurt his Easter trade: "They can come down this far, but everyone has to turn at this corner." But a swift-flying six-cylinder automobile did not turn quite far enough, on the evening of April 16, and went straight through the show window. The owner backed the machine out from among the Easter plant arrangements and started to make his escape, but a policeman took charge and booked him for operating an automobile while intoxicated, for fast driving and for disorderly conduct.

While Mr. Smyth's Easter showing was not as handsome as it otherwise would have been, it is safe to say it attracted just as much attention, and his Easter business was good.

Samuelson's Easter Window.

C. A. Samuelson is known for his attractive window displays, but eclipsed his best previous efforts for Easter. Pergolas are the fashion, so he built a pergola in his window. It was made of wood covered with felt, an excellent imitation of white marble. Clambering over the pergola were splendid specimens of the new Rambler roses. At one end Lady Gay was used, at the other Dorothy Perkins. There were specimens of Hiawatha, La Fiamma and Crimson Rambler.

At the center of the pergola was a marble bench and in front a lawn of live sphagnum. In front of the bench and in the lawn was an oval bed of Baby Rambler and White Baby Rambler, while apparently planted on the lawn were some fine specimens of Hiawatha. No other plant than the rose was used in the window.

Had one, admiring Samuelson's window, gone a few steps down the avenue, to Chase's, he then would have seen the Alpha and the Omega of the flower business.

Various Notes.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has placed an order with the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. for two carloads of glass for its 1908 addition.

Friday, April 24, is "clean-up" day. Mayor Busse has issued a proclamation urging all citizens to help clean up their premises that day.

N. J. Wietor says Easter was much better than he expected, but that it looks to him as though stock will be overabundant until replanting commences.

The A. L. Randall Co. lays claim to the one absolute novelty of the Easter season. It consisted of bunches of yellow chrysanthemums, grown by J. F. Klimmer, at Oak Park, and so far as reports go, the only chrysanthemums ever seen in this market in April. They handled more violets than at any other Easter.

At E. H. Hunt's they have been handling cut spikes of gladioli for many weeks and now the supply has become large. W. E. Lynch says it looks as though the gladiolus would shortly become an all the year around flower, just as the Easter lily has. Hunt's received some specially fine arbutus just in season for the Easter business.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has a grower whose special crop is "miniature" calla lilies. The first for the season came in just at Easter. Wienhoeber used these small callas in green stone handled baskets of appropriate size, with a bow of green ribbon on the handle, and found them good sellers at Easter. Kennicott's did a big business with irises April 18.

Ned Washburn was down from Madison, where he is completing his course this year in the agricultural college, to help out during the Easter rush at Bassett & Washburn's.

H. S. Morton, who has been located at 96 East Thirty-first street and doing a prosperous business, has acquired the store of the late Alfred Hildred at 3033 Indiana avenue and did a nice business there for Easter. He has a greenhouse establishment at Rockford, Ill., from which he gets considerable stock for the city stores.

Frank Oechslein had the largest stock of flowering plants in his history and sold them all for Easter. Prices were not quite so high as at some other Easters, but he thinks it a most successful season. He is not only master of the growing end, but also is an adept salesman and organizer. size of his establishment may be looked for.

The Fleischman stores, and especially the one on Jackson boulevard, showed confidence in their preparations for the Easter trade by making up much larger baskets and hampers than the other retailers provided. Fleischman showed dozens of big, expensive baskets of hydrangeas and azaleas and on one side of the store the plate glass mirrors were obscured by a heavily loaded plant stand like the base-ball bleachers.

Some of Peter Reinberg's friends gave him a reception April 21, in honor of his re-election to the council. There was a republican landslide this year and Mr. Reinberg's re-election, a democrat in a republican ward, is considered one of the features of the campaign. Mr. Reinberg has stated that he will not be a candidate for a fourth term, but his friends insist that it is much too early for him to make such an announcement.

Bassett & Washburn say their Easter crop of Beauties was the greatest in the history of the establishment. The sales of Beauties were over $600 greater than for Easter last year, when prices were higher. They also had more carnations than a year ago, but sales were $28 less than then.

The George Wittbold Co. is sending candidum lilies to J. J. Kruchten, but Mr. Kruchten says that with longiflorums so abundant the buyers are not interested in candidums except at very cheap prices.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the violet season is by no means over and that they will surely have them for Memorial day. They had violets in June last year.

At the store of the E. F. Winterson Co. it does not look as though Easter were over, for the business in the seed department, where plants and garden tools also are handled, is now on in earnest.

H. C. Blewitt, at Des Plaines, is repeating his last year's success with sweet peas. April 20 he had 7,000, all on stems a foot long.

C. Frauenfelder had an enormous Easter business. He this season had the advantage of the old Garfield Park establishment, where he is growing plants, but the sales were all made at the store, a block east. He handled possibly the greatest quantity of cut stock of any of the so-called legitimate retailers.

Miss Ida Evert, who does the selling for Matt Evert and John Evert in the Flower Growers' market, carries one arm in a sling as a result of a fall while roller skating. Her wrist is broken.

The Drexel Floral Co. store was in charge of a temporary receiver during the Easter rush.

E. C. Amling received the first bunch of peonies of the season, from Carbondale, April 18, several days earlier than last year.

Weiland & Risch had some exceptionally good violets from Rhinebeck for Easter.

At J. A. Budlong's, city business kept them at the store until 6 o'clock in the evening Sunday.

C. W. McKellar says he has advices that the Texas jasmine crop will be ready for market within the next few days.

Chas. Balluff says the Easter business of the Eaton Flower Shop was much better than last year; Friday's sales were exactly double.

PITTSBURG.

Easter Trade.

The wholesale houses report a good trade all of last week, until Saturday, when it rained all day, the rain beginning at 7 a. m. and never ceasing until after dark. This undoubtedly hurt business, especially among the street and market people, who use much of the cheaper stock, and as a result there was much bulb stock left on hand. Lilies, however, cleaned up at a good price. There was plenty of everything and, with a few exceptions, there was no salted stock on the market.

The retail men deserve great credit for their nerve, for, in the face of times not any too good, they fixed up their shops more handsomely, if possible, than ever before, and their show of blooming plants was larger and finer than anything ever seen in this city. Notwithstanding the rain, they have all done a good business, but the trade was more for reasonably priced plants and today many fine azaleas can be bought cheaply. A peculiar thing about this year was the fact that the cheaper trade was above the average. Those who usually buy the high priced plants were not in evidence and we do not think they were all at Atlantic City, either.

In the east end, Randolph & McClements, Zieger Co. and H. L. Blind & Bros., have each a greenhouse beside their stores, giving a large front of glass, and they filled these with blooming plants, arranged in baskets and jardinières. The result was, they had shows that were worth traveling miles to see, and if once one stepped inside there were such treats that it was only necessary to get customers in to get their money. At one time to call this business art was a joke, but it is not so now, as every arrangement showed an artistic ability that satisfied the most exacting critics.

In the downtown section, Mrs. E. A. Williams had her shop redecorated, adding a beautiful art glass window on the side, beneath which was the cozy corner, where the customer might sit to write a card or rest. This, with possibly as fine an arrangement of plants as one ever saw, certainly entitled this lady to the credit of having the most artistic shop in this city, if not in the county. There were no cheap plants or small pots offered for sale. Everything, including lilies, was arranged in artistic baskets, which would probably range in price from $5 to $35 each. Of course, she may have lost some business from those hunting for a hyacinth or a single lily pot, but if she did, she did not lose any money, for her shop had nothing to spoil the effect of the more beautiful arrangements, nor was she bothered with small deliveries. This store, like all the others, made the whole show of plants, but made most of the money on cut flowers.

A. W. Smith had his large store filled, as a customer remarked, with everything beautiful that grows. And, as an evidence of whether it pays to get ready for a day with the idea that there will be business, it is only necessary to say that his store was crowded from morning until midnight. Besides their regular large force, there were extra salesmen, and sixty-three messenger boys were kept busy from seven a. m. Saturday until noon Sunday, delivering. This large force, with their wagons, had all they could do, and when asked what kind of an Easter trade they had, they said, "As big as last year, which was the banner year, only we had to sell so much more stock to do it, as prices were much lower."

A. M. Murdoch had his usual Easter display, showing his confidence in his trade and not without some cause, as he, like the others, was busy until noon on Sunday.

H. L. Blind & Bros. had their downtown store filled with choice azaleas, hydrangeas, ramblers, etc., until it was a bower of beauty.

Breitenstein & Flemm got the glass in their shop Monday and the carpenters and bricklayers were still building on the new front from the second story up. They were not prepared for Easter, but, with their usual energy, they cleaned up, and with the assistance of some tall plants, to hide the unsightly things, made a wonderfully good appearance. They report that they found all the old customers right there with their orders. They also received many congratulations on their success in securing such a good location. While they have only been in the location one week, they already have the evidence that it is in the right place to catch the shopping public.

But the poor plantmen in the market and the men who do business on the street suffered, as people would not stop in the rain to buy, much less try to carry dripping wet plants, and Saturday night one could buy plants in the market for less than half the wholesale price.

In the Allegheny market the stands were beautiful and, as they display everything they have for sale, their show was even more gorgeous than at many of the stores.

E. C. Ludwig, who has the only store on that side of the river, was right up to date with both his display of plants and cut flowers.

There was a time when bulbous stock was considered the proper thing for Easter, but that time is past, as the price at which such stock must be sold to move it, even at Easter, should convince everybody that there is nothing in it. And then the wholesale houses are always glutted with greens of all kinds and there is never the same demand for it on a holiday as there is at other times.

Charles Koenig supplied the Pittsburgh

Cut Flower Co. with the finest lilies which came into this market and it just kept one wagon busy for three days hauling them in.

The Easter shows at Schenley park and Allegheny park were well patronized on Sunday. It required a force of police at both places to keep the people in line.

Hoo-Hoo.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Jupiter Pluvius managed to lay a wet blanket on the closing hours of the Easter rush. Up to Saturday afternoon the weather was perfect. Then came the rain and with it went the promise of a complete distribution of all the plants and cut flowers in the city. Rain Sunday morning also interfered with the fashionable Fifth avenue parade, which has usually absorbed all the cut flowers remaining. "Better than Christmas" was freely acknowledged by all, and it was a better Easter than the times had led the trade to expect and, all things considered, we should not complain.

With the exception of lilies and some of the tulips, narcissi and hyacinths, cut stock, everything sold at some price. Cut lilies fell to 5 cents late Saturday. Monday they were offered at 4 cents and even 3 cents, one of the greatest surprises of the year. What looked like a shortage three weeks ago, turned into a flood. Orchids took the cake. Not one was to be had for love or money when the sun went down. I heard a buyer from Fifth avenue offer any price demanded for 100 cattleyas at 11 o'clock Saturday night. There was a good supply in the market early in the week, of a dozen fine varieties.

Beauties found their top at 40 cents, where large quantities were sold. A few touched 50 cents in dozen lots, selected. This week they have fallen to 25 cents. Brides and Maids fluctuated between 8 cents and 12 cents for the best, and so on down to 2 cents, and they were all sold except the pickled stuff, and I never saw so little of it. Richmonds sold well, as did Brunner, Chatenay, Killarney and Uncle John. Any novelty in roses went on sight.

Carnations were too heavy to lift far, even for a holiday. I saw nothing sell over 5 cents, and 4 cents was top for the general run of novelties; 2 cents was the bottom and many fine ones were cleaned out at that, when the bells announced Easter morning.

Gardenias were not too abundant and held well. Valley did not go above 3 cents and little of it got there. But the despised violet once more lifted up its head; 75 cents was easy. Some extra fine bunches sold at $1. They were mighty scarce before Sunday morning. Saltford sold a quarter of a million. Several other violet handlers claim as good a violet Easter as they can remember. Hard to say how many reached the New York market, but over two millions were shipped somewhere from Rhinebeck Friday and Saturday, and I think we got the bulk of them. At any rate it was a pleasant ending to the violet season, and so we speed the parting guest, hoping another fall, with its big grain crops and new president, may mean prosperity for all and the violet growers among them.

The less said of callas, smilax, mignonette, sweet peas, freesias, tulips and hyacinths, perhaps the better. Little wonder the growers of bulb stock are blue. This has been a strenuous season. Next year Easter arrives a week earlier. Let us hope it may be a better one for all concerned.

The retailers bought carefully. The plants were not as large as usual, the mixed boxes not so elaborate. Everything put up at reasonable prices sold, except the lilies. The majority seemed satisfied and the aggregate of sales was tremendous. Plants were everywhere. Few homes on Sunday were without them.

The prominent retailers have many weddings booked and not a plant remaining unsold will be lost. Decorations will take them all. Gayety is already rampant. Dinners and weddings are too numerous to mention. Every retailer seems to have his order book full of them. The plant growers may well shake hands with themselves. Every good plant they had was sold. If they have any left, the auctions will soon absorb them. These auctions at Cleary's, Elliott's and by the Fruit Auction Co. are growing in interest every day. John Cleary, who presides at the sales of the Fruit Auction Co., sails for Europe July 7 to select stock for the fall importations and sales, so much has the company been impressed by its venture already. Thousands of dollars' worth are sold in a few hours, and the only worry now is the supply.

Various Notes.

At Elliott's, on Good Friday, nearly 200 buyers were in attendance. Prices were excellent. To prove how fast the public is becoming suburbanized, I did not see two familiar faces in that assemblage, not counting, of course, the illuminated countenance of the auctioneer.

Mrs. Warendorff, of the Ansonia, the mother of florists, has been ill for several weeks, but her indomitable will reasserted itself and she got well for the Easter trade. It was immense in her beautiful store, and in all the artistic centers of Warendorff skill, especially in Herman's, on Broadway, there was the usual result, and nothing remained that was not useful at their two big weddings Tuesday.

Ambrose Cleary observed the custom of years and did not sell on Good Friday. But every Tuesday and Friday he will be heard for the coming months with no uncertain sound.

David Clarke's Sons never had a greater Easter—more work, more customers, larger aggregate than ever before. Their big store on upper Broadway was altogether too small for their trade and their annex proved a friend in need. So it was with all the leading stores. The storage branch of each was a necessity and few there were without one.

Up on Madison avenue, Myer and Duer made grand displays, and on Twenty-eighth street, Donohoe and Nugent had wonderful exhibits that were awful wrecks Saturday evening.

The veteran, Alex. McConnell, had the Easter of his life. The great store was a dismantled sight Sunday morning, and for several nights packing and shipping were in constant progress. The combination baskets here were especially handsome. Much of the plant stock came from his own greenhouses at New Rochelle.

It would take pages to list all the retail artists of the metropolis. There is nothing like them anywhere in the world.

Among the plant importations arriving are many cases for Cleary's Horticultural Co., H. Frank Darrow, August Rolker & Sons, William Elliott & Sons, F. R. Pierson Co., Thorburn, Wadley & Smythe and McHutchinson & Co.

Paul Mattly, of Floral Park, Camp Spring, Va., seven miles out of Washington, D. C., is in the city. His peony and other stock is handled by Hicks & Co.

The American Evergreen Co. is receiving large shipments of lilac from the south.

John A. Foley, manager for Lecakes & Co., was rejoicing Good Friday because of the arrival of the stork with a daughter.

At M. A. Bowe's a great Easter trade was evident and the familiar face of Arthur Merritt, as lieutenant, added many a customer to Mr. Bowe's clientele.

Up at Van Praag's store on West Fortieth street, Mr. Rosseau, long with Fleischman, has transferred his allegiance to the new venture.

Samuel A. Woodrow had a vigorous day and night Easter, shipping large numbers of plants out of town, in addition to an extensive local trade.

All the supply men acknowledge a good Easter, with many shipments and a special call for baskets of new design.

James Hart is busy with a string of hotels he decorates and cares for that will keep him hustling through the season.

Rosens is handling large shipments of wild smilax.

Mr. Baldwin, of Carrillo & Baldwin, Secaucus, says the orchid has held its own all through the season and that his firm is importing more heavily than ever.

A. J. Guttman has taken a long lease of the big store at 34 West Twenty-eighth street, which, with the basement, gives about 5,000 square feet of space, ample room for more progress of the kind which has marked Mr. Guttman's career as a wholesale distributor of cut flowers.

George Saltford, now at 46 West Twenty-ninth street, will move to 43 West Twenty-eighth street June 1, the fine store now occupied by A. J. Guttman, next door to Millang Bros., and Walter Sheridan, and just across the way from McManus and Traendly & Schenck's and Ford Bros. This is centralization with a vengeance.

CLEVELAND.

Easter Trade.

Reports from the different florists show that the majority were more than pleased with their Easter trade, having done about the same volume of business as last year, which is considered very good, taking into consideration the bad weather, which, no doubt, meant a decrease in sales of at least twenty per cent, as it rained steadily most of the day. The retail stores were all a beautiful sight on Friday and Saturday, having the finest of azaleas, ramblers, genistas and other plants, decorated in fancy novelties.

The call for good cut flowers was heavy and none had to go begging. The only stock that was hard to move was in the poorer grades and pickled stock, of which a quantity found its way to the faker. Violets had the lead over all other stock, there being a shortage of this flower at all times. Lilies were also in great demand, most of the dealers selling out all they had early. Carnations and roses both sold well, there being a strong call for the better grades.

Market House Show.

The market house display of plants was as fine as in preceding years, if not finer, there being one of the best lots of potted plants ever seen in this locality. First prize was awarded to Richard Gamble, Burton avenue, for the finest display of assorted plants. S. N. Pentecost received second prize, having a beautiful lot of hydrangeas, which sold well. Third prize was awarded to Fred Burger, who showed a fine lot of rose plants, as well as a large collection of other stock.

Among the others some excellent stock was seen. Casper Aull had a lot of azaleas that showed the best of culture. John Mullenkopf had an extra fine lot of potted lilies. Max Naumann had a large quantity of ramblers and azaleas which were second to none. L. Utzinger had quantities of bulb stock in pots and pans, which were in good demand. A. Schmidt had, as usual, a beautiful display, consisting of large ramblers, azaleas and quantities of bulb stock. A large string orchestra rendered popular melodies throughout the afternoon.

Various Notes.

C. A. Bramley, of Superior avenue, reports having done double the business of last year, handling quantities of fine potted roses and lilies.

Smith & Feters report trade as fine—as good as last year, if not better.

C. M. Wagner had a heavy call for large decorative plants and was well satisfied with Easter trade in his new location.

W. F. Hanna, of Woodland Hills, reports a good general trade, as well as large funeral orders, at Easter time.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. handled 50,000 violets for Easter trade.

The J. M. Gasser Co. showed a fine collection of potted plants, the ramblers and azaleas being of the best.

Peter Nichols, of the Arcade, had one of the best days ever, doing an enormous business.

Knoble Bros. say that Easter trade was equal to that of last year.

F. W. Griffin found it impossible to get enough violets to supply his customers, the demand being so heavy for this flower.

Westman & Getz report trade very good. They sold a great quantity of pink ramblers, of which they had a fine stock.

C. B. Wilhelmy had nine churches to decorate for Easter services, making use of his entire stock of decorative plants.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The volume of the Easter plant business was enormous. As foreshadowed in this column last week, large numbers of the poorer and more fully developed plants were sold cheaply on Friday and Saturday, and many were not sold at all. Despite this fact, bringing disappointment to many growers and dealers, the general feeling is that the business was satisfactory. It is not possible at this date to state exactly how large were the transactions in plants, but it is safe to say that they fully equaled that of any previous year. The department stores handled great quantities of lilies, buying usually at 10 cents for each bud and flower, and selling at 15 cents. But it is a question in my mind whether these department store sales of lilies are of real benefit to the florist. While the benefit is unquestioned in other varieties of plants, with lilies there is so much bruising and ignorant handling incidental to department store sales that the purchasers are rarely satisfied. It was noticeable that the city buyers who were most enthusiastic over their plants Easter were those who bought most cautiously, aiming to avoid waste, and never plunging on any favorite variety. Shaeffer, whose sales on the east side of the city hall have been for years famous, bought heavily, anticipating a big outdoor Easter, owing to the lateness of the season. But his calculations went wrong; the days preceding Sunday were most unsuitable for blooming stock in the open, be it ever so well hardened, and by Saturday afternoon the plants had a careworn, bedraggled appearance. Shaeffer's loss was estimated at $400.

The volume of business in cut flowers at Easter was large, but not so large as last year, when it will be remembered that an extraordinarily hot spell preceded the church festival. This season conditions were exactly the reverse. The cool weather and bright sunshine retarded the crop, and improved the quality to an extent that was not anticipated. The result was that the buyers, especially the out-of-town buyers at a distance, were generally well satisfied with their purchases. The general feeling was that the shipping business was excellent, the demand being best on Thursday and early on Friday, while the local business on Friday and especially on Saturday was hardly up to expectations.

Violets sold better than ever. This had not been foreseen. The quantity of locally grown singles from the field and doubles from the greenhouses, though larger than seemed possible, owing to the cool nights, cut no figure at all in the market as compared with the immense quantity of Hudson river violets that found their way here. These brought $10 a thousand, and in some places $12.50, and were eagerly taken by buyers great and small. Some wholesalers estimated that they could have used many more, but others had all they needed, and a few had some left.

Sweet peas came next to violets in popularity. The lavender, being scarcer than any other color, was most in demand, but there were more pink sold than lavender and white combined, and pink were considered scarce. The finest sweet peas brought $1.50 a hundred, good ordinaries from 60 cents to $1.

Beauties were plentiful, and generally of fine quality. They sold all the way from $4 to $6 a hundred, according to the time of sale, condition of stock, and quantity desired. Pink roses were also in good demand. Bridesmaid, when well colored, was popular, but the color could not always be depended on. Killarney was not so plentiful as Bridesmaid, and sold well. Valley had its innings at last. An immense quantity was sold at prices ranging from $2 to $4 per hundred.

Fancy carnations were popular, $4 to $6 per hundred being realized for the best. In the ordinary grades there was no special demand for white, colors being preferred. It can hardly be said that the lower grades of carnations sold well. White roses were overdone, the large crop of Kaiserin added to Bride being more than the market could take at good prices, these varieties selling $2 to $3 per hundred below Maid.

Bulbous flowers were in good supply. Daffodils sold fairly well at $2 to $3 per hundred, Emperor and Princeps being prominent. Winter tulips were overdone.

Gardenias were of inferior quality but much in demand; price, $2 to $4 per dozen. Cattleyas were scarce at 60 cents to 75 cents each. Daisies were not in demand. As is usual at a holiday, greens were overdone. Asparagus Sprengeri was the worst sufferer. Smilax and plumosus left over will probably be sold this week. Wild smilax was popular, many cases being used.

Last, and saddest to record, cut lilies were vastly overdone. Never has their quality been finer; never have they been offered at a more reasonable figure; never have there been more left after Easter. The prevailing price on cut lilies after Friday afternoon was 10 cents, but many fine lots were sold earlier in the week at 12 cents and 15 cents.

A Retailer's View of Easter.

Charles Henry Fox, proprietor of the Sign of the Rose, gave REVIEW readers his ideas regarding Easter. "We had a satisfactory Easter," Mr. Fox said, "our loss being reduced to a minimum. We studied carefully beforehand what we were likely to require. Our calculations proved correct, and we have had a splendid Easter. Our sales on violets were large. We put them up attractively, and people were pleased. The demand for plants has fallen off. We attribute this to the fact that so many people are going to Atlantic City, or will go out of town soon. They don't want to be encumbered with plants in their moving. We encouraged the demand for cut flowers, because anybody can sell an azalea, a hydrangea, or a spiraea, but it requires artistic taste to put up cut flowers in a way that will appeal to the fastidious buyer and make the floral offering irresistible. People tell us we are the highest priced flower store in Philadelphia."

Mr. Mills' Ambition.

Mark B. Mills has devoted his business life to the growing, selling and packing of plants and flowers. Mr. Mills is one of those men whose best effort is put forth on his lifework. He is not satisfied, however, with simply doing these things well and receiving a fair recompense for his work, but wishes that the world in general and the florists in particular shall be benefited by the fact that he, Mark B. Mills, has lived and worked. The special field of operation that opened before Mr. Mills was securing proper consideration from the carrying companies. It seemed a shame that plants that had taken years to grow should be ruthlessly smashed by a careless express messenger, who knew it was easier to drop a box from his wagon to the sidewalk than to lift it, but who cared nothing for the havoc caused to the contents of that box by the fall, until Mark B. Mills made him care.

The thing came about in this way. Mr. Mills invited the heads of the express companies to give him a hearing; such an invitation courteously given by a customer could not, of course, be declined. He then explained to them the vast proportions that the plant and cut flower business has assumed, the large amount of money paid annually for express on plants and cut flowers, and then asked them point-blank whether such good customers ought not to be well treated. He explained to them the trouble; boxes were ruined by careless handling, boxes that were marked perishable and the welfare of whose contents depended on that caution. When proof of careless handling was asked it was at once given and when the express companies gently demurred and asked whether it might not be the packing that was at fault, Mr. Mills triumphantly showed them his system of packing, which is as perfect as it can well be made. The result of all this is that the express companies today give plants and flowers their especial care. When they are at fault, they find out just where the blame lies and the individual who has erred is obliged to pay the loss. For this state of affairs the florists all over the country owe Mr. Mills and others hearty thanks for their successful effort in advancing the common interest.

of than before. Bulbous stock in pans sold remarkably well. Many fine spiræas were to be seen and sold well.

Violets were in big demand, the weather being warm and favorable for wearing them. Most of the stores ran short of violets Saturday and were not able to obtain any more until too late to be of any use. Sweet peas were also used in large quantities and these were hardly equal to the demand.

American Beauties were in about the same class as the more expensive plants and did not sell as readily as some of the florists wished, although many were sold. Roses sold well. Carnations and the general run of spring stuff were sold in exceedingly large quantities.

The churches went into lilies deeper than ever this year and the few fortunate ones who get the cream of this business disposed of many lilies and spiræas at good prices. Renting palms to the churches is also getting to be a larger feature every year.

With Lent a thing of the past, the outlook is good for spring business and the fellow who gets out and hustles is going to get it.

Various Notes.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange is well pleased with its Easter business and business in general.

Sullivan rented an empty store on Woodward avenue and used it to dispose of a lot of surplus stock. He had strangers running the place and in no way did he use his name. The stock was sold for cash only and nothing was delivered. Mr. Sullivan says that the prices realized by no means paid for growing the stock and only in case of a surplus would he carry out the plan again. A large wedding in Flint, Mich., will use up all the lilies left over from Easter.

The Bomb Floral Co. reports a satisfactory Easter business; also a big run on funeral work during the rush.

Breitmeyer's, of course, had about all the business that could be handled. Aside from some exceptionally large plants and expensive baskets, they cleaned up pretty well.

Schroeter, as usual, did a big plant and cut flower business. Not a decent lily was left. This firm has every order delivered signed for and an actual count of these shows between 1,200 and 1,300 deliveries made Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Schroeter's receipts for lilies sold at wholesale amount to a nice little sum.

W. B. Brown says business was splendid. Being on the main street, naturally he sells many violets and cut flowers. He also does a nice plant business.

Taepke's are more than satisfied with

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-sixth annual convention at Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit, Mich., June 23 to 25, 1908.

W. ATLEE BURPEE sailed for Europe April 22.

TRADE in all lines of the seed business is reported brisk.

THE counter man in the seed line is having his troubles at present.

D. I. BUSHNELL, St. Louis, has gone to Europe, expecting to be absent four months.

THE bean growers report fairly smooth sailing in securing acreages for next year's crop.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin on "Cowpeas" that will interest seedsmen.

SOME of the market gardener seedsmen report trade better this year than last, by fifty per cent so far.

VISITED CHICAGO: Mel. L. Webster, Independence, Ia.; Robert Livingston, Livingston Seed Co., Columbus.

FILL-IN trade with the jobbers continues large. All shortages on the general orders are more than being made up for.

BEAN sales are being forced by low priced surplus lists. Some of the standard varieties of peas are being offered, also, at fairly reasonable prices.

AN optimistic Chicago seedsman says that in a few years he expects to see Chicago as much of a center for onion seed growing as it now is for onion sets.

ONE seedsman says that if the Mann pure seed bill becomes a law in its present form, he will feel compelled to go into politics—to work up a pull so he will not be the one made an example of.

SEEDING for onion sets is well under way at Chicago. The growers report that seeding conditions were never better. A full quantity of seed is going in, and the reported lack of set seed seems to have been somewhat overdrawn, as each of the larger growers has found seeds enough for the usual acreage. The smaller growers are not so well off.

SEEDS of the Globe varieties of onion have been selling better during the last week. Some of the marsh-land growers who expected to cut down their acreages have thought better of it. The fact, however, that much seed of both the Yellow and Red Globe was grown last year by the average planter cut the regular seedsmen out of a great many of the onion seed sales.

THE end of the season finds the onion set still high in price. Reds are practically out of the market. Yellows and whites are still to be had. There has been no special boom in sets; the call has been steady throughout the month. Last spring, and for several years back, the abnormal weather caused a boom in sets one day and a slump the next. This condition has not prevailed this year and the trade in sets for this season has been more satisfactory.

THOMAS COX and William Cox, formerly of the Cox Seed Co., are now in the investment business in San Francisco.

THE most unmistakable catalogue cover of the season, once seen, is that in bright colors on the "Everything for the Lawn" book of Peter Henderson & Co., New York.

THE wholesale seedsmen have had a good season. The orders now coming in are for small lots to replenish depleted stocks and they find the wholesalers, as a rule, also sold out.

If congress gives consideration to the president's program, and to the appropriation bills, it may not after all get around to the pure seed bill at this session, for adjournment is expected by May 15.

THE seed business of Robert Sydenham, Birmingham, which has made some effort to get the private gardener trade on this side of the Atlantic, has been turned into a private limited liability company, with $75,000 capital.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society, London, England, Prof. G. Henslow, V. M. H., gave an interesting lecture on the origin of the cultivated cabbage. He traced the history of the cabbage from the time of Cato, 200 B. C., to the present day, and, with the aid of lantern slides, showed the various changes that the cabbage has undergone during the past twenty centuries.

pure seed bill, which its lawyer-author states is designed to prevent the entry into this country and the carrying in commerce of impure and adulterated seeds.

There was a general contention that low grade importations and certain other abuses which had developed in trade were chargeable to the dealers who do not handle seeds as a regular business and that a federal law, applicable to the legitimate and reputable seed business of the country, was not needed.

It also was argued that technical characteristics of the seed business render it impossible for any seedsman, however well intentioned, to observe all the requirements of the bill in its present form and that its passage would result in incalculable injury to a class of reputable, conscientious business men of large interests.

It was maintained that the recognized class of seedsmen control at no period of their growth the crops of seeds which reach them from all parts of the world. The seedsmen also have no control of the product after it leaves their hands and it is fundamentally wrong to require of any man that he assume full responsibility where he has not full control.

CHANGE IN TASTE FOR ONIONS.

An employee of a New York seed house who sends a trade letter to an English horticultural paper, says: "I will mention here a fact in connection with onion seed sales the present season that has not only caused much comment among the seed trade, but also a radical shifting, apparently, of the onion seed demand. All varieties of yellow seed have, as compared with the sales of the red and white sorts, sold slowly; the demand has been almost exclusively for small lots. This applies particularly to the sales in those states outside of New England, for so largely has the yellow onion always been planted in Massachusetts and vicinity, that little, if any, change in the demand has there been noted; but, as above stated, in other sections of the country a radical changing to the planting almost entirely of red and white varieties would seem to be taking place."

HOLLAND BULBS.

Continued cool and wet weather marked the month of March and caused the bulb fields in Holland to be quite as backward as they were last year. For as far as can be ascertained, none of the bulbs have suffered from the effects of the severe winter, and, with the exception of gladioli of the autumn planting, which are nearly all frozen, the crops are generally looking fine. Of the gladioli for spring planting it is quite remarkable that not a single bulb is at

MARYLAND TOMATO PACK.

Word comes from Baltimore that with the packers "the buying of tomatoes for future delivery was larger during this week than at any time since the first of the year, but the total volume of the sales is far behind the sales up to the same date last year. Usually, by this time the canners have contracted with the growers for the coming crop, and all the details have been worked out. Not so this year. The small buying of futures causes the canners to hold off the growers, and the latter must soon decide whether to grow tomatoes this year, or put in other crops that are more certain to show them satisfactory returns. At

Mrs. Wm. H. Cutbush. A grand acquisition to the Baby Rambler class. Color intense crimson, and exceptionally free-flowing. 25c each; $1.00 for 5; $18.00 per 100.

HYBRID TEA, or EVERBLOOMING ROSES

Hybrid Tea, or Everblooming Roses, are becoming more popular every year. As hardy as the perpetuals, with slight protection in winter, they give a wealth of bloom all through the summer months and late in the fall till frost checks them.

The Grand New Rose Lyon. Originated by the raiser of Etoile de France. Perpetual flowering. Vigorous grower. The blooms are very large with broad petals, full and globular in form; shrimp-pink at the ends of the petals, center coral-red or salmon-pink shaded with chrome-yellow. Very fragrant. $1.25 each; $6.00 for bundle of 5; $12.00 for 10.

The Killarney Rose. Strong, 2-year-old field-grown stock, 25c each; $1.00 for bundle of 5; $18 per 100.

Maman Cochet Roses. The best of all Roses for summer flowering and cutting.

Pink—Color a clear, rich pink changing to silvery rose; very double and fragrant.

White—A sport from the above, with all its characteristics; color a beautiful snow-white, at times tinted with the faintest suggestion of blush, the same as is often found in the Bride. 25c each; 75c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100.

Rose, Etoile de France. Superb, crimson-red velvet, the center of the bloom vivid cerise-red. The flowers are very fragrant and last very long. The Queen of the Everblooming Red Roses. The most free-blooming and vigorous Red Rose ever introduced. Strong, 2-year-old plants, field-grown, 25c each; $1.00 for bundle of 5; $18.00 per 100.

Gruss an Teplitz. No Rose in commerce can compare with Gruss an Teplitz as a bedder. It is a perfect sheet of richest crimson-scarlet all summer. A strong, vigorous grower. Hardy. 20c each; $1.50 for 10; $12.00 for 100.

American Beauty, 20c each; 75c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100.

New Climbing Rose, CLIMBING FRAU KARL DRUSCHKI

This is a climbing sport from the well known snow-white variety, Frau Karl Druschki, and should become very popular. Good, strong plants are offered as follows: 50c each; $2.50 for 5.

RAMBLER ROSES

Dorothy Perkins. Resembles the Crimson Rambler, except in color, which is a lovely shell-pink. 15c ea; 65c for 5; $12.00 per 100.

Crimson Rambler Rose. American-grown. We can supply extra-strong, 2-year-old plants, grown on their own roots, at the following prices: 3 to 4 ft., 15c each; 65c for bundle of 5; $12.00 per 100; 4 to 5 ft. long, 20c each; $1.00 for 5; $15.00 per 100; 4 to 6 ft. long, 25c each; $1.15 for 5; $18.00 per 100.

HARDY JAPANESE LILIES

For outdoor planting, or growing in Pots for Summer Flowering

Lilium Auratum—(Golden-Rayed Lily of Japan). Monstrous pure white flowers, thickly studded with crimson spots, each petal marked with a wide gold band. A good forcer and excellent for outdoor effect, being perfectly hardy. 8 to 9-inch, 225 in a case, 80c per doz., $5.00 per 100, $45.00 per 1000. 9 to 11-inch, 125 in a case, $1.00 per doz., $8.50 per 100, $80.00 per 1000.

LILIUM SPECIOSUM

Lilium speciosum album. Pure white; a grand variety. 8 to 9-inch bulbs, 225 in a case, $1.00 per doz., $7.50 per 100, $70.00 per 1000.

1000. 9 to 11-inch bulbs, 125 in a case, $1.75 per doz., $12.50 per 100, $120 per 1000.

Lilium speciosum Melpomene. Very rich crimson, 8 to 9-inch bulbs, 225 in a case, 75c per doz., $6.00 per 100, $55.00 per 1000. 9 to 11-inch bulbs, 125 in a case, $1.25 per doz., $9.00 per 100, $85.00 per 1000.

Lilium speciosum rubrum. White ground, spotted rose on each petal; very handsome. 8 to 9-inch bulbs, 225 in a case, 75c per doz., $5.75 per 100, $55.00 per 1000. 9 to 11-inch bulbs, 125 in a case, $1.25 per doz., $8.50 per 100, $80.00 per 1000.

Vegetable Forcing.

MANURE AS A SUMMER MULCH.

In experiments made by G. E. Stone, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, it was found that the practice common among those engaged in forcing vegetables under glass, of allowing the soil of beds to become dry during that portion of the season when the houses are not in use, has an injurious effect on the growth of lettuce by increasing the activity of the "drop" fungus in the soil and the extent of infection in the succeeding crop of lettuce. Other injurious effects were also observed which were "manifested in a stunted growth and abnormally colored and worthless crop." Doctor Stone therefore recommends that the soil of houses used for forcing lettuce should never be allowed to become too dry in summer, and explains that "if such drying occurs, the soil can be entirely renovated by applying hot water or steam to it."

The Ohio Experiment Station reports experiments, begun three years ago, to determine "what effect the use of strawy manure would have on the soil when used as a mulch during that part of the summer when crops are not growing in the greenhouses," which gave results bearing upon the question of the advantage of keeping greenhouse soils moist in summer.

The manure was applied as soon as the tomato and cucumber vines were removed from the houses, or about the first of August. It was put on to a depth of from five to six inches and spread evenly over the entire surface of the beds. As soon as it was on, water was applied in the form of a spray until the manure and soil were thoroughly wet.

The object of this wetting was, first, to leach the fertility of the manure into the soil, and, second, to wet the soil sufficiently so that with the strawy mulch it would remain moist for several days. The operation of watering was repeated as often as needed; two or three times a week in bright weather.

When it came time to plant the lettuce, about the middle of September, the coarse part of the manure was removed from the beds and carried outside. The finer portion of the manure was worked into the soil at the time of spading.

It was noticeable that the soil which had been treated with the mulch was in excellent mechanical condition when it was worked up for the first crop. There were no lumps, as there often are in soil which has been allowed to bake in the sun for weeks at a time. It was also darker in color than unmulched soil. The lettuce plants which were planted in this soil started off nicely and grew rapidly and satisfactorily in every respect. No further application of manure or fertilizer of any kind was made for the second and third crops of lettuce. The growth of these crops was very satisfactory, as was that of the first crop.

The method gave such favorable results at the station that a practical grower of forcing-house vegetables was induced to try it. Taking the results of the station tests for the two seasons, together with the results secured by the practical grower for the same length of time, and gleaning what information it has been possible to obtain from various sources, the station does not hesitate to recommend this treatment for soils which are to be used for vegetable forcing. It must be borne in mind, however, that no half-way or slipshod methods of using the mulch will give satisfactory results. There should be sufficient fertility in the manure to furnish enough plant food, when leached into the soil, to supply the three crops of lettuce. The quantity of manure must be sufficient, also. At least five or six inches should be applied. A considerable quantity of coarse material in the manure, such as straw, corn stover, etc., is an advantage. Fresh manure has been used at the station each time, and, "while we have had no chance to see the effect of the use of the well-rotted manure, we are satisfied with fresh manure, as we know that it will give good results."

Where it is the practice to mulch the cucumber or tomato crop, the manure used for that purpose can be left on and more added, provided the cucumbers or tomatoes have been free from disease. In case these crops have been diseased, it would be advisable to remove the mulch used on them and apply new. Frequent sprinkling of the manure on the beds is very essential.

When it comes time to put in the first crop, if the soil is in need of humus, the entire mulch may be spaded into the soil, but most greenhouse soils do not need the addition of so much coarse material. Where the soil is fairly well supplied with humus, the coarser part should be taken off and removed from the houses and the finer portion worked into the soil.

The fact that the greenhouses in which the mulch was used were free from lettuce disease "would lead us to expect beneficial rather than detrimental results
